HARDING TELLS OF HELP GIVEN U.S. FARMERS

Depression Over, He Informs Kansas.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Hutchinson, Kas., June 23.—[Special.]—President Harding today came into the waving wheat fields of Kansas to tell the farmers of the country what the government at Washington had done to rescue American agriculture from the depression it suffered when the great deflation struck the country in 1920.

First taking off his coat on the wheat ranch of Chester Neal, six miles from town, in the presence of thousands of farmers assembled from the surrounding country, the President of the United States mounted to the seat of a binder beside farmer Neal, and assisted for a few minutes in the harvesting of a crop which he believed signalizes even greater prosperity immediately for American agriculturists and ultimate emancipation from an economic despondency, which war and its reaction had made it impossible to avert.

How He Shocks Wheat.

The President was accompanied to the Neal farm by Gov. Davis of Kansas, Senator Capper [Rep., Kas.], and other Kansas political leaders. As soon as he reached the farm, where a hired hand was running the tractor, the President pitched in to demonstrate that he could shock wheat.

"I'll show you, governor, that I haven't forgotten how," he said, as he picked up two sheaves of wheat, one in each hand and placed them in position for the base of the shock. Working rapidly, the President soon had a shock almost done.

"Now, governor," said the President, puffing a little from his exertion, "I'll show you the Ohio way. You know we crown the shock in Ohio."

"Dirt Farmer" a Critic.

"We don't crown them out here," said the governor, as the President, splitting the tops of a sheaf, placed the crowning sheaf on the pile. After surveying his handiwork for the moment the President concluded to try another one and did it much more easily and quickly.

"There, senator," he said to Mr. Capper, "don't you think that ought to admit me to the farm bloc?"

"It certainly would," the senator replied.

The shocking over, the President insisted on operating the McCormick-Deering binder which was running in the field. Gov. Davis and Farmer Neal hailed the farm hand, who drove the binder up to the President as the movie cameras prepared for a wonderful harvest of attractive film.

Mounts to Binder Seat.

Without any trepidation, the President, attired in blue coat and white flannel trousers, mounted the puffing tractor and took his place in the iron seat.

Grasping the wheel with confidence, he asked the farm hand how to start it. He got the hang of the thing immediately and told the man to let out the brake. Pushing in the clutch, away went the binder operated by the President of the United States on a Kansas farm.

The crowds cheered lustily as the President every few moments and at the proper periods pulled the cord which released the bound sheaves from the binder. The President operated the machine so successfully that he seemed a boy with a new toy. He insisted on keeping it up at the first turn, negotiating the turn successfully and cutting in on a new row in expert fashion.

Chats with Small Boys.

Once around a large plot of ground the President operated the tractor driven binder. Before this incident the President and Mrs. Harding engaged in conversation with two little boys and a baby all bedecked with blue ribbons.

"Warren," said Mrs. Harding, "get a picture taken holding the baby."

The proud father handed the baby over to the President.

"Don't hold it like you were going to drop it," Mrs. Harding warned.

"What's the little boy's name?" the President asked.

"Mary Jane," said the farmer. Mrs. Harding laughed.

"Don't you know that baby girls always dress in blue ribbon and little boys in pink?" she asked.

The President indicated that he had known but forgotten it.

Farmer Tires of Costs.

Before leaving the farm the President asked farmer Neal about the cost of raising wheat. It developed that on an acre Neal pays $5 interest charge; $1.50 for plowing, 25 cents for harrow-

BARE ROMANCE OF M'GINNIS AS KILLERS GO FREE

Blondes Join Long List of Acquitted.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

Micheal McGinnis' romance of ten years with the blonde Anna Pioch came to light yesterday, in faded scarlet lines, after a jury had wound up the whole affair by stamping a sensational "not guilty" on Anna, the wife; on Myna, her blonde sister, and on the two stripling sheiks, Francis Nee and Charles Schade. The four were charged with the murder, on March 13 last, of Michael McGinnis, a city fireman.

Balancing the state's claims of the faithlessness of a blonde wife, sitting in the courtroom, against her story of the demon brutality of a drunken husband, in his grave with a bullet through the back of the head, twelve Cook county jurors, most of them married, wrangled for fifteen hours. In the same way ten years ago Mike McGinnis, then a young sheik himself, balanced the privileges of Anna Pioch, the fair-haired playmate, with the rights of Mrs. Anna McGinnis, the legal wife.

And in both cases, the woman won.

Thirtieth Woman Acquitted.

Yesterday, she won, on the fourth ballot, and became neophyte No. 30, in the sorority of Cook county ladies acquitted in recent years of murder. Ten years ago she won, after six week's tender nursing of the chance companion, at the point of death. And she became Mrs. Michael McGinnis.

Threading its way through the two crises, a decade apart, was revealed a hot romance that tapered off into bored respectability, and ended with Mike's bleeding body careening against the piano in their bungalow three months ago. The romance, started in casual impermanence, led to a marriage certificate and a comfortable home, far from State and 18th streets.

For, with the sponge of adventure squeezed dry, Mike had maintained that Anna is a girl, in spite of everything, who would make a good wife. Things went well, very well, for some time. They began to go badly about a year ago.

Mike Brings in Extra Cash.

Mike—the "workin' fool," his friends called him—alternated twenty-four hour shifts at the fire department, with twenty-four hours of leisure.

The files of the fire department revealed that after he joined the service in 1918 he was adequate and faithful in the line of duty. "He never was reprimanded, nor did he receive any special distinction." Fellow firemen testified to his conscientious work and declared that "Mike was a credit to the fireman's uniform."

Most of his leisure he spent delivering coal and ice. The extra money meant lace curtains, real fur on his wife's winter suit, and, maybe, more drinks at the corner saloon. Mike had never said he was a plaster saint.

Finally the nervous, scarlet tale turned gray and flat.

Mike had begun to fade. And Anna, only 28, still had golden hair. She had first met Mike as a sheik. It was now mid-channel for him, hard work, his drinks, perhaps a still in the basement, the defense stated in testimony. His iceman's garb was not alluring.

But Anna's flaxen hair still glistened. Haunting memories of other days, dangerous days, flashed across her eyes as she wiped the dishes, or wiped up the dirt tracked in by Mike. So she began to talk to her sister, 22, unmarried, waiting for adventure.

Seeks Boys' Company.

A few blocks away, across vacant lots, Schade and Nee, beardless and brash, were wondering about life.

So the wife of a decade began her alternate schedule. Twenty-four hours of wedded respectability, and fights. Twenty-four hours of broken marriage vows, with a gun under her pillow, and a 19 year old boy as her guest, the state's evidence showed.

Then the sisters ventured further, for money, it is charged. Stories of "them blondes down at 56th and California" reached Mike's ears. Mike had grown older, and he didn't think often of those other days.

So he murmured, tolerantly, "O women ain't so bad."

His Friend Puts Him Wise.

George Clement, driving the coal wagon with him, persisted about "the dizzy blondes near your house, they tried to make me the other day," and the friend casually sketched the outlines. Mike, silently, filled in the details.

"Come up to the house tonight,

MISTS OF YEARS ROLL BACK AS HARDING SEES SWEETHEART OF 1878

Hutchinson, Kans., June 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—Forty-five years ago, Warren G. Harding, then a boy of 12, had a love affair with a small girl which, at that time, was believed by the school companions of each to be of a serious sort. Certainly, they said, Warren would marry Mattie.

Today, the same Warren Harding, now President of the United States, met and recognized the same girl in Hutchinson. She had motored more than a hundred miles across Kansas to see him.

He told of the boyhood romance in his address before 7,000 people assembled to hear his discussion of the agricultural problems of the country at the state fair grounds, and described her as "my first boyhood sweetheart; married, happy, a grandmother and doing her part in the citizenship of this great community."

Members of the President's party said later that the President did not know Mattie by her married name. He only remembered her as Mattie Meil of Caledonia, O., whom he had not seen for nearly half a century.

While A. H. Shuler of Bucklin, Kas., has been reported by newspaper men as having appeared before them and stated that it was his wife who was President Harding's childhood sweetheart, Mayor Walter F. Jones of Hutchinson, who was with the President when the meeting occured, said tonight he could not recall the name.

FARRAR GRANTED DIVORCE IN N. Y.

Lou's Infidelity Is Proven; Stella to Sue Diva.

[Copyright: 1923: By the News, New York.] [All rights reserved. Reproduction in full or part prohibited.]

New York, June 23.—[Special.]—Geraldine Farrar today won her suit for divorce against Lou Tellegen. The victory of the famous opera singer is overwhelming and decisive, according to authentic information exclusive to the News.

The report of Thomas H. Mahoney, designated as official referee by Supreme Court Justice Cohalan, finds that Miss Farrar has sustained the burden of proof required by law and has advanced sufficient evidence in support of her charges to justify the granting of a decree of divorce.

To make final the legal dissolution of the diva's marriage, there remains only the formality of judicially confirming the referee's report, which will be filed in the county clerk's office on Monday.

Entry to Be Made Monday.

Samuel Untermyer, attorney for Miss Farrar, will then move before Justice Cohalan for a confirmation and the entry of an interlocutory decree in the singer's favor.

The only cloud to mar Miss Farrar's complete victory is the determination, renewed today, of Miss Stella Adler Larrimore to press her action for $1,000,000 punitive damages from the prima donna.

"Only the abject eleventh hour withdrawal of my name from Miss Farrar's private matrimonial mess made it possible for her to win a verdict," said Miss Larrimore.

"The termination of the suit in her favor proves that my being dragged into the case was unnecessary, unjustifiable and wicked. The shock has ruined my health and caused me endless suffering and humiliation. I intend to hold Miss Farrar strictly to account."

It's Great News for Lou.

Lou Tellegen received the news of his wife's triumph joyfully.

"The decision is agreeable to me," he said. "I am certain Miss Farrar will not object if I say that it makes us both supremely happy. I am not a bit angry at the lady for giving me my freedom. I wish her the best of luck."

Asked if he would marry again, Lou replied:

"Who knows? I used to believe that marriages are made in heaven. Anyway, life without love is hell."

The acts enumerated in the referee's report include those committed by Tellegen with Kathleen Clifford and Lorna Ambler, both prominent on the musical comedy stage. Miss Ambler is linked with Lou in episodes in a Long Beach bungalow love nest in the summer of 1921, and in a West 37th street apartment in the fall of the same year.

The costs to Miss Farrar in fees for investigators and lawyers are said to exceed $100,000. The diva has also volunteered to pay the expenses of the official referee.

Real estate news will be found on pages 14 and 15 of part 2.

U. S. WORMHOLES SOLD IN EUROPE FOR ANTIQUES

Washington, D. C., June 23.—[Special.]—Under the head "Export of Wormholes a New Industry," the department of commerce today issued this statement:

"Shipper of wormy oak saved from loss by manufacturer of antique grandfather's clocks.

"That it pays to investigate needs of foreign markets is shown by the following incidents which occurred in a foreign country a short time ago, recently reported to the lumber division of the department of commerce.

"An American exporter sent an unusually poor consignment of oak, which was found to be wormy, to his over-connection, but no market could be found for this parcel. This consignment would have caused a great loss to the exporter were it not that the consignee happened to visit an antique furniture factory. The manufacturer was at that time making antique grandfather's clocks and found the oak in question to answer his purpose very nicely, because it eliminated the work of boring worm holes by hand. The parcel was disposed of at a premium and a profitable connection was established."

Record Heat's Grip on City to Continue

While Chicago Swelters.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Berlin, June 23.—The Goethe Lyceum of Berlin closed today because the cold was so intense the girls could not work. This is the first time that the school authorities in Germany have ever been forced to grant vacation because of cold in June.

In thunder showers lies Chicago's only hope for relief today from the record smashing heat wave which yesterday sent the mercury up to 95 degrees, the highest of the year and the hottest June in the history of the local weather bureau. The wave bids fair to continue without moderation for several days.

Several deaths were attributed to the heat either directly or indirectly, more than twenty heat prostrations being officially reported and sixteen persons were bitten by heat-crazed dogs.

The list of dead includes:

ALEX DUBOY, 38 years old, 9146 Drexel avenue.

MISS MARGARET HENDRICKSON, a maid, 945 Crescent place; believed to have inhaled gas while deranged by the heat.

MARY VAUGHT, 2 years old; fell from rear porch at 1435 Fulton street, where she was sleeping to escape the heat.

D. M. BOHUSEN, 1151 West Washington boulevard.

GEORGE WILLIAMS, 1841 South State street, a colored teamster.

Strike at Garbage Plant.

Oak Park, River Forest, and Forest Park are suffering from a shortage of the water supply and, on top of this, the public health of Chicago was threatened at noon when every employé of the municipal reduction plant, Pershing road and Iron street, walked out on strike, leaving tons of garbage exposed to the sun.

Drastic steps to put an end to the strike, which would eventually tie up the entire garbage collection system, a condition which might breed disease epidemics within a few days under the prevailing temperatures, were taken at once by Commissioner of Public Works A. A. Sprague. He notified Chief of Detectives Hughes, who immediately arrested Paul Davis, 5407 West Adams street, business agent of the Municipal Reduction Plant Employés' union, and locked him up at the detective bureau on a charge of conspiracy.

Takes Firm Stand.

"If these men want to come back to work Monday they can," Co'. Sprague said, "but if they don't the city is going to operate that plant. We are not going to stand any fooling during a heat wave such as this. It is a one man union, anyway. I don't see where this man Davis gets the right to collect a $10 initiation fee from the 200 employés out there. He called the strike because I fired two men for inefficiency yesterday. I'm not going to take those men back or any of the others if they don't want to come, but we're going to operate that garbage plant."

Davis' bonds were placed at $2,500.

Special Ice Distribution.

In the meanwhile ice distributing companies will make a heroic effort today to keep the supply equal to the demand, which yesterday all but swamped every concern in the city. Union rules prevent the delivery of ice on Sunday, but special dispensations have been made for today. Paul Barbare, manager of the ice department of the Consumers' company, announced seventy-five jitney stations will be kept open where residents owning automobiles may stop and purchase their ice in cases where delivery is not made.

Commissioner Sprague took steps to keep the lake water unpolluted for the benefit of the thousands who are able to obtain relief by bathing during the hot spell. White wings were set to work clearing all the rubbish from the street end beaches in order to afford more room and tests were made of the water at all the beaches. ..hTe latter showed the water is still in good condition.

HEAT WAVE GENERAL

The heat wave which holds Chicago is general from the Atlantic to the Rocky mountains. Temperatures ranging from 95 degrees to 103 degrees are reported from points ranging from New England to Texas.

The northwest had a respite from the heat yesterday when a series of thunder and wind storms swept through the Dakotas and Minnesota.

The coolest spot in the country was in the Sierra Nevada mountains in Utah, where rain, hail and snow were reported. An air mail service aviator reached Salt Lake City yesterday with his plane coated with ice.

President Harding was traveling through Kansas yesterday during the hottest weather that state has experienced for years.

Warmer weather was predicted for today for the Atlantic coast, lower lakes, and Ohio valley regions.

SEALS BROKEN BY U. S. AGENTS; LIQUOR SEIZED

French Liner Brings Ample Stocks.

London's View of Ship Rum Seizures

"We have always deprecated reprisals, but if interference with our shipping persists there may be no other choice when our existence and our solvency are at stake."—Daily Mail.

"It seems incredible that the influence of a fanatical clique should have brought a great country to this nonsensical interpretation of freedom of the seas."—Daily Mirror.

"The refusal to allow liners to bring into American ports under strict seal, liquor that is only to be consumed outside the three mile limit is in essence an attempt to dictate to other countries."—Daily Express.

New York, June 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—After two days' reflection and two false starts, the United States today smashed the British government seals placed on the liquor stocks which the steamships Baltic and Berengaria brought into this port yesterday to test the treasury department ruling that no ocean liner may cross America's three mile line with bar supplies for the east bound voyage.

By nightfall there had been removed from the Baltic all liquid supplies which Dr. E. K. Sprague, chief of the United States public health service, considered in excess of medicinal needs, and it was announced that surplus wet goods would be taken from the Berengaria Monday morning. The liquor seized was trucked to government warehouses.

Captains of both vessels entered formal protest at the breaking of their government's seals, but put no obstacles in the path of confiscating officials.

Sam Isn't Sure at First.

Uncle Sam was slow in delivering his punch. Twice he raised his fist against those who had defied his prohibition laws, and twice he lowered it while his executives held parley.

Conflicting orders rained on the water front before the seizure was made; and, meanwhile, the French liner Paris steamed into the harbor with a maritime cellar well stocked for the homeward voyage. Indications were that even more trouble would accumulate next week, when more liners will arrive carrying liquor across the three mile limit.

Customs officials and prohibition enforcement agents massed this morning on the pier occupied by the White Star liner Baltic, which yesterday unexpectedly slipped into port ahead of the Cunarder Berengaria, heralded as the first liner to test the dry ruling. The announced purpose was to sweep down on the two vessels and promptly confiscate their stocks.

Making Europe Enforce U. S. Law.

This is what happened:

1. Deputy Surveyor Sanders marched aboard the Baltic shortly after 9:30 a. m.; the British seals were smashed; Capt. John Roberts protested, and Federal Prohibition Director Canfield began taking an inventory of the wet goods.

2. Proceedings were suddenly halted by a telephone call from the custom house, while Washington wondered. Collector of the Port Elting later explained that this halt was called because Dr. E. K. Sprague, chief of the United States public health service, has not yet issued permits for medicinal liquor supplies. Meanwhile Mr. Elting conferred at the custom house with treasury department officials and Surveyor of the Port Whittle dashed aboard the White Star liner Majestic, which sailed at noon with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon for an unexplained parley with his chief.

3. Early this afternoon federal agents, who spent the day on the Baltic's pier, resumed their work of seizing its liquor.

Washington Takes a Hand.

4. This work was halted by a telephone call from Dr. Sprague, after Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Moss, from Washington, sent him drastic orders, and it was reported from the capital that Dr. Sprague had granted a permit for all the Berengaria's stock, listing it for medicinal purposes. This report Dr. Sprague denied, but he declined to discuss the Washington orders.

5. Dr. Sprague issued permits for a certain amount of medicinal liquor—considerably in excess of what the Majestic, a larger vessel, carried on its outward voyage.

6. The surplus liquor was taken from the Baltic and the Berengaria's seals were broken.

The formal protest lodged by Capt. Robers, the Baltic's commander, read:

"I, J. Roberts, master of the British steamship Baltic, of Liverpool, protest against the breaking of the British customs seals and the seizure by the United States customs authorities of the ship's stores of wine and liquor held under seal on board this ship for consumption exclusively outside of the territorial waters of the United States."

The official statistics on the quantities of liquors brought into port by the two vessels, left, and seized, follow:

The Baltic brought: 5,736 bottles of beer, ale, and stout; 325 bottles of spirits; 119 bottles of wine; 38 bottles of liqueurs, and 70½ bottles of brandy, listed as regular medical supply.

The Baltic lost: 5,159 bottles of beer, ale, and stout; 80 bottles of spirits; no wine, and 38 bottles of liqueurs.

The Baltic had left: 577 bottles of beer, ale, and stout; 245 bottles of spirits; 119 bottles of wine, and 70½ bottles of brandy, her regular medical supply.

The Berengaria brought: 3,888 bottles of beer, 130 gallons of spirits, and 47½ gallons of wine.

The Berengaria lost: 3,038 bottles of beer, ale and stout and 31 gallons of spirits.

The Berengaria had left: 850 bottles of beer, ale, and stout; 99 gallons of spirits, and 47½ gallons of wine.

Neither Appeals to Court.

Neither the White Star line nor the Cunard line instituted any injunction proceedings to prevent removal of the liquor. While the Cunard line, in the case of the Berengaria, applied for a permit for all her liquor as medicinal supplies, the White Star, in the case of the Baltic, did nothing except list her stock on her manifest.

In explanation of the permits which he granted, Dr. Sprague said that the amounts he allowed were required by British law and declared he would be guided in fixing the medical liquor needs of incoming vessels by the laws of their countries.

The Baltic's officers, however, said the 70½ bottles of spirits carried regularly in the medical stores fulfilled the requirements of the British law, that there should be a gallon for each 100 passengers and crew.

Although French law calls for wine rations for the crew, the British officers said no such provisions were contained in the laws under which they sailed. They laughingly said that the quantity allowed them would answer legally for a passenger list of 25,000.

DRASTIC U. S. ORDERS

Washington, D. C., June 23.—[Special.]—Delay by customs officials in New York in seizing beverage liquors under government seal of Great Britain on the steamships Baltic and Berengaria prompted the issuance of new instructions today by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Moss to hasten the seizure. It was stated officially that the new orders were considered necessary as the result of the action of Dr. Sprague, public health officer in New York, in acceding to request of the medical officer of the Berengaria to retain as "medicinal" the entire supply of liquors on board but under British seal.

The assistant secretary of the treasury ordered the permit withdrawn and instructions were sent to New York by Acting Surgeon General White that the recent instructions issued by the surgeon general regarding issuance of permits for medicinal liquors were intended to mean that only that class of liquors could be brought within the three mile limit.

Exceptions and Conditions.

It was provided, however, he pointed out, as stated in the letter of Secretary of Treasury Mellon to the surgeon general, that where the laws of a foreign country require a given amount of liquor per capita to be carried for the crew or, as in the case of Italy, for third class passengers, that liquor could be allowed to ships under certain conditions for those particular countries. But in all cases where no specific amount is allowed, the new order explained, by the laws of a foreign country, the officers of the United States public health service are instructed to make proper inquiry as to the actual medicinal needs and make such allowances as are reasonably necessary for medicinal purposes only.

"All liquors found within the territorial waters of the United States and not coming strictly within this purview are subject to seizure and you will immediately make seizure thereof, duly list the same, and turn over to the prohibition officers at the port," the order concluded.

WET RULING RIDICULED

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

London, June 23.—The London papers this morning are a unit in deprecating and ridiculing the situation which has arisen as a result of the treasury department's decision to seize liquor stores under British customs seals aboard British ships in American waters.

"To us British shipping is our very existence," says the Daily Mail. "Without it we cannot hope to pay the enormous amount we borrowed from the United States during the war. Nor can we permit it to be arbitrarily attacked or harassed.

"If it were believed that our ships were being so attacked retaliatory legislation against United States ships and goods would be certain and inevitable. We have always deprecated reprisals, but if interference with our shipping persists there may be no other choice where our existence and our solvency are at stake.

Scoff at "Moral Principle."

"It cannot be alleged that there is any moral principle behind the United States government. There can be no solution of this question by any agreement concluded between the two governments as a result of which our rights in international law as it stands today are infringed. We stand on the broad grounds of this principle."

The Daily Mirror ridicules the "pussyfoot farce," saying:

"A sense of humor has kept the dry ship drama from becoming an international complication. It is still a joke which becomes more ludicrous as the pussyfoots over there get more excited about the beer and wine that may contaminate the atmosphere of New York even if they are kept under seal within three miles off the coast.

"It seems incredible that the influence of a fanatical clique should have brought a great country to this nonsensical interpretation of 'freedom of the seas.' It is not too far to say that the whole world is laughing at America—politically, of course, and low."

Tries to Dictate to World.

Without the rancor which might be expected, the Daily Express regrets the passive entrance of the government into the question as an attitude "more likely to damage than enhance Anglo-American friendship which all sane men value as the great hope of modern civilization.

"No one for a moment has dreamed of dictating to America whether her citizens shall drink or shall not drink. On the other hand, the refusal to allow liners to bring into American ports under strict seal liquor that is only to be consumed outside the three mile limit in essence is an attempt to dictate to other countries."

French Steamship Held Up.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, June 23.—[Tribune Radio.]—French line officials were anxiously awaiting cables from New York tonight as to what the American authorities have decided to do about the sealed booze supply aboard the steamships Paris and Berengaria. The steamship France's departure has been delayed until 3 o'clock Sunday morning. It will be ordered to unload half its liquor supply if it seems certain that the United States will seize its return voyage stock.

English Fine Ship with Rum, Not to Land, but in Transit

Washington, D. C., June 23.—[By the Associated Press.] — Discussion here of the protests filed in New York by the masters of the Baltic and the Berengaria, following the seizure of their liquor stocks, has drawn attention to a recent decision by a British court, which is regarded as supporting in some degree, at least, the American government's assertion of authority over liquor brought inside the three mile limit.

The case in question, according to reports reaching Washington, was heard in the British high court of justice, King's Bench division, in London, and resulted in assessment against the German ship Cleopatra of a fine of £500 and costs for having about ninety gallons of spirits concealed in her bunker coal. The evidence indicated there was no intention to land the liquor on British soil.

The Cleopatra had come from Finland, and was en route to Antwerp where it was indicated the hidden liquor was to be sent ashore. In his decision the lord chief justice held "that it was immaterial whether the contraband was to have been taken to Antwerp or not," and imposed the £500 fine with costs "by way of warning to others."

The report on the case showed that under the customs consolidation act, importation of spirits into Great Britain was forbidden "unless in ships of forty tons burden at least, and in casks or other vessels capable of containing liquids, each of such casks being of the size of nine gallons at least."

The spirits found in the Cleopatra's bunkers was in bottles and tins. The court held that the presence of the liquor in British waters constituted "importation" within the meaning of British law.

It is also shown in the record that counsel for the defense said that "what was decided here [in the London case] today, America might decide tomorrow, and the directors of the Cunard line might find themselves in a predicament, because abroad they looked with great respect on the views of a London special jury."

MAN-GIRL MADE MAN AGAIN; DONS JAIL TROUSERS

State Gets Continuance of Murder Hearing.

It was "Miss Thompson" in Judge John J. Rooney's court yesterday morning and Fred G. Thompson in the afternoon as Warden Wesley Westbrook ordered jail trousers and a jumper for the man-girl accused of being the "girl with the terrible smile who killed Richard Tesmer."

"I want my client referred to as 'Miss,'" Attorney Frank A. McDonnell informed Judge Rooney. "That's my defense."

And "Miss" he was until Warden Westbrook ruled otherwise. Freddy-Frances was then deprived of his silk stockings, step-in, dress, and even of the transformation that furnished the puffs and frills to the bobbed hair of the "wife of Frank Carrick and husband of Marie Clark." And he went to the men's quarters of the county jail instead of to the women's prison, as he had requested.

And so it was that legal autherities restored Thompson to the masculinity which he had practically discarded as a boy.

Hearing Brings Crowds.

Attorney McDonnell had compelled the police to bring Freddy-Frances into court upon a formal charge of murder. They had wished more time to investigate and interrogate the "girl" identified by Mrs. Tesmer as the one who had shot Tesmer dead.

Crowds had gathered in the South Clark street court for a glimpse of the strange prisoner. Freddy-Frances was newly shaved and rouged, his eyebrows were arched, and there were evidences of a lipstick. His black dress contained the wrinkles of several nights of sleeping in it, but the "best hat," green with trimmings, added "class."

Demand Immediate Trial.

"I insist on an immediate trial for my client," Attorney McDonnell stated. "The only evidence the police have is the identification of Mrs. Tesmer, and she has identified half a dozen other girls. She should be here to testify, so that my client may be liberated."

The state asked for and obtained a continuance until July 11 after arguments had been heard. The question arose as to whether the murder suspect should be returned to police custody or taken to the county jail.

"Miss Thompson has been denied proper care and attention by the police," McDonnell said. "She should be sent to the county jail, where she can get the nourishment she is entitled to."

"I'll Stand by Husband."

He won his point.

Marie Clark, Thompson's wife, also was in court, freed from custody, but answering a charge of disorderly conduct. Her case was continued.

"I'm proud of my husband," she said. "I'm going to stand by him."

Frank Carrick, who obtained exemption from the army draft owing to the alleged dependency of "my wife, Frances Carrick," also was released. Federal officials declared the statute of limitations had run on this charge.

SMOKE DRIVES OUT LOOP WORKERS.

Workers in the Sears building, 19 West Jackson boulevard, were driven to the street yesterday by smoke, which filled the building, from a fire in a grease chute in the basement of the Boulevard cafeteria. Damage was only $250.

GIRL TO REVEAL 'FULL STORY' OF RUM SHAKEDOWN

'Nadle Misled Me,' Says Miss Mauser.

Miss Katherine Mauser, confidential stenographer in the prohibition field office, who was arrested in connection with an alleged "shake down" plot, said to have been engineered by Harry Nadle, former police investigator, yesterday turned against Nadle and traded a promise of her full story for immunity from prosecution.

"He is an oily schemer and I will do everything in my power to convict him," she told Guy C. Crapple, assistant United States attorney. "He misled me."

Influenced by Mother.

Miss Mauser was led to this action, it was said, by a talk with her mother, Mrs. Lennaeus Baker of Frankfort, Ind., who hurried to Chicago when she learned of her daughter's arrest.

Sam Howard, chief deputy United States marshal, predicted yesterday that Nadle would be jailed within a short time.

It was revealed for the first time that government agents almost trapped Nadle when he kept an appointment with Leo Zindt, a druggist he was alleged to have attempted to swindle in a "fixing" transaction.

Let Him Slip Away.

Zindt, it was stated, met Nadle to give him $1,000 as a bribe for destroying a damaging record purloined from the office of the prohibition officers. Secret service men at that time decided it would be advantageous to "string" Nadle a while and since then have been unable to locate him.

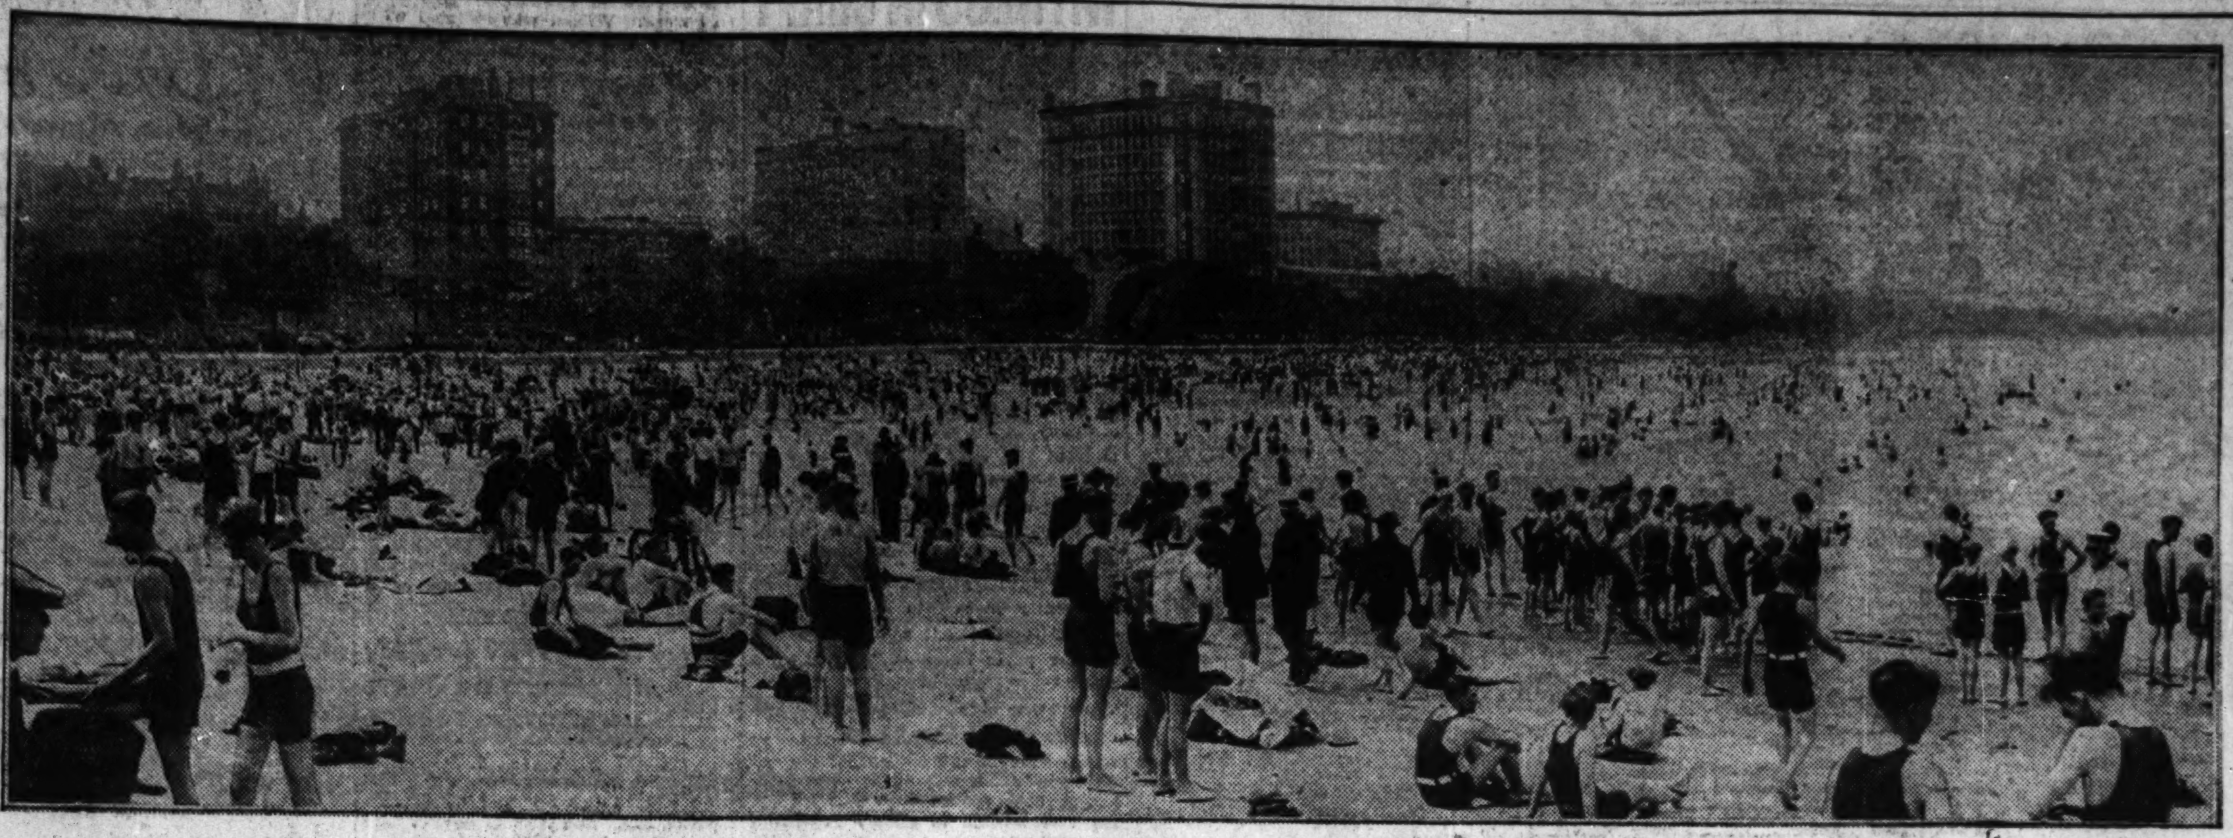
WHERE THOUSANDS KEPT COOL ON HOTTEST DAY OF THE YEAR



[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Oak street beach swarmed yesterday with thousands of folk—young, middle aged, and old—who attempted to dodge the heat of the hottest day of the year thus far by splashing in the cool waters of the lake. The complete lack of bathhouses or other necessary beach equipment did not deter them. From all parts of the district they came—thousands of them from the tenement section at the west of the ward—to bathe on the "Gold Coast." It was from the owners of the impressive homes that form the background of the picture that the objection came which deprived the bathers of any sort of beach facilities.

LIQUOR BRINGS SPLIT IN RANKS OF DEMOCRACY

Silzer and McAdoo Lead Factions.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., June 23.—The presidential campaign is now fairly under way, with a comparatively peaceful situation obtaining in the Republican party, and an unsettled condition in the Democratic party insuring one of the most exciting Democratic national conventions in history.

Among the Republicans there is no contest over the nomination in sight at this writing. President Harding apparently is the overwhelming choice of his party for renomination, and if the convention were held today he would be named to succeed himself with virtual unanimity. The general assumption is that he will be renominated by the convention a year hence, unless he should decline to be a candidate as a result of unforeseen developments.

La Follette Counted as Aspirant.

This does not mean that no other candidate will be presented to the convention. Presumably Senator La Follette [Rep., Wis.] will be a candidate for the nomination as heretofore, and he is likely to go into the convention with a much greater support than ever before without being able, however, to get within hailing distance of the goal. Besides the Wisconsin delegation he probably will have numerous delegates from Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa, and Nebraska.

Senator Johnson [Rep., Cal.] is not exactly a known quantity in the situation and some elements in the party not reconciled to the renomination of the President, are doing their utmost to induce the fiery former Progressive to toss his hat into the ring. He is now in Europe and when he comes home he is to be given a grand welcome by his friends at the pier as a demonstration of the enthusiasm they will undertake to stir up for him if he will consent to become a candidate against the President in the Republican primaries.

Before leaving for Europe, Senator Johnson was disinclined to enter the race. He was represented as feeling that no power on earth could prevent the renomination of the President, and some friends were convinced it would be wise for him to save his powder until 1928.

Divided on World Court.

The prohibition issue is not troubling the Republicans noticeably. They contemplate taking a stand that will prove acceptable to the earnest advocates of prohibition, confident of triumphing over any party that makes concessions to the wets. The only issue on which the party is divided is the President's world court proposal, but there is a prevalent belief that this question will be settled by the senate next winter and removed as campaign embarrassment.

In the Democratic party there is a large field of aspirants to the nomination and an incipient upheaval over the prohibition question.

The leading candidate in the dry section of the party is William Gibbs McAdoo, who is going to put forth a supreme effort this time to bag the nomination. Other possibilities favored by the drys are Senator Ralston [Ind.], and Senator Glass [Va.], each of whom presumably will be presented to the convention by his state.

Silzer May Prove Strongest.

Wet Democrats view with favor Senator Underwood [Ala.], Gov. Al Smith [N. Y.], and Gov. Silzer [N. J.]. It may turn out that Silzer will be the strongest candidate representing the advocates of the restoration of beer and light wine. It would be contrary to the traditions of the Democratic party to nominate a southern man like Underwood or a Catholic like Smith. Silzer, moreover, represents an important normally Republican state which he would be relied upon to carry if he were nominated.

It may turn out that neither the wets nor the drys can command the two-thirds majority of the convention necessary to nominate a Democratic candidate and that a compromise or a dark horse will get the prize. John W. Davis, former ambassador to Great Britain, is frequently mentioned as a likely compromise. He will be the favorite son of West Virginia when the balloting begins.

At Sea on League of Nations.

There will be a spectacular contest over inclusion of a wet plank in the Democratic platform, and William J. Bryan and the drys on one side and Al Smith, Tammany, and the advocates of a modification of the Volstead act on the other side are already girding for the fight.

On the league of nations the Democrats do not know yet exactly where they are at. National Chairman Hull declined to state recently whether the party still supports the position of Woodrow Wilson and said he would not attempt to forecast the action of the convention on the foreign relations plank of the platform.

FIREMAN IS HURT, 60 HORSES SAVED, AT $25,000 BLAZE

Sixty horses were rescued, one fireman was injured, and a property loss of $25,000 resulted from a fire which destroyed the two story warehouse and barn of the Consumers Hay and Grain company at 1311-15 West Randolph street. Thousands of spectators were attracted to the scene by the flames which shot hundreds of feet in the air and could be seen for several miles on the west side.

Residents in a whole block on Elizabeth street, between Randolph street and Washington boulevard, fearing the fire would spread southward, moved their household belongings into the street. Michael Lahey of engine company 7 broke his arm when a ladder fell as a wall gave way.

Quick work by the firemen who answered the 4-11 alarm saved the garage of the Star Motor Express company next door.

OAK ST. BEACH TO GET USE OF TWO BATHHOUSES

Other Bathing Places Are Improved.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Oak street beach is to have dressing rooms, lockers, showers, and toilet facilities, but they will be located half a mile away from the sands. Eugene R. Pike, president of Lincoln Park board, signed contracts yesterday for two buildings of the "knockdown" type to be put up on the shore just north of North avenue, beyond the zone where the opposition of frontage owners on the Lake Shore drive carries weight.

The bathhouses each will be 60x40 feet and if the experiment proves successful and the facilities are patronized, another building or two can be erected on a week's notice. The contractor says these accommodations will be ready by July.

Plan "Miniature Trains."

Special "caterpillar" service is to be installed along the esplanade in an effort to overcome the half mile and more of blistering concrete pavement which makes a bare foot fairly sizzle on a hot day. Mr. Pike expects to arrange for two miniature auto trains to run between North avenue and Oak street for the use of bathers only, fare 5 cents—whether this is to be a one way fare or a round trip rate is not yet decided.

Thousands Flock to Beaches.

Chicago yesterday trooped to the lake literally by multitudes. Every beach from Calvary to the Calumet swarmed with humanity. Health officials redoubled their watch for water pollution. This year greater efforts are to be taken against contamination of the lake from excursion steamers, motor boats, and other small craft. Also at the municipal pier persons who throw banana peels and other refuse into the lake are to be discouraged. Last year, with the wind in the right quarter, a current could sometimes be seen carrying a dark brown veneer all the way from the breakwater to Grace street and points north, although the current is supposed to run in the opposite direction.

Warns Boat Owners.

One cause of pollution at Oak street, it was found last year, was the fleet of motor boats in the lagoon. Mr. Pike has already had the owners and skippers before him and has laid it down cold that if the flotilla does not refrain from polluting the water it will have to find wharfage elsewhere. Many owners live on their boats through the season, and this year the park board says the motorboat colony itself has its eyes peeled for the careless.

Diversey beach, it was said yesterday, may show a marked improvement over last year, so far as water pollution goes. This beach, one of the most popular on the north side, lies on a lagoon with practically no currents and the water has been almost stagnant. By clearing out the obstructions in the channel north of Simmons island the lagoon now has two outlets and the circulation of the water has greatly improved, according to the engineers.

MANUFACTURERS FOR ORDNANCE "RESERVE CORPS"

In order to avoid a repetition of the delay and waste of millions of dollars when he United States entered the world war because of inefficient ordnance preparation, an organization was perfected yesterday to be known as the Chicago District Ordnance association. The association is to cooperate with government officials and with the army ordnance association.

Ex-officers of the ordnance service, together with essential manufacturers of the Chicago district, compose the membership, some 500 in all, of the new organization. E. A. Russell, vice president of the Otis Elevator company, is president.

Further plans are to be discussed at a meeting tomorrow night at the Chicago Athletic association. Maj. E. A. Collins, Rock Island arsenal, will discuss "Field Service Supplies."

Jail Lindholm, Freed of Slaying, as Fake U. S. Aid

Warren G. Lindhlom, who was acquitted recently of a charge of having slain his first wife, was sentenced to thirty days in jail yesterday by Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe on a charge of having represented himself as a deputy collector of internal revenue to H. W. Cole, at whose home he applied for lodging. Lindholm, who pleaded guilty, was alleged to have given Cole a check for $100, which was returned by the bank.

RHEUMATISM CURE BY SERUM IS HAILED AS A SUCCESS IN NEW YORK

New York, June 23.—[Special.]—No more pain and no more cripples because of rheumatism, is a possibility of the future, judging from the results obtained in the last four years from an entirely new method of treatment of the disease at the clinic of New York university. This treatment consists of a series of serum injections administered twice a week.

More than five thousand cases have been handled with 80 per cent improved to a point just this side of what can be termed a positive cure, according to a statement from the school today. Many of the patients, however, have reached the point of calling it a cure because they no longer suffer pain and the conditions which hindered or prevented their movements have entirely disappeared.

The serum used is a graduated series of strepticoccus viridans which the doctors in the clinic acknowledge to be the underlying cause of rheumatism. A small amount of the serum is used at the beginning and gradually built up to a comparatively huge dose. At least twenty treatments are administered and the immediate results are astonishing in some cases.

6,100 RAIL AIDS ON 2 ROADS GET $316,000 RAISES

Wage increases for clerical and station employés and common laborers in and around stations, storehouses, and warehouses, amounting to $316,000 a year and effective July 1, were announced yesterday by the New York, New Haven and Hartford and the Central New England railways. About 6,100 men are affected.

Two petitions for pay boosts were filed with the United States railroad labor board—one on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Omaha railway by the clerks' brotherhood and the other on the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad by the Order of Railroad Telegraphers.

The clerks asked for advances ranging from 8 to 14 cents an hour and the telegraphers seek an increase ranging from 8½ to 22 cents.

Manitoba Piles Up 30,566 Majority for Rum's Return

Winnipeg, Man., June 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—Manitoba voted in favor of government sale of liquor at yesterday's elections by a majority of 30,566, returns from all but 100 rural districts showed today. The province has been dry for seven years. The vote in the missing districts will not materially affect the result, as most of them are small. There was a wet majority of 25,988 in Winnipeg and 4,578 elsewhere. In the city 66,730 votes were cast.

U. S. FACES LOSS OF ZEPPELIN BY ARMY-NAVY ROW

Allies May Prevent Airship Delivery.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, June 23.—Keen rivalry between American army and navy officials may rob the United States of possession of the giant Zeppelin now nearing completion near Friedrichshafen, Germany.

Certain of the allied powers are watching the row with interest, preparing to take measures to prevent the completion or delivery of the ship on the ground that its construction was authorized as a commercial dirigible and not a military machine, whereas the activity of the American army and navy proves that it is not aimed at peaceful purposes.

According to the armistice terms the United States is entitled to a couple of Zeppelins—military airships, of course—Great Britain and France several, and Italy two. But in 1919 the Germans destroyed and burned a half dozen dirigibles. Great Britain and France grabbed the rest, and a small semi-rigid was given to Italy.

U. S. Demanded One Zeppelin.

The United States demands that Germany construct at least one Zeppelin, according to the agreement. The construction was blocked for a couple of years, but was finally authorized, although the size of the ship to be built was reduced, and it was stipulated that it was to be a commercial airship. The United States army and navy engaged in a controversy as to who was to get the craft, but it was finally ruled that it would be given to the navy.

Recently Gen. Mitchell sent an army officer to Friedrichshafen to observe the construction of the dirigible, and he and others have been writing articles in aviation magazines and army periodicals describing the ship. The allies did not miss all this, and certain conversations already have been exchanged regarding the advisability of withdrawing permission for its construction, since Germany is building a war airship in violation of the Versailles treaty.

Is Latest in Aircraft.

The new Zeppelin is the latest thing, embodying all the lessons taught in the war, and its possession will give the United States secrets as to construction which it hoped to obtain in buying the unsuccessful British model.

Another fly in the ointment which is expected to lead to trouble before its delivery and which certain of the allies state may result in the German government deciding to keep the airship is the payment. The Americans claim the Zeppelin under the armistice, the same as defrayment of the American army of occupation costs. But the Wadsworth agreement on the army of occupation provides that its cost be deducted from the coming reparations payment.

ARBITRATION TREATY BETWEEN U. S.-BRITAIN RENEWED FOR 5 YEARS

Washington, D. C., June 23.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Hughes and Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador, today signed an agreement under the terms of which the treaty of arbitration between the two countries is renewed for a period of five years. At the same time notes were exchanged providing that in case the senate gives its assent to the President's proposal for participation by the United States in the permanent court of international justice, the two governments will consider making an agreement to submit disputes of the character described in the arbitration treaty, to the permanent court for adjudication.

The arbitration treaty in question was originally signed at Washington on June 4, 1908, and on its expiration in 1913, was renewed for a period of five years. Again in 1918, the treaty was renewed.

The treaty provides that differences which may arise of a legal nature or relating to the interpretation of treaties existing between the two contracing parties, and which it may not have been possible to settle by diplomacy, shall be referred to the permanent court of arbitration established at The Hague by the convention of the 29th of July, 1899.

Russian Press Has Scant Sympathy for Germany

MOSCOW, June 23.—Germany's contention, in her recent note to Russia and other countries, that France is oppressing her, receives scant sympathy in the Russian official press.

The Pravda says that Russia naturally sympathizes with the German workmen, but that the German government is equally guilty with France of the crime of oppressing and shooting workers.

STRIKE TO AID UNION BOYCOTT IS HELD ILLEGAL

High Court Ruling Hits Carpenters.

Strikes called in furtherance of boycotts were branded as illegal in an opinion of the Illinois Supreme court, which was handed down yesterday. The ruling affirms a judgment of the Appellate court finding the carpenters' district council of Chicago and two union officials guilty of contempt of court.

The Supreme Court held that a strike called on Robert Pottinger, a builder, even though no violence was used, was in effect an act of intimidation against him, and was called because he had used millwork purchased from the Anderson and Lind Manufacturing company, which refused to maintain a strictly union shop.

Mill Firm Cites Writ.

An injunction had been obtained by the manufacturing company restraining the union from intimidating or coercing customers. When the union called a strike on Pottinger the millwork company appeared before Judge Oscar M. Torrison and began an action in contempt.

Judge Torrison, after a hearing, fined William Brims, former president of the district council, and Thomas F. Church, a business agent, $500 each and found the Carpenters' district council as a body not guilty. The Appellate court, where the case was first taken on appeal, held both the officials and the council guilty, and the Supreme court on a final appeal upheld that finding. The Circuit court is directed to fix a penalty for the council.

Plead Vested Right.

Through Attorney Hope Thompson the union sought to base its defense on the fact that the strike was peaceable and that labor had a vested right to strike, provided no violence was employed. It denied having violated the injunction.

The district council and the two union officials are among the defendants on trial before Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe, charged, with a number of millwork manufacturers and carpenter contractors, with conspiring in restraint of trade. The Anderson & Lind Co., is not a defendant.

$1,000,000 BUSINESS TURNED OVER TO 4 EMPLOYES BY OWNER

[Copyright: 1923: By New York Times.]

New York, June 23.—[Special.]—Herbert S. Martin, president and owner of M. Martin & Co., pioneer manufacturers of undergarments, announced today that his entire establishment, good will, brand, name and all that goes with the business, now capitalized at $1,000,000, is to be immediately turned over to four associates and employés, all of whom have been identified with the organization for more than twenty years.

The business includes offices and showrooms at 102-109 Madison avenue, and manufacturing plants in Brooklyn; Scranton, Pa., and New Jersey.

It is said that the annual business runs into the millions and that the principal product of the concern is distributed in nearly 1,500 cities in the United States, Canada, Cuba, England and other European countries.

BORAH SAYS HE'LL NOT CONTEND FOR WHITE HOUSE JOB

Spokane, Wash., June 23.—Unqualified assertion that he "will not be a presidential candidate" and "will not lead a third party" was made by United States Senator William E. Borah of Idaho today.

He expressed the opinion that President Harding will be nominated by acclamation in the Republican national convention, but said the Democratic situation, in his opinion, was "perplexing." He mentioned William G. McAdoo, Gov. Smith of New York, Henry Ford, and Oscar Underwood as "likely Democratic nominees."

"Ford has a power of popular support among all classes of people, especially the laboring classes and the agriculturalists," Senator Borah declared. "He also has the support of many eastern business interests."

If there is a third party movement, Mr. Borah said, he regards Ford as the most likely man to head it.

LEVIATHAN HANGS UP RECORDS AND SAILS FOR HOME

Cheers Greet Announcement of Speed in Trial.

[Copyright: 1923: By New York Times.]

On Board the Leviathan, June 23.—[Special.]—Cheers greeted Capt. Hartley of the Leviathan today when it was announced to those on board the giant liner headed for New York, where it will dock tomorrow, that another speed record had been smashed in the trial run.

It was the world's record for sustained speed which the Leviathan went after and surpassed. In the test dash of twenty-five hours, completed today, the liner averaged 27.48 knots an hour for a distance of 687 nautical miles. For six hours during this time the Leviathan sustained an average of 28 knots.

Maximum Not Reached.

Nevertheless, it is contended on board that the liner's maximum speed was not reached.

Making the run of 687 nautical miles from Jupiter light, Florida, to Cape Henry in twenty-five hours, the Leviathan spanned the greatest distance ever traversed by a passenger liner in the same time. The Mauretania logged 678 miles on Jan. 25-26, 1911. The Leviathan's sustained speed of 27.94 knots an hour is compared to the Mauretania's record of 27.04.

Albert D. Lasker, chairman of the shipping board, sent a message to President Harding, informing the President of the triumph of the Leviathan, in which he said he hoped it would be some "return" to the President for his "constant interest and enthusiasm for America on the sea."

Conditions Were Arduous.

William Gibbs, reconditioning engineer of the Leviathan, declared the record was made under more arduous conditions than those to which any liner was ever subjected.

"If the Majestic, the world's next largest liner, were here," he said, "the Leviathan would pass her by a knot and a half every damn time."

The Leviathan, however, he said, will not seek a trans-Atlantic record "unless the others start some fancy business. Then we will use our untouched reserves."

Experts report the liner developed more than 85,000 horsepower.

SEEK LIFE 3,000 YEARS OLD IN TUT TOMB SEEDS

Yonkers, N. Y., June 24.—Experiments with powerful electric lamps to supplement sunlight in forcing the rapid growth of plants will be made by the Thompson Institute for Plant Research, Dr. William Crocker, research director, said today. The institute, which William B. Thompson endowed with $500,000 and which eventually will receive $2,500,000, is under construction and will be fully equipped for operation by October.

Dr. Crocker, who has had wide research experience as head of the department of plant physiology of the University of Chicago, said seeds found in the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen would be used in experiments to see whether they had preserved life throughout the thousands of years they had been buried.

CAISSON STRIKE COLLAPSES; MEN SEEK JOBS BACK

Builders' Chief Opposes "Open Shop" Order.

Refused support of other Chicago building trades, the unauthorized strike of caisson diggers, led by Martin Egan, Seattle I. W. W. labor agitator, which halted $100,000,000 worth of construction last Friday, practically collapsed yesterday when the building workmen began to drift back to their old jobs.

What was regarded as another important factor in the reëstablishment of peace in the building industry developed late in the afternoon. On last Thursday Fred W. Armstrong, general manager of the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis award, announced that the Sprinkler Fitters' union had been placed on the open shop list. Some trouble existed over the apprenticeship question.

Craig Takes Another View.

Edward M. Craig, secretary of the Building Construction Employers' association yesterday took the stand that the power vested in the citizens' committee to declare building trades open shop expired with the Landis award agreements on June 1. Officials of the Building Trades council said that Mr. Craig's attitude will help to instill workers with the confidence that they will get a square deal from the contractors.

While some caisson diggers refused to return to work at the wage rate of $1.10 an hour, several construction companies reported that some of their men had resumed work. On other jobs the strikers appeared, but refused to go to work when their wage demands of $1.25 an hour were rejected.

The Building Construction Employers' association will hold a special meeting tomorrow to decide on what action to take regarding the diggers still on strike. Mr. Craig said the employers will stand "pat" on the present wage rate.

Assails Citizens' Committee.

The citizens' committee was held responsible for present "Red" activities in the building industry by Edward Ryan, preident of the Building Trades council.

"When organizations like the citizens' committee attempt to disrupt bona fide trades unionism, a fertile field is created for "Red" agitators to sew seeds of discontent among workers," Mr. Ryan said. "It's only in times of unrest that these trouble makers have a chance to spread their insidious propaganda."

ANOTHER STATE WITNESS IN GRAFT TRIAL VANISHES

Needed to Tell of Coal Deals in Lundin Case.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

James Wilson, 4821 Sheridan road, an employé of the Chest Creek Coal company, is the second important witness in the school board conspiracy trial who has disappeared on the eve of being called to the stand, Attorney Frederick A. Brown, special assistant attorney general, said yesterday.

"Our investigators learned that he apparently came into sudden possession of funds about a week ago and left for parts unknown," Mr. Brown said.

The other witness is Harry J. Brinkman, former bookkeeper for the Hiawatha Phonograph company. He left his home about two weeks ago, after having been served with a subpoena. He was wanted to testify regarding sales of phonographs to the schools.

"These men will be cited for contempt as soon as they return to Chicago, whenever that is," Mr. Brown said. "We will ask that they be sent to jail."

Wilson Under Indictment.

The testimony of the two men was needed to close the case for the state this week. Wilson was indicted with members of the school board, but was given a separate trial. It was planned to nolle prosse his case if he gave the same evidence of coal deals that he gave to the grand juries.

When the printing contracts are concluded tomorrow the state will take up the insurance phase of the indictments. "What are we here for?" has been the persistent question of Attorney Charles E. Erbstein, representing Virtus C. Rohm, who is named in connection with insurance deals. The attorneys for the state promise to show him this week.

Will Confer on Funds.

Members of the attorney general's staff will confer with Charles S. Peterson of the county board Tuesday with reference to funds for continuing the investigation and prosecution of city hall graft cases. On July 1 there will be only $6,000 left in the special fund of $50,000 which was set aside for the investigation. There is $30,000 left in the fund for the Lundin trial. There may be a new appropriation or a switching of funds.

With these words ringing in their ears the women and the boys left the courtroom, still confident, they said, in their plea of self-defense from a "drunken demon."

The jury retired at 4:41. It deliberated all through the sultry night on the sixth floor of the Criminal court building. On the third floor relatives of the defendants remained all night. The final verdict, reached at 6:45, was reported to the judge at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning.

FREED ONE BY ONE

It was shortly before 10 that the defendants were brought in. They were the only fresh, alert looking people in the sticky courtroom. The jurors, fagged from their sleepless night, entered the box. Everybody tried to keep everybody else quiet.

The four peices of paper were handed to Judge Hopkins. They crackled in the breeze of the electric fan as the judge passed them on to Matt Vogel, the clerk.

Nee and Schade teetered rigidly forward in their chairs. The two women leaned forward. The clerk's voice isn't very heavy.

A few words of formal phrasing, then the name of the defendant, Frances Nee, a pause, and then, "not guilty." Nee's face, deathly pale, didn't register. But his body flopped back in the chair, his arms and legs swung into position, and he stared right ahead. Schade and the two women relaxed a bit.

Then the Others in Order.

Schade's acquittal was read next. The two boys, shoulder to shoulder, half turned away from their former hostesses.

Vogel cleared his throat, thumbed the next oblong slip of paper, and read the words that made Myna Pioch a free woman.

"My God—ooh-oo," she breathed into her face veil, and sagged back against the chair back.

"They always read the guilty ones last. There's still a chance to hook the widow," a court fan whispered, and the crowd hunched forward.

But Anna McGinnis was found "not guilty." And the crowd, met as a legal aftermath of the shooting of "Mike" McGinnis, city fireman, began to enjoy itself.

"My boy, my boy!" screamed Mrs. A. Schade, and her capable hands enveloped him in an hysteric, joyful embrace. The other relatives followed. They formed a cordon about the two boys, hiding them from the sight of the two blonde women.

Mrs. McGinnis motioned to her counsel, Attorney Ninian Welch. "I'm so glad I'm free," she mumbled. "I'd like to thank the jury. Can I?"

Attorney Welch advised her to keep her seat and he thanked the twelve men on behalf of his clients.

Myna, admitting that she had not slept for four nights, said, "And last, all night, I could hear in my ears those men talking us over. It was terrible. I'm awful sorry I had to shoot "Mike" that night, but I had to do it to save my life, and to protect my sister's."

Vote First on Myna.

The decision which sent the flaxen haired twosome back to the community was not easily arrived at, according to Robert T. Poor, 623 North Euclid avenue, Oak Park, foreman of the jury.

Four ballots were taken on the guilt of Myna, he said. Myna was chosen, he explained, because she had admitted firing the fatal shot, and her acquittal meant almost automatic acquittal for the others.

The first ballot was 6 to 6. The second swung 8 around to acquittal, 4 against. The third was 11 to 1. And the fourth, taken about dawn yesterday, was unanimous for the girl's acquittal.

VIEWS OF THE JURORS

"When the acquittal of Myna was voted," said Mr. Poor, "the jury lost no time in voting unanimously for the acquittal of the other defendants."

Matthew R. Baenziger, 2128 Leland avenue, the juror, who was notified during the trial of the birth of a son to his wife, said of the decision: "Everybody, with the possible exception of one or two, felt that Myna fired the shot that killed McGinnis. It was generally agreed that she did it because McGinnis, whom we believed drunk at the time, attempted to beat the two girls."

The last man to give in for acquittal, according to Baenziger, was "Steve" Laitnanik, 1212 Union avenue. "Steve," he explained, "seemed to have an idea that the women did it because they wanted to get rid of McGinnis. He said the boys were not guilty."

Question of His Sobriety.

There was considerable argument among the jurors, it was brought out, as to whether or not McGinnis was drunk. "We finally all agreed he was," a juror said, "due largely to the testimony of Clements. He refused to tell what McGinnis and he had had to drink in the saloon the afternoon before the shooting."

Juror Charles Klimunda Jr. admitted a hard time, saying, "We wrangled all night. There was a little doubt in our minds all along about the state's case. But we agreed we wouldn't discuss our verdict," and for the second time during the conversation he hung up the telephone receiver.

Points to List of Acquitted.

Assistant State's Attorney Rittenhouse, commenting on the verdict, referred to the list of women acquitted of murder in Cook county in recent years. The sisters, he pointed out, now join hands with Cora Orthwein, well dressed north side beauty, acquitted a few years ago of murder.

"If it had been robbery or larceny," he said, "the jury wouldn't have been out twenty minutes before it brought back a guilty verdict on a corresponding amount of evidence. But husband killing—that seems to be different.

"Of course, the shots were fired after a quarrel. That's natural. There never was a domestic tragedy that was not preceded by a quarrel, perhaps several of them. But Mrs. McGinnis interpreted, to the jury, every misunderstanding with her husband as a beating from him."

Prosecutor Peden, declaring the verdict to be a "disappointment to any one who believes in law and order," stated his belief in the essential honesty of the jurors. However, he urged a greater diversity of jurors.

"No matter how well a case is prepared the verdict is not guilty if there is a woman in it that can be called even passably good looking," said First Assistant State's Attorney Edgar A. Jonas. "Blonde curls seem to have a faculty of making juries forget the most clinching evidence."

Defense Jubilant.

Attorney Welch, receiving congratulations on the verdict said: "A woman should be treated with consideration. And men, real men, have to treat her with consideration. In paying his tribute to womanhood he pointed out that "the Statue of Liberty is a woman."

As the sisters made their way down the front steps of the county jail, smiling at the crowds that jammed the entrance, somebody in the crowd yelled, "Remember Tillie Klimek."

And the group of cheering spectators paused a moment to laugh at the fate of the squat, dumb Polish woman who was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of her third husband on the very day that Mike McGinnis was killed.

But the sun came out. And the crowd forgot Tillie as they watched the golden hair of the sisters glisten.

WIDOW SEIZED AS POISONER OF FIRST HUSBAND

Mrs. Carl Tucholski, of 2428 West Forty-eighth street, was arrested yesterday on a charge of having poisoned her first husband, Mateusz Sieniantowski, who died on May 4. Enough arsenic to kill several persons was found in the vital organs of Sieniantowski, whose body was exhumed in Resurrection cemetery after his three sons, Joseph, Stanley, and Charles, had communicated their suspicions to Coroner Oscar Wolff.

Tucholski, to whom Mrs. Sieniantowski was married within a month of her husband's death, was locked up at the detective bureau for questioning.

As soon as the coroner's chemist, William D. McNally, reported his finding, the coroner communicated with the police, and Lieut. John Egan, fearing the couple might flee, arrested both without the formality of obtaining a warrant.

CAPTAIN INVENTS AUTOMATIC GUN FOR AIR DEFENSE

Army Also Announces a New Browning Invention.

Albany, N. Y., June 23.—[Special.]—An automatic cannon of thirty-seven millimeters designed especially for aircraft defense has been perfected at the Watervliet arsenal by the United States army ordnance experts, it was announced today.

The invention involves a new principle that is expected to put heavy automatic cannon in the field before another war.

Recent tests at the arsenal have convinced them that the gun, invented by Capt. Thomas M. Jervey, ordnance department U. S. A., brings to a successful culmination years of experimental and development work.

Many Experiments Fail.

For more than six years inventors and ordnance experts throughout the world have been endeavoring to apply the principle of automatic fire to a weapon larger than fifty caliber. At the Watervliet arsenal today are at least fifteen mechanical developments of the same type of idea that have not been successful. Now comes the Jervey gun as a success.

The new weapon, manufacture of which will be begun as soon as the final tests are completed, was designed primarily as airplane armament. It shoots one and one-tenth pound shells of either high explosive or armor piercing variety in bursts of five.

Its application as an anti-aircraft weapon, as tank or anti-tank armament or against machine gun emplacements is said to be equally feasible by its developers, however.

Its ammunition will include a shell so sensitive that it will explode upon contact with the silken wing surface of an airplane.

Gun is Light.

An aluminum alloy, used wherever possible, makes the gun's weight of 160 pounds extremely light for its size.

"The assured success of Captain Jervey's gun and of another being developed by John Browning, the famous American machine gun and automatic rifle inventor, became known at about the same time," Colonel W. D. Westervelt, arsenal commandant, said today.

"Mr. Browning has not yet given a demonstration of his gun, but it is known that it is being developed along the machine gun principle, while the Jervey gun utilizes the cannon idea."

HARDING TELLS OF HELP GIVEN U. S. FARMERS

How Government Aided in Reviving Business.

ing, 33 cents for drilling, $2.50 for cutting, $2.25 for threshing, 72 cents for hauling, 85 cents for seed, and $1.40 for taxes. That made a total of $13.40.

"Now, how much do you get for your wheat?" asked the President.

"Eighty-five cents a bushel," said Neal.

"Eighty-five cents!" the President said, evincing surprise. "Why, the price of wheat the other day on the Chicago market was $1.25!"

"Yes. But we must deduct from that 22 cents a bushel for freight, the commission for the merchant who buys our wheat and other things," said Neal. "All we get is 85 cents."

Figures Show Small Profit.

"How many bushels to the acre?" the President asked.

"We figure about eighteen bushels, but it won't all run that."

The President figured it up. Eighteen bushels at 85 cents would net the farmer $15.30.

He admitted it was a pretty close margin.

"We can't make much money out of wheat under present conditions," said Neal. "In fact, we lose on some of it."

The President went away reflecting on what he had seen and learned under the burning sun of the Kansas field.

Cheered by the Farmers.

The Kansas farmers cheered their President as he wiped the perspiration from his brow during the brief harvesting operation, in which he whole-heartedly participated.

The President actually enjoyed the experience, which made him feel thoroughly at home with the farmers later at the Hutchinson fair grounds, where he delivered the third set speech of his transcontinental tour.

President Harding sought to impress on his rural audience the fact that no government in the world had done as much for its farmers as had the present administration at Washington since the financial blight which struck just before he was inducted into office and which reacted in the elections of 1922. To prove his assertion, the President embarked on a recital of legislative enactments accomplished by congress during his administration, ending with the farm credits act in the last session.

Account of Stewardship.

It was a formidal citation that the President presented in an effort to convince the American farmer that his interests, far from being neglected by his government, are being given the most serious possible attention.

Admitting at the outset that American agriculture had been hit hardest of all by the reaction of the war, the President reminded his hearers that they were much better off today than the farmers of earlier years despite existing difficulties.

The farmer had not alone suffered. All business and industry had suffered, with agriculture getting the strongest blow. His only wonder was that all had escaped "with so relatively little of disaster."

The President confessed a "very frank pride" in the government's achievements to better a situation against which the farmer had justly complained and said that the enactments already in effect had brought about great improvement.

On Way to the Peak.

"We have been officially informed," he said, "that, owing to improved conditions, the farm products of the country for 1922 were worth $2,000,000,000 more than they were in 1921. Clearly we are through the worst of the depression and can reasonably expect gradual improvement."

The Republican tariff, war finance corporation, and the new farm credits act, the President thought, have been most influential in improving the condition of agriculture.

"The combination of effective protection, easier credits, and the operations of the war finance corporation," he said, "quickly arrested the downward trend and started agriculture on the upgrade once more."

The President cited also the rejuvenation of the federal farm loan board, legislation to prevent harmful gambling in agricultural futures, the act for control and regulation of the meat packers, important reductions of freight rates on agricultural products, removal of restrictions upon the operation of the joint stock land banks, the act authorizing formation of irrigation districts, and the law which authorizes extending the time of payments due from irrigation farmers to the government.

Every One Has Benefited.

"I tell you," the President said, and his interested listeners applauded vigorously, "I am proud to be able to come to you today and tell you of what has been done, because in doing it we have served not only the farmer but everybody else in this land."

The recent agricultural credit legislation the President described as "the crowning achievement" of the entire list.

"I do not hesitate to express confidence that this scheme of agricultural credits," he said, "taken in connection with the other enactments I have described, furnishes the basis for the most enlightened, modern, sound and efficient scheme of agricultural finance that has been set up in any country, and will enable the farmer in no distant future to free himself from obstacles which have made it difficult heretofore to conduct farm operations upon a sound, businesslike basis."

Eager for "Fair" Price.

The President thoroughly agreed that what was needed was fair prices, but it was his opinion that the end would be much more quickly accomplished through the new system of agricultural credits than in any other way.

The President concluded by citing the history of agricultural life and showing the great emancipation that had been wrought through the centuries in the transition from slavery to freedom and equality of those who till the soil.

"The farm emancipation in this country," he said, "has been apace with other advancement." He concluded with a tribute to the farmer as "the stalwart defender of the American heritage."

Early this evening the President and party continued their trip in the special train to Denver.

Purifying Water

BY SELBY MAXWELL.

It is no longer necessary to use chlorine tablets to purify water suspected of harboring typhoid germs. Chlorine's cousin, iodine, will turn the trick just as well, according to tests carried out in the army. Major A. P. Hitchens of the medical corps says that two drops of a seven per cent tincture of iodine in a quart of water will kill all the typhoid and cholera germs present in less than half an hour.

Add two drops of ordinary tincture of iodine to a quart of water and let it sit for half an hour. No matter how foul the water was before, it will now be fit to drink. The amount of iodine will be too small to taste. The cost of this method is practically nothing.

Iodine is a violent poison for all lower forms of life, such as disease germs, while it is harmless for people in extremely small amounts. Human parasites are particularly vulnerable to its action. The diagram shows the simple outfit needed to purify water with iodine.

HARDING'S VIEWS ON RAILS MAY BE ISSUE IN CAPITOL

Washington, D. C., June 23.—[Special.]—President Harding's advocacy of railroad consolidation in his Kansas City speech makes it certain that this question will form one of the major issues of the next session of congress.

There is no assurance, however, that congress will view with favor the proposal "to stimulate the consummation" of consolidation which is permissive under the transportation act. Opposition is in prospect to any form of compulsory consolidation, both among some members of congress and among some railway officials.

Another proposal referred to by the President, that of a nationwide car pool, is likely to meet with the opposition of the railroads, as several railroads already definitely are on record as opposing such legislation.

President Harding Is Invited to Yukon Territory

Dawson, Y. T., June 23.—President Harding has been given an official invitation to visit a foreign land—the Yukon territory, part of the Dominion of Canada. The Yukon legislature yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution extending the invitation.

EXPLORER SAILS TO RESUME WORK IN ARCTIC AREAS

Wiscasset, Me., June 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—Capt. Donald B. MacMillan sailed late today in the 115 ton auxiliary schooner Bowdoin to resume his explorations in the Arctic. Work begun on the Baffin land expedition, from which he returned last September, will be continued in Ellesmere land, northern Greenland.

While he expects to return in fifteen months Dr. MacMillan may be compelled to stay until the fall of 1925.

At Cape Sabine the vessel will be allowed to freeze in for the winter, 660 miles from the north pole. The principal exploration will be a dog team trip over the ice cap of Ellesmere land, and down the other side into Eureka sound where big coal deposits found in 1914 will be investigated.

GAS VICTIM IDENTIFIED.

The body of a man found asphyxiated on Friday at 103 Throop street was identified yesterday as that of Thomas B. Stratton, 56 years old, a photographer, who came to Chicago recently from Hopkinsville, Ky.

IN the scene depicted in the beautiful three-color cover painting for this issue, the artist, Paul Strayer, fancifully contrasts the present and the past. The painting, which is entitled "Henry Hudson and the Half Moon," shows the ship of this famous English navigator, who explored the Hudson in 1609, swinging at her moorings in the river, while in the background appear the towering buildings of New York City of today.

Allies and Turks Agree to Speed Up Conference.

BY VINCENT SHEEAN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LAUSANNE, June 23.—The near east peace conference deadlock ended at [illegible] o'clock this afternoon when the allies met the Turks in the first general session for several weeks to consider all the remaining questions.

The chief progress recorded was an agreement by both sides to rush the conference full speed ahead. The regular schedule will be resumed and all the committee work is expected to be finished Monday.

Take Up Remaining Questions.

The delegates, meeting at Chateau Doutchy, decided on the order of the day and then resolved into a committee to take up the remaining questions.

As a political committee, it discussed the evacuation of Constantinople, agreeing that this would be determined after all other problems are settled. The status of Mosul is definitely settled, according to a previous project for British withdrawal. It was decided that any differences arising within nine months after the treaty is signed would be referred to the old Hague tribunal.

Turks to Legalize Loans.

The Turks also for the first time agreed to consider legalizing loans made to the sultan. This problem was sent to experts for a report Monday.

As an economic committee the delegates considered pre-war concessions. The Turks maintained that these should be settled in Angora and have no connection with the treaty. The Ottoman debt question was not discussed, because, while the British and French had received instructions, the Italian delegation is still awaiting its government's orders.

BULGARS TO BE PATIENT

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Sofia, June 23.—Bulgaria is not insisting upon getting a port on the Aegean sea at present, although she regards such an outlet necessary to her economic life, Premier Zankoff told The Tribune today. France, England and America, he felt, realize the necessity of such a port for Bulgaria and he expected in his own good time to arbitrate with the Turks and Greeks to obtain the necessary territory.

At present, although its relations with Turkey are friendly, Bulgaria is not making any combinations or agreements with Angora, as it appreciates it possibly might interfere with the allied interests there.

Sees Problems Settled.

M. Zankoff also believes the allies eventually will succeed in settling the Macedonian question, one of the greatest disturbing elements in the Balkans. As the Greeks and Turks would have to make sacrifices to give Bulgaria an outlet to the Ægean, the powers now governing the Macedonians probably would be compelled to grant a greater degree of autonomy before the Macedonian question is solved.

Owing to the bitterness of the hatreds in the Balkans M. Zankoff believed permanent peace here is impossible without the great powers of Europe smoothing over the friction. Bulgaria, concentrating upon interior affairs, intends to continue a pacific foreign policy, not pressing either the Macedonian question or a port for immediate solution.

Obstructs Justice

MISS MARY LAMBERT.

A charge of obstructing justice will be placed against Miss Mary Lambert, formerly an actress at Long Beach, Cal., who was arrested yesterday after she is alleged to have aided in the escape of her sweetheart, Henry T. Kraft, until recently a resident at the Holland hotel, 1256 East 53d street. Kraft jumped his bonds in Louisville, Ky., recently after he had been sentenced to serve eighteen months in prison for stealing an automobile.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

In the coloroto section today the boat crews of Harvard and Yale are shown at practice with a caption stating they were to take part in the intercollegiate regatta on the Hudson at Poughkeepsie. This is an error as the Yale-Harvard race took place on the Thames at New London, Conn., Friday, the Blue crews winning all three races.

ELLIS ISLE EVILS LAID TO LACK OF SPACE, RED TAPE

New York, June 23.—[Special.]—With the British house of commons flaying Ellis island and threatening retaliation if the American government does not change its methods of detaining crown subjects, actual deportations of Britons, shut out by the immigrant quota law, began today.

For the first time in the history of the two nations British subjects were barred from entering the United States because a specified number of them had already been admitted within a year. Six were taken from Ellis island today and placed on ships which will sail tomorrow for England. They included Miss Maude Clemons, Miss Dorothy Vokes, Mrs. M. E. Dobson and two children, all of whom had come here to join relatives.

There are fifty-seven Britons still left on the island, fifteen of whom are stowaways. The latter would be deported regardless of the quota law, but the remaining forty-two were excluded simply because the British quota of 77,000 per annum under the Dillingham act has been filled. All excluded aliens have the right of appeal to the secretary of labor, and these Britons are anxiously waiting for the final ruling from Washington.

What Inquiry Revealed.

Concerning the criticisms of Ellis islan din the house of commons, an investigation today resulted in these revelations:

There is too small a force of inspectors passing on the fitness of aliens, and this is largely responsible for overcrowding of detention quarters.

The morale of the force is at so low an ebb that team work with the commissioner and with the appeal board in Washington is impossible.

That it is admitted by Commissioner Tod that British women are lodged in one room where 150 or 200 women and children from southern Europe also are lodged. They sleep on iron wired beds with only a blanket.

Conditions in these rooms are far from sanitary. Many aliens have been stricken with disease in the rooms, and some have died.

Choked on Red Tape.

Too many aliens are held for special inquiry, thus choking the channels of appeal to Washington and crowding the detention quarters.

Much of the trouble on Ellis island is the result of a breach between Commissioner Robert E. Tod and Commissioner General William Walter Husband, head of the bureau at Washington, and this breach, more than interference of politicians, brought about the resignation of Tod.

At this period of the fiscal year, which ends June 30, Ellis island should be nearly vacant, but the station proper holds 830, with 250 more in the hospital.

There have been many cases of scarlet fever. One case was that of a talented Hungarian girl, Margit Treis, whose mother was excluded by the quota law. The girl refused to accept exemption as a classical dancer unless her mother was released as an artist. Remaining in the detention quarter two weeks, the daughter was stricken with scarlet fever.

Answers London Complaints.

Commissioner Tod's answer to the complaints that English women are lodged with hundreds of other women from southern and southeastern Europe, is that it is impracticable to segregate the English, since every other nationality would claim similar privileges. He says the British steamship companies do not separatate the English traveling in their steerage quarters from the southern Europe immigrants.

One of the specific complaints made in the house of commons was that two English women, Mrs. Lucy Bedoe and Mrs. Emily Ramsden, were fed on bread and water on the island. Commissioner Tod flatly contradicted this charge today. He said the women were only detained one day and that the bill of fare for that day was: Breakfast, Prunes, oatmeal with milk, bread and butter and coffee; dinner, Lima bean soup, potted beef with vegetables and rice pudding; supper, macaroni with tomato sauce, blackberry jelly with tea, coffee, or milk.

Basis of All the Evil.

Congestion is the basis of all the evils of Ellis island, and congestion could be greatly reduced by the preliminary inspectors. Many cases are held for special inquiry on trifling, stupid technicalities which could have been disposed of by the first inspector. The attitude of Commissioner Tod is for a rigid enforcement of the law. The inspectors regard Tod's regime as "hard boiled," and they will take no chances of being called down by admitting an alien so long as there is a technical ground for holding said alien for inquiry.

"The red tape of Ellis island," has grown to be routine under the régime of Commissioner Tod, particularly since his breach with the commissioner general. This breach began a year ago when Tod sought to establish on Ellis island a board of final appeal. His hope was to settle all cases promptly, reduce the number of detentions and prevent congestion. Commissioner General Husband demurred to this program and Tod's appeal board, after serving two weeks, was abolished. Tod and Husband have been at odds ever since and the inspectors have been piling up detentions on silly and absurd technicalities when, if left free to exercise their common sense, they might have spared thousands of aliens their long detention.

INTOLERANCE.

"The most disquieting phenomenon of the times," says the head of a great university, "is the outbreak of intolerance and the reign of prejudice which seems to have seized the American people. The right of the majority to rule is conceived of as a charge to translate a prevalent and often ill formed opinion into a code of conduct to which all must conform."

The phenomenon is conspicuous, and unquestionably it represents a serious danger. There is, however, an encouraging recognition of the evil and a growing resistance. Intolerance is a matter of education and its appearance proves that our education in fundamentals is inefficient. As a matter of fact our public schools have not tackled vigorously and effectively the first duty of a public school, the clear and simple instruction in the fundamentals of our American system. We have in the grammar schools a bit of American history. How much exposition goes with it? Very little, we suspect. We have in the secondary schools a topic called civics or civil government. How far does its teaching carry the pupil toward a clear conception of our constitutional principles and how they were evolved in our experience?

Tolerance, for example, is one of the chief tests of our system. It is expressed in our basic law in the guaranty of religious liberty. It is a principle that ought to be explained and impressed upon our youth while their viewpoint and standards, habits of thought and feeling, are being formed.

The case of Mr. Bryan is an astonishing example of ignorance of this principle. Its significance is not in the individual, but in the fact that an individual capable of Mr. Bryan's blissful disregard of liberty of thought and private conscience should be an influential leader among the people. Hundreds of thousands, nay, millions of our people, are showing the same indifference to the principle which protects their own opinions, and the tendency, it seems to us, has grown among us to try to impose on the private conscience standards approved by majorities, or perhaps by minorities effective because of the indifference of the majority.

MARK MICHIGAN.

Michigan Agricultural college, we are informed, is now sponsoring a campaign to raise Michigan fruit products to a place in popular favor which they have long deserved, but have not always consciously attained. The idea is said to have been inspired by the tremendously successful work of the California fruit growers. The latter, through national advertising, coöperative marketing, and strict attention to maintaining the quality and attractiveness of their products, have developed a constant market from coast to coast.

Persons in every state of the Union buy California fruits because they have been educated to believe that California fruits are supreme, and because they have learned to depend upon their being as advertised. That is nothing more than sound business practice, but it has netted untold millions of dollars to California producers.

Michigan produces fruits and berries of equal and, in some lines, better quality. Residents of Michigan know it. Some discriminating residents of adjoining states know it. But that is about as far as it goes. The market is limited because the quality of the Michigan fruits has not become associated in the public mind with Michigan. When we bite into an especially luscious Michigan peach we say: "That certainly is fine." But when we bite into a California peach we say: "This California peach certainly is perfect."

Michigan's need is to identify its products. Then, learning that certain Michigan fruits and berries are the best in the world, the marketing housewife will demand the Michigan product. Otherwise, as at present, the majority of buyers merely consider themselves lucky in finding a basket of especially fine fruit, but do not know what to ask for to obtain a duplicate basket on another day. A campaign of advertising to bring the facts to public attention, backed by a system of supervision which will keep up the quality of all products offered under the Michigan brand, will return great dividends to the farmers and gardeners of the state. They will be earned dividends, too.

"$100 AND COSTS"—A SMOKE SERMON.

"Smokeless coal costs too much," pleaded J. L. Moore, vice president of the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company, before Municipal Judge Adams on a charge of violating the anti-smoke ordinance.

"We'll make it so it will be far cheaper for you to burn smokeless coal," the judge replied. "Pay the clerk $100 and $7.75 costs."

That was only one incident of one day in the Municipal court, which saw six other offenders similarly punished, but it was an incident containing the text of an entire sermon on the smoke evil. The offender's plea illustrates the common but fallacious belief of virtually every contributor to the smoke nuisance. Almost invariably they assert that smokeless coal is too expensive. If intelligence and reason cannot convince them that smoke is a waste, it is well to have judges bring the lesson home as Judge Adams did.

Use of smokeless coal, or, better, complete combustion of soft coal, including most of what now is wasted in smoke, is, in reality, one of the greatest economies which could be undertaken. It is surprising to hear a business such as that represented by Mr. Moore taking a contrary position. Soot is wasted fuel. Worse, it is a municipal liability, costing millions annually for laundry and other cleaning, rendering the city unattractive and impairing health. The brief sermon preached to Mr. Moore should be impressed upon every business man in Chicago and upon every apartment or home owner. If the reason in it does not reach them, more frequent repetition of the words, "one hundred dollars and costs," should do so.

AMERICAN AND ALIEN ISSUES.

An organization entitled the International Association of Civitan clubs, convening in the national capital, wants to establish a national policy of education in international questions and instruction in citizenship in the grade schools.

We do not know what a Civitan club is, but we are getting familiar with the idea their congress seems to favor—namely: that somehow it is of utmost importance to our citizens, even our embryo citizens, that they "understand international questions."

That, as a theory, may be argued plausibly. But in application it calls for considerable limitation. So far as knowledge concerning international questions directly affecting our country is concerned, we should be the better for more of it. But the ardent apostles of this theory are generally infected by the notion that Americans need to know about international questions in order that we may be moved to take a more direct and active part in the politics of Europe. They are internationalists, advocates of the league or other schemes under which we may take part in deciding any and all differences between nations. By college professors, clergymen, authors, an army of our intellectuals, a doctrine is being disseminated to the effect that the prime object of this republic is not that of other nations—namely: to provide for its own people, but is primarily to arrange the affairs of other peoples.

Thus we have Col. House, formerly Mr. Wilson's unofficial observer in excelsis, writing as follows: "Our people, native and foreign born, cherish the belief that this republic was created to become an instrument for the betterment of man and not merely a pleasant and safe abiding place."

It is astonishing how much hokum of that sort is heard among our so-called educated. An assertion like this of Mr. House is sure to bring rounds of applause in any polite audience, although, if it means what Mr. House would have it imply, it is not true. Our people, at least until the present moment, have cherished the belief that the republic was created for the American people and that by setting up what they proudly considered a model government they were serving the world sufficiently by offering it as an example for imitation. We believe "our people" are of the same mind still in spite of the extraordinary propaganda carried on to induce them to alter it.

To those who conceive it the essential duty of the American people to save Europe from itself popular instruction in foreign questions must seem pressingly needed. But to the rest of us it seems that what we need is instruction in the elements of American citizenship, in American history, in American principles and institutions. We do not need a greater stimulation of alien interests and sympathies, but less. The Civitan clubs had better think that over.

OUR OPPORTUNITY TO THE SOUTH.

The average American business man, we believe, assumes that Latin America consists largely of primitive peoples who promise little as customers. We have heard it said frequently that the possibilities of trade in South America are greatly exaggerated, and so they are by those who hope to sell great quantities of American goods in that continent without consideration of its needs and demands. But the possibilities of the South American market are, in fact, underestimated in this country, not exaggerated, provided we take the trouble to study the conditions of foreign commerce and the trend of development in that region. American trade and finance in Latin America have suffered from heedlessness and bad judgment. The opportunity is there but it needs to be cultivated.

Are the possibilities very great? We think they are. It is true that up to this time only about 10 to 15 per cent of our exports has been going to South and Central America, while about 25 per cent has gone to continental Europe and 33 per cent to the British empire. But Latin America is not only growing in population rapidly but will probably grow at a more rapid rate from now on. This growth, however, is not a sufficient measure of its commercial possibilities. More important by far is the fact that the standard of living, that is, the demands of the people, is steadily rising—and, what is most important of all, we can raise it by lending Latin America our resources of credit and skill.

For example, in 1900 the Cubans bought of us $26,513,400 worth of goods, or $17.67 per capita. In 1922 they bought $124,148,536, or $41.38 per capita. In Porto Rico in the same period the advance has been from $4,640,446, or $4.64 per capita, to $57,968,112, or $44.59. That is what foreign capital and enterprise have accomplished in developing purchasing power in these islands.

Take two South American countries easily accessible to us. In 1900 Venezuela bought $2,452,757 worth of our commodities, or $1.22 per capita. In 1922 the level had risen to $8,508,574, or $2.83. In the same period in Colombia the level rose from $2,710,689, or 60 cents per capita, to $19,564,017, or $3.26 per capita.

Let us realize the controlling principle of a sound policy. It is this: trade follows investment. We shall not get Latin American trade unless we invest in Latin America. Fortunately we have ample means to employ in the development of the tremendous resources of South America. We have also the experience and applied science needed by the South American nations, which thus far have been largely agricultural. By helping to initiate enterprises, by loans and investments, by helping to build and extend railroads, open mines, establish power and light utilities, construct roads, we shall create a demand for our manufactured products, raise the standard of living and purchasing power of the people, and earn substantial direct returns upon investment. Trade inevitably and for practical reasons goes to the country which advances capital, as the British long ago learned.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

The sun reaches its furthest north. The wild rose breaks into bloom and wild grapes fill the June evening with perfumes. The day is at its longest, the year is at its climax and the mighty clip which travels the rim of the world starts back. Reality has the opened peony, the blue spikes of larkspur, the full green of the oak. Futurity, marked by the south swing of the June sun, has the colored leaf, the thicket in seed, the waves of migration and the fall of snow. The sun is traveling south. The young green corn is a foot high, but the future is the yellow husk.

Trilliums have faded into the record of the past, but the wild rose blooms.

SAVING US MONEY.

It would be interesting to know just how much appreciation the President and his administration are going to get for their part in transforming an expected deficit of over $800,000,000 into a surplus of $200,000,000.

Different factors have produced that pleasant disappointment, such as the upturn in business and customs returns greater than were foreseen. But what we have to thank Mr. Harding for, if we are grateful for the saving of public funds, is his determined purpose to modernize the methods of government expenditure and his insistence upon executive economy.

Through the budgetary supervision established as a system by General Dawes and ably carried on by his successor as director of the budget, Gen. Lord, millions have been saved and will be saved so long as presidents support the director and his efforts persistently and whole heartedly as Mr. Harding has done. The result has been thus far that our government business is being reorganized in conformity with principles essential to success in private business, but we can be certain that politics and bureaucratic tendencies will creep back. If future presidents are neglectful or weak, they will regain control.

Our chief executives are never chosen because they are good executives, and a business conscience, when a president has one, is just good luck. Much will depend upon the American public's reception of the success of Harding's effort to economize and reorganize government on business lines. Economy is a virtue to which we pay perfunctory tribute. We kick because taxes are high but we have very little interest in undramatic measures to reduce them. What we like is something spectacular, usually a political hocus pocus.

The achievement in administrative reform of Mr. Harding's government is a substantial service to the nation, and Mr. Harding has reason to be proud of it, even if it is inadequately appreciated by his fellow citizens. In fact it is the more honorable that it is a service which was not likely to return political dividends.

COSTLY ECONOMY.

John J. Sloan, president of the board of local improvements, remains of the belief that his proposal of depressing South Water street nine feet below its present level and bridging it at the cross streets should be adopted in preference to the Chicago Plan commission's proposal for a double decked street along the south shore of the river. His chief argument in favor of the single level depressed street is that of comparative economy. Such an argument, we believe, is not sufficient to justify it.

What is chiefly needed is an improvement in traffic conditions on and adjacent to South Water street. It is very doubtful that depressing the street would result satisfactorily in this respect. To be sure, north and south traffic could pass over it freely. But that benefit would be discounted by the increased congestion in South Water street itself, due to the necessity of all its traffic passing to and fro along it to two or three entrances and exits.

The point of economy also has not been entirely justified. Mr. Sloan estimates his plan to cost $5,000,000. It is doubtful that it could be completed for that sum. Nearly all South Water street buildings are founded on piles. If the street were dug out to a depth of nine feet it would necessitate heavy expenditures to maintain these buildings. Such excavation also would bring the lowered street level near or below the river level. A complicated and expensive engineering problem would be the result.

All these possibilities are offered as a substitute for the double decked street improvement, which would give a new exit for freight traffic and a new exit for passenger traffic from the south side of the loop, with the added advantages of wider streets and a beautiful boulevard drive along the river shore.

In the circumstances it would seem that if lack of funds must delay the plan commission's project it had better be delayed than perhaps permanently prevented through adoption of a complicated and expensive substitute, such as Mr. Sloan proposes.

THE MURDEROUS REVOLVER.

[Free translation from Abendpost.]

We have at present half a dozen robbers here who committed murder and are under sentence of death, still not one of them has yet been turned over to the hangman. The fault in this case is not with the police but with the other departmens of our administration.

Our legislators at Springfield, too, might do well to direct their attention to the increasing brigandage in our streets, instead of indulging in more or less silly debates about the sunlight saving time which the citizens of Chicago have adopted for their personal convenience. But quite especially some judges and state's attorneys should ponder on what is going on.

Take, for instance, a case like that of the Evanston "bandit queen," Honey Sullivan, who was allowed to go free with suspended judgment after the matter had been dragged around for months. And yet she had confessed to having committed several robberies with the gun in her hand. Another case, which is typical of the attitude of the up-to-date criminals, is that of the girl who, accompanied by her sweetheart, recently attacked a wealthy married couple in front of a garage in the midst of an exclusive Chicago residence district and shot the husband dead. It is not unlikely that more or less enterprising young ladies will follow this fascinating example of woman's emancipation.

Every day the lesson is brought home to us afresh that too much culpable indulgence is being shown to criminals. Public authorities who favor such an element should be returned to private life; otherwise the result may be that our law-abiding citizens will sooner or later arm themselves against the juvenile as well as the veteran street robbers who walk around with revolvers and are prepared to shoot down those who resist.

IN RE HEREDITY—HEADACHES.

H. D. writes: The headache subject interests me for I think that I have had all the kinds known to doctors. Father said I inherited them from my grandmother, but I never knew of her having had one. He suffered terribly with them and, to excuse grandmother's alibi, said that she outgrew them and that I would when I reached a certain age, but for him, the "certain age" did not come. In passing, let me state that the golden age of freedom from headaches has come to me and now I rarely have one.

I recall one especially hard case when a big family dinner was on with twenty-four guests, and we had roast turkey, venison and all the good things that go with such an old-time spread. I was absolutely disabled with a genuine sick-headache, one that deprived me of all that I might have eaten for a week past, but did not permit me to fill my empty stomach with the good things noted above until the next day and, in solitude, after the company had gone home.

One dear old greataunt then told me of the salt cure, but she added soda, common baking soda. I have used it many times since, and most effectively. Her formula was one half teaspoonful of salt and about half as much baking soda, dissolved in half a glassful of water, lukewarm, I think.

I sometimes thought that remedy was worse than the disease, but when on the verge of distraction with an unbearable headache, I took Aunt Hannah' prescription. Gulping it down as quickly as possible lest I gag too much at its taste, it might come up almost as soon as it went down, but the headache also left.

I give this for what it is worth and for the benefit of fellow sufferers. It has one advantage, the "makin's" usually are at hand and you do not have to send to the drug store for the ingredients.

For neuralgic headaches, a mustard paste at the back of the neck I have found effective, but I now think an electric pad mildly heated more agreeable to use. Heat, locally applied, seems to be what is needed.

Such headaches, I have found out, sometimes occur in consequence of taking a saline purge. My theory is that salt is a refrigerant and abstracts the heat from the body, causing neuralgia.

REPLY.

For those to whom your remedy will give relief, it can be recommended as being far less harmful than the coal tar remedies. While the latter are effective in giving relief, their continued use causes a condition of the blood which results in renewed headaches.

You would have difficulty in establishing the theory set forth in the last sentence of your letter. For a headache due to constipation a saline purge commonly gives quick relief. However, relief is not as quick as it is when an enema has been given. Sometimes the use of a saline purge makes a headache worse. One theoretical explanation is that it promotes absorption from the intestine by making the content liquid. Another is that it causes mild nausea and that mild nausea makes a headache worse.

HIS FEET ITCH.

R. F. writes: I saw in your column a cure for itching and blisters on the feet. I have been troubled in one foot in this manner. Will you run this cure in your column again soon?

REPLY.

Wear loose shoes. Sandals, cloth shoes or perforated shoes are preferable to the ordinary leather article.

Wash your feet each night with soap and water. Some use a kerosene wash before the soap wash.

After drying well, apply a 15 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. This should not be used oftener than twice a week.

The following dusting powder, to be used each night after washing and drying well, is recommended by Fantus: 60 parts alum, 40 parts talcum.

GIRL NEEDS EXERCISE.

J. B. writes: Is it good for a girl of 15 to wear a shoulder strap if she is round shouldered?

I have worn one for three months but find no results, only that at times I get a strong pain in my chest, which I think comes from the strap, because as soon as I take it off the pain goes away.

REPLY.

Exercise to build up the back and shoulder muscles is what you need.

Among such exercises are rowing, swimming, climbing, carrying weights on the head, fixing the hair.

MAYBE YOU'RE JUST AFRAID.

D. R. writes: I am a young man, 26 years old, afflicted with diseased tonsils. My doctor has advised removal of same, as the poison from these tonsils has gone through the system and weakened the heart and system in general.

Do you think there is any danger in an operation of this kind when I am in a run-down condition and my heart has been affected by this poison?

What effect would the ether have?

REPLY.

I wonder how much fear is mixed up with what you call "a run down condition"?

Infected tonsils can be removed by operation, by diathermy and by X-rays.

They can sometimes be treated by massage or cupping.

BUILDERS TRESPASS.

Chicago, June 17.—[Friend of the People.]—Some one is erecting a building at the southeast corner of East Delaware place and State streets. They are obstructing all of the sidewalk and half of the roadway. At the rate they are working it looks like they will have this sidewalk in use for some time to come. Can they be interfered with? L. H.

The sidewalk is now open, and the contractor has been ordered to confine his material to the amount of space prescribed by ordinance. The superintendent in charge of the ward will see that our order is complied with.
THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

WHAT THE LAW SAYS ABOUT SCREENS.

Chicago, June 18.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. To what extent is a landlord compelled to provide screens for the windows of the flat which we rent of him? He has furnished about half as many screens as there are windows, but this leaves two rooms without any screens at all. He implies that we can buy netting and tack it on the window frames, and this in a modern flat in a high class neighborhood—$60 per month.

2. How can we compel him to furnish suitable screens such as custom and conditions demand? F. D. R.

Sec. 2174 of the City Code provides that "it shall be the duty of every . . person . . owning or controlling . . any place where persons are housed . . and where foods are kept . . to maintain on all . . openings . . from April 15 to November 15 . . screens . ." Since this wording is equally applicable to landlord and tenant it authorizes the assessment of a penalty against either or both but as to their mutual civil rights leaves standing the rule that the tenant cannot in absence of express agreement charge the landlord the cost of repairs or alterations.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

OBJECTIONS TO PAVING FILED.

Chicago, June 15.—[Friend of the People.]—Kindly ascertain present status of proceeding to pave system of streets Oak Park avenue to Harlem avenue, Fullerton to Diversy.

Has the assessment been confirmed by the County court? Has the contract been let? Will paving be laid this year? A. P. B.

The proceeding for paving, with asphalt, the system of streets, Oak Park avenue, between Diversey and Fullerton avenues, etc., is now in court, but the confirmation of the assessment has been delayed because of objections filed by some of the property owners. As soon as the objections have been tried and disposed of, the assessment will be confirmed, and we will be ready to advertise for bids on the work. We hope to have the improvement under way this year.

There were 31,585 arrests, of which 819 were on criminal charges. The Americans lead in numbers, 11,164 of them having been in custody; the Irish follow with 10,691; the Germans are next with 4,825. Drunkenness and disorderly conduct were the most frequent causes of arrest, numbering 24,012. Baiquiri Harbor, Cuba, June 23, via dispatch boat to Kingston.—The last of General Shafter's 16,000 American soldiers were put ashore here late last night. The Spaniards, utterly misled by Admiral Sampson's fierce attack on Cabanas and the other fortifications to the west of Santiago harbor, sent the strongest body of their troops forty miles away from where the troops were landed.

The other bombardments, extending over a line of coast more than twenty miles long, prevented the massing of what Spanish soldiers were available on the east side of the harbor and the landing was accomplished without the loss of an American soldier.

Today the siege guns, mules and horses, ammunition, and other heavy supplies are being carried to the iron pier at Baiquiri. They are perfectly safe there.

IOWA MAKES IT SNAPPY.

Waterloo, Ia., June 18.—Mr. A. G. Pedersen in his letter printed in your columns of June 18 remarks that Iowa is a slow moving state. Mr. Pedersen should take a vacation and come to the best state in the Union and then he would make a clear, different remark about the Hawkeye state. To enlighten him on the bonus he should be advised that the bonds were sold on June 1, 1923, and at noon June 5 the writer had deposited his reward in the bank. So where does he get the idea of Iowa being slow?
J. P. JENSEN.

JUSTIFYING HAWKEYE PRIDE.

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—I would like to ask Mr. A. G. Pedersen, who has space in your column today, just what he means by "slow moving Hawkeyes." His inference, I suppose, is that Iowa is slow moving as compared to Illinois. Taking Chicago out of Illinois, just what has Illinois that Iowa has not, speaking, of course, of things that are good and show progress upon the part of her people?

If he will refer to statistics he will find that in many things Iowa has the edge. She leads in agricultural lines, stock raising, and poultry and egg producing. Her land is just as valuable, her banks as wealthy, her schools and colleges rank as highly, her people are as well educated, as refined, and in every way are the equals of the people of Illinois. She has as many churches in proportion to the population; her governor, legislators, and other officials are just as efficient as those of Illinois.

Her girls are just as good looking and her young men just as manly and a trifle more speedy, in athletics at least, as are those of Illinois.

All of this in face of the fact that Illinois is an older state from the point of settlement and development.

So which is really the slower moving, if either? A NATIVE OF IOWA.

LAW AND PERSONAL LIBERTY.

Chicago, June 16.—I wonder if the party who wrote "The Anti-Cigaret Law" article, which appeared as a reprint in your paper of June 15 ever stopped to realize that, although the "majority of people is determined to have its way," this same majority may not necessarily be in the right?

This country of ours, of which we are so justly proud, has been made a safer place in which to live, and our moral standard of living, as compared with other nations', has been raised partly because of that law which infringes upon some one's personal liberty and prevents him from doing those things which, it has been found, only tear down, degrade, and defame character and cause untold misery in the world. "Robbing a man of his personal liberty" has always been an alibi for that fellow who is so selfish and so unwilling to further progress that he fails to see the good that will come from a law which deprives him of some right he has always enjoyed, whether or not that right is for his own good or for the good of the coming generations.

Law is law. Some men think they ought to obey only those laws which they can conveniently obey, and if they break a law and "get away with it" they think they have done something quite clever. We need to build up more respect for and obedience to the laws of our land. Laws will not uplift any people unless they are obeyed by the people. The fact that a certain law may lead to the arrest of "prominent men, such as lawyers, mineowners, and bankers," is no excuse for condemning the law which they have disobeyed. These same "prominent" men are no better than the criminal whose disrespect for law is encouraged by the indifference to and disrespect for other minor laws by "respectable" citizens. A law is enacted to be obeyed, and so long as it remains a law American citizens of the state or states should stand for the enforcement of that law until it is made no longer a law by the proper procedure.
W. GLEN DARST.

PERHAPS WE NEVER MENTIONED THAT THE MINERS WERE ASSESSED $875,000 FOR DEFENSE.

Chicago, June 19.—Every little while you run through a slam about Herrin, Ill., and what happened down there a year ago, but do you ever mention that one of the judges of the Illinois Supreme court lives at Marion, where the cases were tried, and all of the defendants were found not guilty? If you want to be square, why don't you let your readers know the whole truth while you are at it? Or is it possible that you, like some others, are afraid of the whole truth when charges are made against unions and members of labor unions?
J. C. PARR.

OF WHAT VALUE IS THE H. C. L. COMMISSION?

Chicago, June 17.—May I be permitted to add my "more power" to Mrs. M. Hackett's succinct and very appropriate criticism of the H. C. L. commission in your issue of today? Short weight and high prices rule for ice, peddlers, vegetables, and coal, etc., and not an inspector in sight. And surely they are staples not ice creams, sundaes, sodas, etc.

I most cordially indorse your caption "Let H. C. L. Commission, Act or Quit." Surely we are entitled to some substantial results from this wonderful body of men. Mr. Mayor, what about putting two or three family raising mothers on this committee?

Was good 'nough law for us.
Ole Uncle S., sez he, "I guess,
Though physic's good," sez he,
"It doesn't foller thet he can swaller
Prescriptions signed 'J. B.,'
Put up by you an' me!"

We own the ocean, tu, John;
You mus'n't take it hard,
Ef we can't think with you, John,
It's jest your own back yard.
Ole Uncle S., sez he, "I guess,
Ef thet's his claim," sez he,
"The fencin' stuff'll cost enough
To bust up friend J. B.,

We know we've got a cause, John,
Thet's honest, just, an' true;
We thought 'twould win applause, John,

STRINGS OF WAR TIED TO RADIO BROADCASTING

World Commission Lays Down Ether Laws.

Washington, D. C., June 23.—[Special.]—The rules governing use of radio in war, as approved by the international commission, give belligerent and neutral powers the right to regulate the operation of radio stations within their own jurisdiction.

The radio rules presented by the eminent jurists appointed by the Washington conference on the limitation of armaments, to draw up measures which would minimize the horrors of warfare of the air, are much briefer than those regulating the use of airships, as reported in a dispatch sent from here and printed in THE TRIBUNE of this morning.

Aim at Reducing Disturbance.

The principal rules governing radio, as transmitted recently to the various powers, are as follows:

ARTICLE 1.

"In time of war the working of radio stations shall continue to be organized as far as possible in such manner as not to disturb the services of other radio stations. This provision does not apply as between the radio stations of opposing belligerents.

ARTICLE 2.

"Belligerent and neutral powers may regulate or prohibit the operation of radio stations within their jurisdiction.

ARTICLE 3.

"The erection or operation by a belligerent power or its agents of radio stations within neutral jurisdiction constitutes a violation of neutrality on the part of such belligerent as well as on the part of the neutral power which permits the erection or operation of such stations.

ARTICLE 4.

"A neutral power is not called upon to restrict or prohibit the use of radio stations which are located within its jurisdiction, except so far as may be necessary to prevent the transmission of information destined for a belligerent concerning military forces or military operations and except as prescribed by article 5.

Impartiality the Rule.

All restrictive or prohibitive measures taken by a neutral power shall be applied impartially by it to the belligerents.

ARTICLE 5.

Belligerent mobile radio stations are bound within the jurisdiction of a neutral state to abstain from all use of their radio apparatus. Neutral governments are bound to employ the means at their disposal to prevent such use.

ARTICLE 6.

1. The transmission by radio by a vessel or an aircraft, whether enemy or neutral, when on or over the high seas of military intelligence for the immediate use of a belligerent is to be deemed a hostile act and will render the vessel or aircraft liable to be fired upon.

2. A neutral vessel or neutral aircraft which transmits when on or over the high seas information destined for a belligerent concerning military operations or military forces shall be liable to capture.

Belligerents Have Rights.

ARTICLE 7.

In case a belligerent commanding officer considers that the success of the operation in which he is engaged may be prejudiced by the presence of vessels or aircraft equipped with radio installations in the immediate vicinity of his armed forces or by the use of such installations therein, he may order neutral vessels or neutral aircraft on or over the high seas:

1. To alter their course to such an extent as will be necessary to prevent their approaching the armed forces operating under his command; or,

2. Not to make use of their radio transmitting apparatus while in the immediate vicinity of such forces.

A neutral vessel or neutral aircraft which does not conform to such direction of which it has had notice, exposes itself to the risk of being fired upon. It will also be liable to capture, and may be condemned if the prize court considers the circumstances justify condemnation.

TRIAL OF SMALL CASE JURYMAN OPENS TOMORROW

John B. Fields, a member of the jury which acquitted Gov. Len Small of withholding interest on state funds, will be placed on trial in the Circuit court at Waukegan tomorrow morning on a charge of conspiracy to impede justice.

Eddie Kaufman and Eddie Courtney, Chicago gunmen who are alleged to have acted as agents in the jury bribing conspiracy, will be tried jointly with Fields. Judge Jacob Hopkins of Chicago will preside.

Courtney is now serving a term in the Joliet penitentiary. He and Kaufman are alleged to have given $1,800 to William J. Riley, a former Antioch bartender, who in turn passed part of the money to Fields at the close of the trial. Riley has confessed.

Michael J Boyle and Ben Newmark, witnesses, are still fugitives from justice.

ARRESTED AS EMBEZZLER.

Morris Weinstein, 2544 Cortez street, was arrested yesterday on a charge of embezzling $500 of the funds of Edgewood council, No. 87, North American Union, 50 West Randolph street, of which he was treasurer.

BRITISH FEAR LOSS OF ENTIRE GERMAN DEBT

Think Ruhr Seizure May Bring Collapse.

CANTERBURY, Eng., June 23.—[By The Associated Press].—Under Secretary Ronald McNeill, spokesman for the foreign secretary in the house of commons, defended the British government's attitude toward the Ruhr occupation in an address at Sturry, near here, today.

He saw no possibility of either Great Britain or France getting proper monetary redress for their frightful expenditures during the war merely by occupying a part of Germany's industrial district. The great fear was justifiable that, if the occupation were to continue, it would result in the social and economic collapse of the Germans. This the British might view with complete indifference, as far as Germany was concerned, except that it would extinguish the last hope or expectation of ever recovering from Germany the money she owed.

Mr. McNeill declared there was no difference between Great Britain and France on the main question of preserving the entente, but Great Britain had her rights in the reparations question and could not, in supporting France, lose sight of her own interests.

French Seek Secret Conference.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, June 23.—[Tribune Radio.]—There is still no sign of any reply from France to the British questionnaire, and it is now evident that the French are pressing by secret unofficial methods to induce Prime Minister Baldwin to consent to a meeting with Premier Poincare for a personal discussion, thus relieving the French of the necessity of committing themselves on paper to plans dealing with Germany.

The French also are trying to bring about the meeting at some small French place where the press can be excluded and the meeting conducted in secrecy. This also is distasteful to Mr. Baldwin, who is a great believer in publicity on international affairs and who does not intend to place himself in a position where his views may be misinterpreted.

It is understood that Mr. Baldwin would be willing to meet M. Poincare if he came over here, or he would even go to Paris for a discussion, but so far only after the British have received full replies to their questions.

Raise Ruhr Miners' Wages.

BERLIN, June 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—The wages of the miners in the Ruhr valley have been increased on an average of 25,000 marks per shift by the ministry of labor.

The mark showed an improvement of more than 14,000 points on the dollar in the Berlin exchange market today as a result of the governmental decree against unofficial speculation and the hesitation with which the dealers are awaiting further early steps which the government is reported to have under consideration. The official dollar rate for the day was announced this afternoon as from 121,196 to 121,804 marks, as compared with yesterday's 135,660 to 136,340.

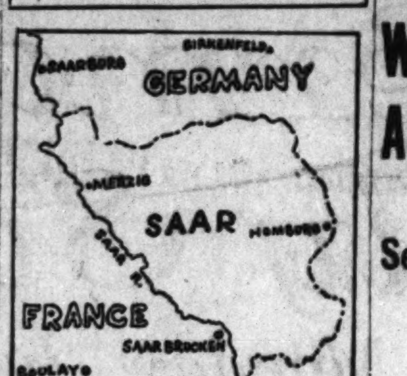
FOSTER MOTHER WINS CUSTODY OF YOUNG GIRL

Jeane Barkdull, 12 years old, was yesterday awarded to the custody of her foster mother and aunt, Mrs. Agnes Barkdull, 7344 Lafayette street, and the petition in habeas corpus of her real mother, Mrs. Charles Weiner, was dismissed by Superior Judge John J. Sullivan.

When Jeane was 7 months old she was given into Mrs. Barkdull's custody, and was later adopted. Mrs. Weiner, who divorced Charles Barkdull several years ago, insisted she had not given her consent to the adoption.

Judge Sullivan decided that she had given consent, and cited evidence that Mrs. Weiner had admitted when she filed the divorce bill that her only child had been legally adopted by Mrs. Barkdull.

CAUSE OF FRICTION



GENEVA, June 23.—The league of nations today communicated the text of the new French ordinances in the Saar valley to London, Paris, and Rome. The new laws, promulgated under date of June 18 by the commission government in the valley, contain much milder punishments for any misbehavior by a subject of the German population.

The French authorities at Geneva are overjoyed at the decision to abolish the ordinances of March 7, which have caused so much tumult in the British house of commons. One French official told THE TRIBUNE there is no chance of Lord Robert Cecil succeeding in getting the league council to make an inquiry ito the Saar now.

Despite the French hopes, Lord Robert intends to force an investigation of the French rule of the Saar, it was stated today.

M'CARL SAYS U. S. OFFICIALS MUST SPEND AS HE SAYS

Attorney General's Opinion Defied.

Washington, D. C., June 23.—Controller General McCarl, whose authority in the disbursement of public funds has been challenged several times by cabinet members and other officials, has informed President Harding that he regards his decisions as final, and appealable only to congress.

The controller general's "declaration of jurisdiction" came to light today in publication of monthly rulings by the general accounting office. The statement bore directly on an opinion handed down in May by the attorney general's office, construing portions of the federal employés' compensation act contrary to a decision by the controller general.

Disagrees with Opinion.

Earlier in the day, Mrs. Bessie P. Brueggeman, chairman of the commission, had announced that the compensation commission would "pay cases dealing with occupational diseases as formerly." Mr. McCarl had held that such payments were to be made only in cases where injuries were determinable in point of time.

"The opinion of the attorney general as to matters regarding which he may with propriety express an opinion," the letter said, "is entitled to most respectful consideration and great weight, but even such an opinion is advisory and lacks the force of a judicial determination."

"Broad discretion is vested in the employés' compensation commission by the act creating it, but there is no power given the commission to disregard the provisions of the law in granting awards or making payments of public funds To hold that, in the examination of the commission's accounts, this office may not refuse credit for payments made in violation of law would be to disregard the clear intent of the law, make ineffectual the provision that the action of this office 'shall be final and conclusive upon the executive branch of the government,' abandon all pretense of accountability for public funds, and destroy a sound accounting procedure that has been built up through the experience of more than a century."

Dill Pickler Charges Ex-Wife Is Kidnaper

Mrs. Dagmar Thoren Grossman of 5637 Loomis street, was arrested last night on a charge of kidnaping made by Dr. Bernard Vincent Grossman of 183 North Clark street, her divorced husband. Dr. Grossman, a member of the Dill Pickle and Blue Fish clubs, and lecturer on the psychology of love, claims he was awarded a daughter, Gloria, following the divorce. Mrs. Grossman denies there was a court order giving him the girl.

GERMAN BANKS WALLOW IN GOLD AS MARK PLUNGES

Sell Worthless Paper for Foreign Money.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUSSELDORF, June 23.—While New York private banking houses are being pulled under by the German mark, banking houses in Germany are making money so rapidly they can hardly keep account of it.

Selling marks for foreign values and sequestering the latter apparently is the main business today. How long this can continue no one knows. But there is no reason why the Germans should check such a good thing any more than have the Russians, whose printing presses began turning out their trillions in 1917 and are still at it.

The internal value of the mark is much greater than the external value and the cost of production is way down. Labor and German raw material is much cheaper than in America or Great Britain, while such raw material as the German manufacturers must import costs no more than it does American or British manufacturers.

Sell for Foreign Values.

It must be remembered that German manufacturers have been selling abroad for foreign values. Of these they put a certain per cent back into business, but the greater part is kept safely in other countries. Why should the industrialists want to stabilize the mark? Why should the bankers want to stabilize the mark? Both are in the same boat of prosperity with all sails set. Deflation means small profits and many failures and they will not face it—yet.

The talk of stabilization was followed by the latest reichsbank statement, showing that 1,500,000,000,000 paper marks, or 15 per cent of the total note circulation, was issued last week. The same statement shows that 2,000,000,000,000 in treasury receipts, or 20 per cent of the total, were discounted.

1,500,000,000,000 Marks a Week.

There were 1,500,000,000,000 marks in bank notes put into circulation last week. The total issue on Dec. 30 last was 1,280,000,000,000 marks. So in the one week the government distributed more currency than the total circulation up to Jan. 1.

But despite this there are still persons who have not lost their faith in the mark. I know a German who last week took $1,000 and bought himself a houseful of marks. Today these marks are worth $700. Can you beat it?

Stinnes' Austrian Plants Busy.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

VIENNA, June 23.—The huge iron mines and steel works in south Austria owned by Hugo Stinnes, Germany's greatest industrial magnate, are now working twenty-four hours daily and are getting high prices for their steel products throughout eastern Europe on account of the restricted Ruhr exports.

CHARLES COWPER, HERE SINCE 1842, DIES IN SUBURB

Charles H. Cowper, an old time resident of Chicago and Evanston, died yesterday at his home, 740 Forest avenue, Evanston. Born in Liverpool in 1839, he came to Chicago with his parents in 1842. He was active in Episcopal church work, at one time was the communicant in Trinity parish, Chicago, and also sang in the vesper choir of St. Peter and Paul. Moving to Evanston in 1885, he became warden of St. Luke's.

For fifty-two years Mr. Cowper was connected with the Pennsylvania railroad, retiring from active duty thirteen years ago. Last year he celebrated his fifty-seventh wedding anniversary. He is survived by his widow.

The body will lie in state in the chapel of St. Luke's church and the funeral will be held tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock. An honor escort from the Pennsylvania railroad will accompany the body to Rosehill cemetery.

While Chicago Sleeps

So far neither Chicago's new mayor nor the city council has taken any steps to arrest and prosecute any of the scapegoat undertakers who are prosecuting their nefarious profiteering in every part of the city. Officially the city remains asleep.

Not so with the public, however. Day by day, as the truth is being grasped by readers of our advertisements, fewer and fewer people are drifting into the toils of these extortionists who disgrace an honorable profession. Week by week our business is growing and the public is learning to take the precaution to investigate and compare our low prices.

Whenever such a comparison is made our prices are found to be from one-half to one-third of those charged by others. We mention only one of many typical cases. A few days ago a gentleman turned over to us for interment a casket purchased from another undertaker for $335.00. In our display room he was shown a casket of the same design and quality plainly price marked and sold by us for $190.00. He had been cheated out of $145.00.

If you are under the sad necessity of arranging for a funeral, do not permit yourself to be victimized. We are as near to you as your telephone and will gladly send a car to bring you to our display room where you can judge for yourself not only our low prices but our equipment and service, which will not be surpassed by those of any undertaker in Chicago. We make no charge for removals to either of our beautiful chapels. We provide the services of a lady attendant, and we use Pierce-Arrow cars exclusively. Our facilities for shipping funerals are exceptionally complete.

When you can't think of just what you'd particularly like to eat—TRY the North American

Everyone experiences days when they "can't imagine what they want to eat" and "can't think of a thing that sounds tempting." The very next time such a day strikes you try the North American Restaurant. We know that is about the hardest test to which a dining place could be put. But we are confident that the North American will satisfy you—thoroughly.

Remember, this is the coolest, most comfortable dining place imaginable. Here the air is always fresh and pure and dry and COOL. And every bit of the air in the restaurant is completely changed every three minutes. The good air alone is almost enough to whet your appetite.

The sight of our fine food will tell you exactly what your palate is craving.

And always remember that because of our Common Sense plan [whereby you serve yourself] you get extremely big portions of food, of a quality which can't be beaten anywhere, at prices about half what other good dining places must charge to include "service."

Cold Premium Ham: Boiled in our own kitchen. Not the rolled, stringtied, ready boiled type which is usually served. A big portion with salad 45c

WAR VETERANS FAVOR BARS TO IMMIGRATION

Approve Selective Plan of Secretary Davis.

Aurora, Ill., June 23.—Illinois veterans of foreign wars meeting here in fourth annual encampment today unanimously endorsed the selective and enrollment immigration plan of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, who addressed the convention on the immigration problem. R. W. Elton of New York, the national adjutant of the veterans, in commenting upon Secretary Davis' address, told the service men that the plan "is nothing more nor less than a move for preservation of the American race and self-preservation is the highest form of patriotism."

JAMES J. DAVIS. [Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

Besides selecting the immigrants, he favored limiting their numbers, as did Secretary Davis, he said. Mr. Davis did not say what per cent of foreign born in relation to those already here he would favor admitting each year, but made it plain that it would not be more than the 3 per cent permitted by the present law. His views as outlined to the convention would be placed before congress, he said, with a request they be embodied in the immigration laws.

Would Pick Immigrants.

In arguing for selective immigration and the enrollment of aliens, Secretary Davis said no immigrant should be permitted to enter the United States who did not express his intention of becoming an American citizen. Picked by representatives of America in the land he is leaving and enrolled in this country in a federal society headed by the President, which would provide instructors in American government and customs, the chosen immigrant would be a great asset to the nation instead of often a liability as now, Mr. Davis said.

His instruction would not cost the government anything, as he would be required to pay a registration fee of $10, which in the aggregate would pay for his schooling. The public schools care for the children.

Tells of "Bootleggers."

Mr. Davis declared that many immigrants are now coming into the country who would be in jails or institutions in home lands if it were not for the expense of maintaining them. Most of these undesirables, Mr. Davis said, are being bootlegged in by immigration runners, who operate in Cuba and Canada and Mexico. There is no restriction on immigration, he said, from these countries, so it is to them that immigration bootleggers steer old world peoples whom they intend to later smuggle into the United States.

To follow these smugglers and checkmate them completely would require the use of the entire army and navy, Mr. Davis said.

KING INJURED

KING ALBERT OF BELGIUM.

BRUSSELS, June 23. — [United Press.]—King Albert of Belgium sustained a broken wrist and lesser injuries today when he was thrown from his horse at Laeken.

POLICE BARRIERS FOR PLAYHOUSE LACKING PERMIT

Police barricades may prevent operation of the Playhouse theater at 410 South Michigan avenue as a result of notice sent Chief Collins that the theater was denied a license some time ago for failure to comply with certain building regulations. Suit to collect a pro rata fee for the period in which the theater management has operated without a license will be instituted by Assistant Corporation Counsel Leonard Grossman on behalf of City Collector Thomas Keane.

Five motion picture theaters and eight cabarets and dance halls face similar suits and closing orders unless building department approval of recent alterations is obtained and the ban on issuance of their licenses lifted thereby.

Motion picture theaters affected are the Rex, 6848 South Racine avenue; the Langley, 706 East 63d street; the Park Manor, 321 East 69th street; the Owl, 4653 South State street, and the Calumet, 9204 South Chicago avenue.

SINGLE STANDARD TO CURB DISEASE GETS KNOCKOUT

Proposed suppression of social disease by enforced treatment of suspected men arrested in disorderly house raids received its death blow in Chicago yesterday when Assistant Corporation Counsel Leonard Grossman, in an oral opinion given to Health Commissioner Herman Bundesen, declared such a procedure illegal.

The opinion forecasts Mr. Grossman's reply to Chief Collins, who sought the corporation counsel's ruling on the legality of freeing men on nominal bail while their female associates are held for venereal disease tests at Lawndale hospital.

The question was raised in the health commissioner's demand to Chief Collins that a single standard of morals should prevail in the police department's handling of persons arrested in raids. Men should be forced to undergo the same examination as women, he said.

Quotes State's Stand.

In his letter, Dr. Bundesen quoted from the state health department regulations, which "deem any man consorting with a common prostitute to be a suspected case of venereal disease or an infective carrier." The regulations, he contends, are as binding upon the police department as statutes.

No question as to the legality of subjecting the women to treatment was raised by Chief Collins, nor did Mr. Grossman attempt to explain how the law which holds examination of men to be a deprivation of liberty without due process failed to shield women in the same manner. No change in the police department policy toward women is contemplated, it is said.

Ruling by Grossman.

"Worthy as they may be, the state health department rules are, after all, merely arbitrary rules fixed by others than the legislature," declared Mr. Grossman, "and, if strictly enforced as Dr. Bundesen construes them, would be tantamount to depriving a man of his liberty without due process of law and his right to bail, both guaranteed him under the constitution.

"When those rules were adopted, the state health board merely arrogates to itself the powers of the legislature. I fear if Chief Collins undertook to force men into an examining room or confine them in a hospital without trial, he would be the target of well-founded damage suits.

"There are too many of these board rulings and commission dictums in these days. Well-meaning reformers and philanthropists, who are sincere in their efforts, no doubt, in such regulations as these, advocate unconstitutional means to hit at an immoral few."

WIFE RUNS AWAY WITH SHOW.

Ernest Weldon, 713 East 35th street, asked police assistance yesterday in locating his wife, Jessie, who ran away a week ago to join a show company, leaving her daughter, Marjorie, aged 2, in charge of her mother, Mrs. John Riley.

JOB HOLDERS TRY TO THWART LAW WIPING OUT PAY

Commerce Commission Aids Seek to Hold On.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Five job holders of the state administration are attempting to circumvent the will of the legislature in refusing to give them compensation during the next two years, according to reports in local political circles. These job holders are five assistant commerce commissioners, some of whom were charged with having done no work of value for the state.

Gov. Small is reported to be devoting part of his visit to Chicago to the action of the general assembly. There were eight assistant commerce commissioners and the legislature appropriated for only three. The governor is said to be conferring with remnants of the Lundin-Thompson machine to determine who shall be the three who will draw the salaries appropriated.

None Hurries to Quit Job.

None of the eight have asked the governor to be relieved from his position, according to reports. Instead, some of them and their friends are attempting to find a profitable way to remain attached to the positions. Legally, the five jobs have not been abolished, and it is said that if any of the five desire to work gratis they can continue to hold their positions, but they would like to work out a plan to obtain eventually, if it is impossible now, the $5,000 a year which formerly was attached to each of these jobs.

Some of these assistant commissioners have been informed that the Thompson - Lundin administration worked out a plan to evade a failure to appropriate for certain places when it was in control of the city hall. They did. It worked. Their plan was to have the job holder obtain a judgment against the city every three or four months for his compensation, which the city later could be compelled by mandamus to pay.

Plan Useless in This Case.

But that plan is useless for the assistant commerce commissioners, because no suit can be filed against the state. All claims against the state must go to the court of claims for approval. But their approval does not get the money. A claim which they approve cannot be paid unless the legislature makes an appropriation.

It has been suggested to those interested in the salaryless assistant commerce commissioners that they remain on the job and file claims with the court of claims, then trust to a friendly legislature to pay. But there is little promising in that plan. The attorney general is the lawyer for the state, and he would fight such a claim.

Must Testify to Work.

In addition it would be necessary for each of the assistant commerce commissioners to testify under oath that he had performed his duty under the law. The principal reason for detaching the salary from each of the five jobs of assistant commerce commissioner was the charge that none of them performed any work of value to the state and that some of them did not even pretend to render any service.

The holders of the eight jobs are as follows: J. Paul Kuhn, Batavia; James R. Clark, Bloomington; George W. Pillow, Marion; Frank Ayers, Chicago; H. U. Bailey, Princeton; Douglas L. McKenney, Ottawa, and A. T. Spivey, East St. Louis.

None of these are appointees of the commerce commission. The jobs are created by statute and the appointments have been made by Gov. Small. They are supposed to assist the commerce commissioners with their work, but if they do not work the Illinois commerce commission has no authority to discharge them.

IN A GARDEN OF FLOWERS

One of the gardens which attracted attention and won prizes with its exhibits in north shore flower show was that of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

G. F. M'LAUGHLIN AND MISS LETTS WED IN GARDEN

Society Folk Attend Suburb Ceremony.

Practically all of smart society who are not summering abroad, in the east, or in the north, attended the wedding yesterday afternoon in Lake Forest of Miss Hollis Louise Letts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Letts, and George F. McLaughlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. George D. McLaughlin. The service was read in the garden of the Letts residence on Green Bay road by Manager Purcell.

The bride's gown of ivory satin was made simply along moyenage lines with trimmings of thread lace and a chou of pearls and lace on one side, from which hung the train. A cap of lace ornamented with orange blossoms held in place a tulle veil. She carried calla lilies.

Bridesmaids in Yellow.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. Justin Sturm, Mrs. Warren Ripple, Miss Marion Warner, Miss Marjorie King, all of Chicago; Miss Marjorie Dalzell and Miss Dorothy Rhodes of Pittsburgh, and Miss Frances Wick of Cleveland, wore pale yellow chiffon frocks trimmed with ecru lace and lemon color horsehair nets, with yellow flowers and dark brown velvet edgings. They carried blue delphinium and yellow daisies.

Miss Harriet McLaughlin, the maid of honor and the bridegroom's sister, wore lemon color chiffon, and Mrs. Wellesley Hill Stillwell, the matron of honor and the bride's sister, wore pastel blue chiffon and a caramel color horsehair hat.

The bride's mother wore a gown of grayish blue georgette, a black lace hat and a gorgeous Chinese shawl. The mother of the bridegroom wore ecru lace over a slip of the same shade and a tête de négre hat.

Brother Is Best Man.

Herbert McLaughlin acted as his brother's best man and ushering were James De Camp of Cincinnati, Hale Holden Jr., Edison Dick, Justin Sturm, Albert Madlener, Russell Kelley, Ralph I. Farwell, Thomas C. Dennehy Jr., all of Chicago.

Mr. McLaughlin and his bride will be at home after the middle of July in Lake Forest.

Those Who Won Prizes

Held under the auspices of the North Shore Horticultural society and the Lake Forest Garden club, the North Shore Flower show was opened yesterday in the Gorton school, Lake Forest. Practically all the prominent north shore residents were represented by exhibits, among the prize winners being Mrs. Lester Armour, Mrs. Charles A. Schweppe, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Charlotte H. McCormick, Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, and Mrs. Walter Brewster.

In addition to the display in the Gorton school several private gardens were thrown open for the day to the general public. They included the gardens of George A. McKinlock, Lawrence H. Armour, William E. Clow, George D. McLaughlin, Edward T. Hasler, and Prentiss L. Coonley. The show remains open today.

GOOD FOOD FOR YOUTHS IN CAMP ASSURED BY U. S.

Washington, D. C., June 23.—A "standard bill of fare," prepared by the army quartermaster general for the guidance of supply officers of the summer military training camps, shows that the 30,000 young men enrolled are to be fed at an average cost of 45 cents a day for staple foods, supplemented with extras and dainties up to 25 cents additional each.

The standard menu worked out provides more liberally than do army ration tables, since the men to be fed will be between 17 and 24 years of age, "or in that period of life when they are completing their development and require normally more nourishment than mature men." Typical menus for individual meals follow:

BREAKFAST: Fresh fruit—cantaloupe or berries—cereal—corn flakes and oatmeal; fried bacon and scrambled eggs; hot biscuits; coffee; sugar and milk for fruit, cereals and coffee. Cost, 17.95 cents per man.

DINNER: Puree of bean soup; croutons [leftover bread]; pot roast of beef with Yorkshire pudding; green corn on the cob; boiled potatoes; cold slaw, mayonnaise dressing; fresh buttermilk; plum duff, caramel sauce; bread. Cost, 21.45 cents per man.

SUPPER: Chili con carne, sliced summer sausage, hot rolls, butter, fresh rhubarb sauce, iced tea. Cost, 11.45 cents per man.

BUILDS HOME ON GUNNESS FARM; DEFIES "GHOSTS"

Laporte, Ind., June 23.—Memories of slain men and of a woman and her children who perished in a fire that wiped out the record of one of the world's most grewsome crimes hold no terrors for John Nepsha, who is building a home on the moss-grown foundation of what was once Indiana's murder farm.

The ruins of the Gunness home, shunned for more than fifteen years, have been cleared away. Mr. Nepsha, his wife, and four children are ready to defy the curse that is popularly supposed to hang over the place.

In 1908 the bodies of Mrs. Belle Gunness and her three children were found after their home had been destroyed by fire. Further search revealed the bodies of ten men suitors of Mrs. Gunness, murdered for their money.

One Armed Cowpuncher Wins 160 Mile Pony Race

The Dalles, Ore., June 23.—Sumner Huston, one armed cowpuncher, won a 160 mile pony express relay race between Bend and The Dalles yesterday, galloping into The Dalles at 3:52 p. m. He left Bend at 5 a. m. yesterday.

FAKE DRY AGENTS LOOT BREWER'S HOME OF JEWELS

"Prohibition agents" who called early yesterday at the home of George Pfeiffer, wealthy brewery owner of 653 Cornelia avenue, suddenly revealed themselves as bandits. They backed Mr. and Mrs. Pfeiffer, Mrs. Delia S. Farley, his aged mother-in-law, and Thomas Smith, the cook, into a clothes closet and looted the house of more than $5,000 in jewels and cash.

Mrs. Farley, overcome by the shock of being awakened by the three bandits and the stifling heat in the closet, fainted while they were looting the house.

Mr. Pfeiffer told Sergt. Cudmore the bandits appeared at his home shortly before 8 o'clock. One of the three men flashed a star.

"We have a warrant for you," he told Mr. Pfeiffer, "a warrant charging you with violation of the prohibition law."

Mr. Pfeiffer started to question them, and they drew revolvers. They forced him into the house, awoke the other members of the household and locked all in the closet.

They did not lock the closet, but they cut the telephone wires before they left. Pfeiffer went to a neighbor's home to telephone for the police.

The loot taken by the bandits, according to Pfeiffer, consisted of five diamond rings valued at $4,000, a stud valued at $900, a watch, $155. They took $150 in cash from Pfeiffer and $90 from Smith.

Plea He Was Drunk Fails to Save Policeman's Stabber

A plea that he was drunk and did not know what he was doing when he stabbed and seriously wounded Policeman B. J. Miller was of little avail yesterday to Jake Whitfield, colored, 4550 Vincennes avenue. "He couldn't have been drinking much," returned the patrolman, "for he knew enough to try to run away after he had stabbed me." Whitfield was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to six months in the House of Correction.

DEAR HOUSE: June 24, 1923.

I know just how you'd feel if they painted you with anything but me.

Sort of like the small boy who wanted a sled for Christmas and got a copy of Pilgrim's Progress.

You're right. While I'm closely imitated, I'm never quite equalled. I'm unique in spreading power, long life, protection, and in low cost per job.

Like every Sherwin-Williams product, I'm made to do just one job well. My particular job is exterior wooden surfaces.

LONDON TRAFFIC JAM NOW AS BAD AS CHICAGO LOOP

May Bar Horses; Blame Increase of Busses.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, June 23.—[Tribune Radio.]—"Why it is just like the loop," said a visiting Chicagoan here today as he surveyed the long line of traffic in the Strand, which was composed of motor busses, auto trucks, taxicabs, horse drawn vehicles, push carts and every other sort of vehicle known to man.

Most of the time the traffic was stationary. It would start and progress a few yards and then stop again, and anything once in the stream had to flow on at its pace until an opportunity came to get out at a side street.

The Chicagoan could have seen the same thing in Holborn, Piccadilly, Bond street, Oxford street, or any of London's main thoroughfares. London traffic has now reached a point of congestion equal to a breakdown, and in some districts it is quicker to walk than to ride. It has reached such a stage that they are beginning to talk about it in parliament, and when that stage is reached in England it is a sign that something really serious is going on.

Demand Action by Parliament.

There are at least a dozen questions on the house of commons paper for the home secretary next week about London traffic, and demands are coming from all sides that a traffic authority be established immediately with power to deal with the situation and to give relief.

The chief trouble now is that the traffic has outgrown the streets. There are too many motor busses, and they are increasing at the rate of more than fifty a week. The big traffic trust in London is the General Omnibus company, which has a program of 3,000 new busses this year.

In addition to this there are new "pirate" busses appearing every day. These "pirate" busses are run by small companies owning three or four vehicles, or even one bus, the companies being composed of a driver and conductor, who are buying their vehicle on the installment plan. They seek the most populous and profitable routes and as soon as they appear the trust company puts on two busses for every "pirate" one in order to freeze the latter out.

No License Required.

No license is required except a police certificate of safety, which the police are compelled to give if the vehicle is roadworthy. The police have no power to restrict the use of any street by any vehicle.

It is proposed that the new traffic authority be given the power to limit the number of vehicles and exclude certain kinds of traffic, horses for instance, from some streets.

HANDS OF DEATH

The clock indicates the number of deaths caused by automobiles, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1.

ONE DIES, 2 HURT, THREE HELD FOR AUTO ACCIDENTS

Alexander Strella of 1519 South 48th court, Cicero, was killed yesterday when struck by a taxicab as he attempted to cross Adams near Franklin street. M. L. Sies, 1327 West Jackson boulevard, the driver, was arrested.

Leonard Cech, 7 years old, of 1521 Cleveland avenue, was probably fatally injured by an automobile driven by Charles Giese, 1721 North Halsted street, who took the victim to a hospital. The boy, returning home from Lincoln park, had alighted from a North avenue car at Cleveland avenue and had started around the rear of the car when struck. Giese was booked on a charge of assault.

West Park Policeman Otto Ottisch was taken to the Robert Burns hospital after he had been struck by a taxicab while directing traffic at Washington boulevard and Ogden avenue. The driver, Isadore Wotowsky, who was held, said he had not seen the policeman, who is six feet tall and weighs 200 pounds.

NOTED FRENCH AIRMAN KILLED BY PLANE'S FALL

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, June 23.—Jean Casale, one of the best known airmen in France and holder of the French altitude record, was killed when his plane crashed near Dameraucourt, Oise, this afternoon. He was returning from taking passengers to an aviation fête at Berkplage. His mechanician escaped with slight injuries.

British Airman Killed.

LONDON, June 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—Maj. E. L. Foote, piloting a Bristol Lucifer monoplane, fell and was burned to death near Chertsey, Surrey, today, while on the last lap of the 400 mile handicap race for the Grosvenor challenge cup of the Royal Aero club. The race was open to British pilots driving machines of less than 150 horsepower. The winner was Flight Lieut. W. H. Longton, piloting a Sopwith Lerhone.

OBREGON GIVES WORD TO GUARD FOREIGN RIGHTS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, June 23.—Information on the work of the international conference being held here to try to patch up the differences between Mexico and the United States has been withheld to prevent press discussion in the two nations which might embarrass the task of the commissioners, Charles B. Warren, an American delegate, said today.

It is stated that President Obregon has shown a disposition to meet the American point of view to such an extent that the American commissioners are satisfied that Mexico will protect foreign interests. As certain phrases in the Mexican constitution are doubtful or are opposed to foreign interests, the American commissioners, after a careful study of the situation, accepted the word of Senor Obregon in order to save the situation.

When the American point of view conflicted with Mexican laws, Senor Obregon came to the rescue with a common sense explanation of the situation, a suggestion as to a way out or a promise to protect the threatened interests.

ETNA'S ERUPTION WAR OF GIANTS, LEGEND OF SICILY

Swore Vengeance on Island, Peasants Believe.

BY V. DE SANTO.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LINGUAGLOSSA, June 23.—[By Tribune Radio.]—Mount Etna's eruption is a vendetta of giants, according to peasants and shepherds in this locality. A man about 80 years of age, with a thick, white beard, sitting in the fashion of Rodin's famous statue, The Thinker, above the Cerros railway station, watching the slow but irresistible advance of fire and flood, remarked with philosophical resignation:

"It is the vendetta of giants. They swore vengeance upon us for 10,000 years."

Aged Man's Story.

The man, whose name is Carmine Donato, told me a long story of the giants in Sicily. After further investigation among the country folks I was able to construct the following legend:

About 1,000 years ago the angels came down in Sicily and married some Sicilian girls. From this union sprang a race of giants, from thirty to thirty-five feet in height. They soon became the rulers of the land and enslaved and maltreated the inhabitants. War ensued between the inhabitants and the giants, which lasted several centuries. Finally by divine aid the inhabitants drove the giants onto a small island near the coast of Sicily. The little island was in the exact location where Mount Etna now stands, which then was separated from Sicily by two miles.

Sought to Regain Sicily.

For years the giants endeavored to regain possession of Sicily, but the inhabitants guarding the shore prevented them from doing so. The giants fed on grass and trees. When every bit of vegetation was exhausted they shouted across the channel offers of peace, declaring themselves willing to return and become humble servants, but the Sicilians refused. The giants, enraged, shouted a 10,000 year vendetta on the Sicilian people and disappeared in a huge flame. Immediately after there was a terrible earthquake and the island opened up and began emitting fire and burning stone and grew into an incandescent mountain, soon joining the mainland of Sicily.

An interesting incident in connection with this fable is that the jaw bones, teeth, and ribs of the giants, supposed to be ten meters high, have actually been found in this vicinity.

Eruption Becomes Erratic.

ROME, June 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—The eruption of Mount Etna has entered an erratic stage, with alternating periods of increase and decrease in its activity. The flow of lava toward Linguaglossa is continuing but has slowed down to so great a degree that at the present rate it would be weeks before the town proper was reached.

LOSES CONTEST

MISS MARJORY BARKER.
[Keystone Photo.]

Philadelphia, Pa., June 23.—The State Supreme court today upheld the Common Pleas court of Montgomery county, which refused to issue a writ of peremptory mandamus to compel the trustees of Bryn Mawr college to reinstate Margery Barker, Michigan City, Ind., a girl student who had been dismissed from the fashionable institution.

Miss Barker, who was expelled as "an undesirable student," complained through her mother that the college authorities did not give her a hearing on any specific charges relating to misconduct.

The decision of the Supreme court was based solely on the technical aspect of the case and held that the college was a private institution which "reserves the right to exclude any student whose conduct is regarded as undesirable without preferring charges or holding a trial."

LEGION NOTES

Oak Park post, No. 15, is planning for a "Post Home" and is conducting a drive for $2,500 which it is estimated will pay the yearly rental and defray the house expenses of such a home in Kenilworth hall, South boulevard and Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park. H. L. Zimmerman, 828 North Grove avenue, is chairman of the drive.

The American Legion is to give a "frolic," lasting nine days and nights, at Forest Park from June 30 to July 8. The entertainment will include concerts, fireworks, dancing, boxing and wrestling displays, minstrel shows and a dog and pony circus.

Jewish Congress Here to Hold Meeting Today

Representatives of various Jewish organizations will meet at Hotel La Salle today for a session of the Chicago Jewish congress. Judge Hugo Pam will preside and speakers will include Judge Harry Fisher, Lillian Herstein, Dr. M. Dolnick, Max Schulman, and Nathan D. Kaplan. Problems of the Jewish people in this country and in Europe will be discussed. Forty members will be nominated for the general election to be held later to choose twenty representatives for the National Jewish congress in Washington on Oct. 14.

DESPONDENT, ENDS HIS LIFE.

Harry Schwartz, 2000 South Crawford avenue, committed suicide yesterday by slashing his throat with a butcher's knife. Police said he had been despondent.

COME ON, FATHER; HELP YOUR BOY TO CAMPING JOY

Fathers—not "boys" this time, but you dads with sons between the ages of 12 and 18—get your boys busy on those essays and tell them to send them in before midnight of June 26. "The Value of Military Training and Camps for Boys" is the subject, and the prizes are ten free three weeks' vacations at Camp Roosevelt.

Do you want your boy to live three weeks in the open, to have a bully good time with other boys, with just the right amount of drill and discipline thrown in? If you do, get him busy on that essay before it's too late. Make him sit down today and write the 400 words or less that may win him one of those vacations.

Give Him New Backbone.

He will come back from Camp Roosevelt a stronger, healthier boy. He'll come back with new backbone in him, a readiness to assume responsibility that wasn't there before. He'll make you sit up and take notice, make you a better father because he's a better boy.

There's nothing a boy dislikes so much as being forced to sit down and think, says Maj. F. L. Beals, commandant of the camp. The major has had experience with thousands of boys and knows what he's talking about. A boy will work his head off selling soap to get a magic lantern, or will spade the garden for the promise of a trip to the circus. But to get him to take out pen and paper and use his brain is another matter.

Come on, you fathers, and get your boys busy.

For the Oldtimers.

Especially you fathers whose sons have been at the camp before. You've probably already made arrangements to send the boy there again. Why not give him the chance to go on one of THE TRIBUNE'S free vacations? The original division of prizes between new boys and "veterans" of Camp Roosevelt was seven vacations for the new boys and three for the "veterans."

Unless you "veterans" get busy you are going to let the new boys beat you, and it may be necessary to change the division of the prizes in accordance with the ratio of the essays sent in.

Get busy, boys—and fathers—and let's hear from you.

AUSTRIA GETS LESS THAN HALF OF RECENT LOAN

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

VIENNA, June 23.—A 4 per cent commission was given the American bankers who floated the Austrian loan, according to Vienna newspapers today. Although the amount of the loan was 747,000,000 gold crowns, or $125,000,000, this shrinks to 605,000,000 gold crowns on account of the various charges.

From this is deducted 287,000,000 gold crowns which Austria owes France, Great Britain, Italy and Czecho-Slovakia, including a $10,000,000 interior loan raised in Austria last year, so the new money amounts only to 318,000,000 gold crowns.

Bankers in Vienna have such a strong conviction that Austria can never become self-supporting, owing to the fact that the peace treaty did not allow it any coal and not sufficient food, that Chancellor Seipel has had to use the club to get any subscriptions for former Austrian loans, but the terms of the new loan are more attractive.

CAMP ALGONQUIN ONE HUGE FROLIC FOR HAPPY KIDS

But They're Calling for More Bathing Suits.

BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

By word and by pictures comes back the news from Camp Algonquin that one big and glorious time is being had there.

Crowds of women and children are everywhere. The camp is in full swing.

Bathing, riding, boating, game playing and sports of all kinds. And all the kids want to eat, and miles of woods and fields to race about in without some one saying, "No! No! Don't do this." Or "You mustn't do that!"

Here's Your Chance.

It is rumored, too, that certain articles are much needed there. Children's bathing suits are in such demand that so far it has not been met. The youngsters live in their bathing suits these hot days, and it takes stacks of them to fit every one out.

All sizes are needed. And any kind, so long as they are whole and substantial and will stand the wear and tear of everyday usage.

When you are making one for your boy or girl perhaps you can make an extra one for some little fellow at camp. Or when you are ordering some bathing suits sent out from the store for your children can't you order an extra one?

More and more children are writing in every day asking to go. And the numbers of letters and applications from mothers who are anxious to have their little ones get a breath of fresh air and good food for a few weeks are mounting up hugely.

The camp is maintained on a bigger scale than ever this year and will endeavor to accommodate a good many more mothers and children than ever before.

But to do this a lot of money is going to be needed—a big lot!

Don't forget this in the rush of the day's work, will you?

THE CAR WITH THE ENGINE SEALED AND GUARANTEED FOR TWO YEARS

FACING THE FACTS

In this series of daily talks I shall endeavor to show facts of vital interest to everyone who uses an automobile. On request, we will furnish those particularly interested any articles they have missed.
H. A. HOLDER

No. 15

I want the fine car business in the small cities, townships and on the farms

THIS is the business I want and I have built "America's Finest All Around Automobile" with the only engine in the world sealed at the factory and guaranteed against every service expense for two years to get it.

You might drive an automobile on the streets of Chicago for five years and think you had a good car, but it would never have been tested.

Level paved streets, traffic conditions, service stations at every hand to make adjustments, mean that in five years you would not have given that car the tests we give every one of our engines on the hills, country roads and mud in Illinois and Iowa around Moline before we ship it to you.

It is in the small places that real good automobiles are of the greatest value. There they are utilities that the owner is dependent upon. There variety of service is required. They must pull in hard going—continuously all day long they must plow through spring mud without heating. They must climb hills. To drive comfortably they must have great flexibility.

Drop down to under five miles an hour in high for holes and rough places and pick up again quickly.

They must ride easily on country roads at forty miles an hour.

They are used in places where speed is sometimes safe and any R&V Knight Six can step up to sixty-five or more inside of one minute.

But above all it must do, as our car does all these things, day after day under every condition of weather with reliability and without need of attention other than the usual care that is given all tools on a farm. We have this car and we have the chassis and the body and the finish with every unit put in to stand this work every day for years. We do not depend upon red paint or nickel radiators to make new models.

After three years of continuous driving over the roughest, hardest roads Iowa, Illinois and New England can show; after tests on all the stunt hills virtually every district east of the Mississippi River can show; after continuous road driving for hours at speeds no sane man would attempt except as tests for performance to give knowledge to eliminate every weak point; after performance under every conceivable condition, we know by comparison that we have in this new model the best all around automobile for the man that needs it. That is the man in the small places who uses it the hardest.

Making this car for him means making for the city man a car four times as good as he really needs—one he may be sure will take him anywhere at any time. He may drive it in Chicago always and its flexibility, acceleration and absence of need of adjustment will make him fall in love with it, but let him take it after a couple of years of use and without any preparation whatever and head it some morning east or west and drive until he reaches either ocean and then he will really know what a real all around automobile is and should be.

Why I want this market

I have not put three times the money into this R&V Knight Six engine that a poppet valve engine of the same size can be built for just to be able to talk about it.

I have not built bodies of aluminum instead of steel and used the best upholstering and hand buffed leather throughout for appearance.

I have not discarded folding tops and developed a permanent, all seasons top, of far superior life to create a novelty.

I have not added necessary accessories of a listed value of $549.50 above the cost of the automobile itself (against for the five best selling cars within $200 of our price of $159—$268—$177—$70—and $55.50 respectively) just as selling advantages.

I have done these things to make a car that the buyer can use anywhere, and will use five years with the same satisfaction that statistics show he uses other cars too before replacing.

The man who will test this is in the country and what a lot of them there are.

15.5% of our population lives in cities of 500,000 and uses 9% of the automobiles.

10.5% lives in cities of from 100,000 to 500,000 and uses 11% of the automobiles.

A car built for city use and sold by exclusive dealers can only reach this 26% of the people and 20% of the automobile users.

The real market for a real high grade car lies with the other 74% of the population and 80% of the automobile users for whom no one has previously built. I have had their needs and conditions first in mind, as we clearly show in this new R&V Knight Six.

I know we have the car this market needs and wants and I know this market has the money to buy it for the great wealth of this country lies, not in the cities, but in the small places.

Reasons for small sales of high grade cars in small places

There are, perhaps three main reasons why the small community market has not been covered by the high cost car to date.

1. No one in this price class has built a car especially to meet the conditions found in the country.

Everywhere where roads are unimproved you hear that heavy cars will not do the work. That is not true of the R&V Knight Six. Its Knight power plant will get down in the mud and pull as no poppet valve engine can. Ford makes a big engine for the weight. We make an extra efficient one. Either will work in the country places.

2. Lack of service facilities. There is no use buying a high priced car in a community where only one or two can possibly be sold if you have to establish a special service station to keep it running.

By meeting service squarely in engine design and in using standard high grade units elsewhere we have overcome the one great barrier by making universal service everywhere possible and the quality and comfort of high grade automobiles possible to every small town or farm resident. (Discussed in previous talks.)

3. But the greatest thing we have done is to reduce the cost of use of the high grade car under these conditions where use means hard and constant service. Under these conditions the one great cost is wear which means depreciation and maintenance.

Last Sunday we showed the saving with an R&V compared with cars of our price class but it is perhaps more striking when compared with more popular priced cars at from $1500 to $2000.

We have built a car that will stand up for 5 years and our buyers will continue to drive their cars that length of time, as against the average replacing of other cars in two years.

The following comparison I believe fair as comparative costs of five year car use

| | $2850 R&V Knight | $1500 Car | $2000 Car |
|---|---|---|---|
| Depreciation | $1710 | $2250 | $3000 |
| Buying Expense | 285 | 937 | 1250 |
| Engine Expense | 200 | 375 | 450 |
| Car Upkeep | 250 | 250 | 250 |
| Total Cost | $2445 | $3812 | $4950 |
| | | 2445 | 2445 |
| Comparative saving with R&V Knight | | $1367 | $2505 |

These figures are based on 60% depreciation on the car when sold second-hand at end of two years for poppet valve against five years for R&V Knight and on a 25% dealers' commission on 2½ ordinary cars as against 10% on one R&V Knight.

There is no expense on our R&V Knight engine for the first two years and not more than $200 for the next three years. This makes an average of $40 engine expense annually over a five year period.

Engine expense on a $1500 car will figure about $75 a year.

Engine expense on a $2000 car will figure about $90 a year.

While these figures are necessarily approximate averages, they are based upon best information available and will stand your investigation or experienced knowledge.

How you can get this saving

Aside from riding so much cheaper in an R&V Knight than in a $1500 or $2000 car you are riding better the whole five years. Performance, comfort, luxury, appearance of the $3000 car is always yours.

That we can give and have given in the car itself but you must do the buying. We cannot give this value and come and sell it to you.

Dealers cannot stock our car and sell in the regular way and live in places of less than 100,000 people, except in exceptional cases.

They can sell you our car. They can attend to it afterwards and make a good net profit.

They cannot from 10% buy your second-hand car at twice its worth in competition with dealers getting two or three times that discount.

It may mean a trip of 100 or 200 miles to see and study our car but the value you would get and the savings you would make would warrant that interest and expense and would be spent by you before you made that sized investment in any other way.

There is only one other way in which our car could be brought to you at this low expense.

That would be if one of the half dozen largest producers of poppet valve cars with large national distribution should handle this car through its own dealers. Exclusively as a specialty and for the high-class clientele he does not reach.

This would be profitable to his dealers but the manufacturer would have to take a broad view of the situation to interest him.

He is a volume producer. He wants to make every car he can. He is busy selling his own papers and while he wants his own dealers to make money, so naturally he wants their efforts especially concentrated on his product.

While I think dealers could, should and will, in time, sell many makes of cars and should especially now sell non-competitive price cars with special and distinctive features, the large automobile manufacturer did not build his fortunes that way, and probably will be the very last to realize the changed conditions making new methods of distribution advisable.

Consequently, for some time to come—better motoring at less cost is something you will have to exert yourself to get.

But remember, one exertion and one purchase of an R&V Knight Six will give it to you for the next five years.

To the dealer, garage and repair man

If you are selling cars today, the idea of a discount of 10% compared with one of say 25% on some other make naturally does not at first seem attractive.

At the same time there may be and I believe is more net profit in it for you than there is in stocking, financing and trading cars in the regular way.

In the first place it is an additional profit you cannot possibly get in the regular way as the market for our specialty is too small to make any chance of net profit to the dealer except in the largest cities when he depends upon it as a business.

The same is true of any other car in our price class.

The consequence is that buyers of this price car are going out of your community to buy or some outsider is coming in to sell them.

Further, there is a profit to be made on an R&V Knight Six from the man who has investigated and decided that no other car at any price will suit him.

You may as well have those commissions and the good will that follows a good sale at home.

We want a friend for our buyers at hand who can see that they get from their purchase the full value we put in our car.

If you are equipped to give the attentions required, to make the monthly inspections and reports our guarantee calls for—we are sure that our treatment of you would prove satisfactory and profitable and that one car in the hands of one of your customers would bring other buyers to you as our representative.

With this number of "Facing the Facts" the daily talks will be discontinued for the present. The response to them has been satisfactory and very much appreciated by me and our whole selling organization. The weather is getting too hot to either read or write them.

Besides I don't want to spend as much on advertising as others spend on personal solicitation, or one of my reasons for believing we give the greatest value in America's Finest All Around Automobile would fail.

STARS TRIUMPH AS LA TRAVIATA OPENS RAVINIA

Pareto, Schipa, Danise Win Audience's Favor.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Ravinia opera went into its twelfth season last night in circumstances and conditions that combined into making the occasion what Italians call a "gala." The pavilion held the largest first night audience in the annals of the lovely retreat on the north shore, with a turnaway which, counting the applications by mail that could not be filled, would have filled the audience room at least twice again.

"La Traviata" was the opera—a choice which rather astonished some of the patrons until Louis Eckstein explained that he was not a daring innovater or anything like that, but merely an impresario who had decided that it was a good opera wherewith to start off three of his stars, his chief Italian conductor, Mr. Papi, and his chorus. Incidentally, he pointed out that Verdi's melody-filled piece had in recent seasons served both the other American opera houses, the Auditorium of Chicago and the Metropolitan of New York, as an opening bill—the former in 1918-'19 and the Metropolitan in 1921-'22.

Schipa in Triumph.

With its three "big" rôles of Violetta, Alfredo, and Papa Germont giving respective opportunities in the luscious old Italian manner to coloratura soprano, lyric tenor, and lusty baritone, "La Traviata" is an excellent first night choice for a public which is not thinking in the spectacular terms of "Aida" or "The Queen of Sheba" or "La Gioconda." Mr. Eckstein put three of his stars into the aforesaid rôles—Miss Pareto, Schipa, and Danise. Of the trio only Schipa was new on the north shore; for Pareto had been the handsome Violetta of 1922, and in that same season Danise had made his Ravinia debut with her.

Schipa was warmly welcomed by an audience familiar with his four seasons of service in the Auditorium, and repeated his easy but deserved triumph in a rôle that gives back to him all that he puts into it. He is without an equal, so far as I have heard, in this type of rôle: he knows every trick and tradition of the Verdi stage; and he made, as he invariably does when "La Traviata" is the bill, the part of Alfredo as important as that of Violetta.

Pareto and Danise Score.

Miss Pareto last summer found her happiest vehicle, perhaps, in this rôle of Camille set to song; and she repeated a performance which, besides her well-bred singing, contains the elements of beauty, grace, and stage brains. She is, maybe, the most persuasive Violetta, in appearance, of all who have sung in the rôle in this country in the last generation, at least. As to Danise, he reveled, as before, in the kindly old father—a rôle of unfailing appeal to Italian baritones. Happily, he is no one-part singer, as he made clear last year, so that we need not begrudge the personal happiness he took out of last night's activity. He caught his audience for all its enthusiasm in the second-act aria, which he sang gloriously.

Familiar singers were in the incidental rôles, "incidental" here meaning all the parts other than the three mentioned; and D'Angelo, Miss Falco, Defrere (another Ravinia debutant), and the others contributed to one of the best performances ever given at Ravinia. Of course, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra was in the pit, responding to Papi in the idiom of Verdi as readily as in season it responds to Stock in the idiom of Beethoven and Brahms.

Details of tonight's revival of "Lohengrin" and the Ravinia menu for the new week will be found in the columns devoted to music in another section of this issue.

PART OF THE ARMY THAT CAPTURED CHICAGO

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Several hundred disabled veterans of the world war visited in Chicago yesterday en route to the Twin Cities to attend their annual convention. They were entertained by comrades here with auto tours and theater parties. This group was photographed on the steps of the Art institute.

WAR HEROES TAKE CITY EN ROUTE TO VETS CONVENTION

Entertained by Tours Over the City.

More than five hundred disabled veterans marched upon Chicago and triumphantly took the city yesterday. Mayor Dever surrendered the keys of the city without the firing of a shot.

All day long delegation after delegation of the men who suffered wounds or other disabilities while in service in France arrived and rested here during the day on their way to the fourth annual convention of disabled veterans of the world war which opens tomorrow at Minneapolis.

Women in Party.

A few groups came by special trains from New York and Cincinnati. But for the most part they arrived in small parties on regular trains. There were more than a hundred women in the various delegations.

On Friday Mayor Dever, who was not able to personally welcome the soldiers, appointed a committee of aldermen, headed by William J. Meyering, to represent him.

Alderman Meyering's committee, cooperating with one from the local organization of the disabled veterans, headed by C. M. Hagen, had arranged an elaborate program of formal entertainment for the visitors, including a reception at the Art Institute at which Col. A. A. Sprague was scheduled to speak.

Abandon Formal Program.

But the boys, upon arrival, voted so strenuously against formalities that this part of the program was abandoned. Instead, the committees accepted the offer of the Chicago Elks' lodge and of other organizations for the use of automobiles, and sightseeing trips were made.

Most of the veterans left by special train for Minneapolis at midnight. C. Hamilton Cook, of Buffalo, national commander, has been in the Twin Cities several days completing arrangements for the convention.

TWO FLEE INSANE ASYLUM.

Henry Miller and Clarence Rubey, formerly employed in the stockyards, escaped yesterday from the hospital for the insane at Dixon, Ill., and are believed to have returned to Chicago.

"First Class Entertainer" Spoils His Case; Gets Cell

"I'm an actor and a first class entertainer," piped Warren Faber, 4700 Sheridan road, yesterday when asked his occupation by Judge Joseph S. La Buy, before whom he was charged with stealing a stick pin from his friend, Herbert Cullen, while they were bathing at Wilson beach. "That spoils your case," said the judge. Faber drew twenty days in the bridewell and $1 fine. He claims he took the pin as a joke.

FOREST PARKS TO BE HUGE CENTER OF WINTER SPORT

Chicago is to have a winter playground this year if a resolution to be submitted Monday to the county board by Commissioner Charles S. Peterson is adopted. The plan opens up the entire forest preserve, where in past winters few persons have gone, and provides for a ski course to rival that at Cary, Ill.

Commissioner Peterson hopes to stage a huge ski tournament next winter in Palos Park, where, he says, there are natural facilities. The Des Plaines river is to be dammed to afford twenty miles straightaway for skating and facilities will be provided to make it accessible.

"In the summer the forest preserve usually has 6,000,000 visitors," Commissioner Peterson said. "Winter brings fewer than 6,000. We hope to make the preserve so attractive that the number will be greatly increased.

'BAD BOY' PLAGUE CAUSES CALLING OF BIG MEETING

Nab 2,000 in 6 Months; Cop Baiters Jailed.

Young "back o' the yards" gangsters who mob policemen and hoodlums who amuse themselves by potshooting at patrolmen on their beats yesterday presented anew the problem of juvenile crime before two branches of the Municipal court.

A special meeting of court attachés, representatives of the police and social service departments, and leaders of civic organizations was called for June 27 by Judge Charles F. McKinley of the Boys' court to consider the causes which have sent more than 2,000 boys into his court since the first of the year.

He issued the call after he had jailed and fined the leaders of two gangs, one for attacking a policeman, the other for causing a disturbance around a public school, and after Judge Francis Borrelli had appealed to Ragen's Colts to aid in stopping "pleasure" shooting at policemen of the stock yards station.

Six Are Assessed Fines.

John Lenihan, 19 years old, of 5652 South Green street, leader of the gang which attacked Policeman John Flanagan of the South Park police on Friday night, and four companions were sent to the county jail when they were unable to pay fines of $50 and costs.

Paul Fitz, 19 years old, of 2245 Custer street, leader of the "Black Spot" gang, was fined $50 and costs for causing a disturbance in the neighborhood of the Logan school with the aid of his companions.

"The Boys' court is a clinic for the study of criminals in the making," Judge McKinley declared. "Every boy reclaimed from the world of crime is a public asset. Every boy who goes wrong is a public liability. Something is wrong when more than 2,000 boys come into this court in the first six months of the year."

Tired of Being Targets.

"I'm getting tired of having my men made targets," Capt. Benjamin Enright of the Stock Yards station told Judge Borrelli when four members of Ragen's Colts Athletic club at 5140 South Halsted street were brought into court for shooting at two officers early Friday morning. The four established alibis and were dismissed, promising to aid in apprehending the offenders.

"If you call yourselves an athletic club, you should be sportsmen," Judge Borrelli told the four. "Sportsmen don't shoot at policemen from ambush. With your influence and example you can do more to stop crime than any bunch of reformers in the city."

Murder Charges Continued Against Two for Fatal Fire

Murder charges against Joseph Smith, colored owner of a tenement at 2138 Federal street, where ten lost their lives in a fire Thursday, and against Grant Wallace, 2109 South Dearborn street, Smith's chauffeur, were continued to July 20 before Municipal Judge Rooney yesterday. The charges were placed in when it is alleged to have been shown that the fire was caused by the explosion of a still.

Albert Munchow, 5630 Slocum street, who had been under treatment for a mental ailment, hanged himself beneath a stairway in his home yesterday while his wife and three children were visting a neighbor.

2 MEN BURNED AS 'GAS' SUPPLY BOAT EXPLODES

Two men miraculously escaped death, suffering only minor burns about the head, face, and arms, when the Standard Oil company's thirty-nine foot tanker launch Red Crown No. 2, filled to capacity with 1,410 gallons of gasoline, exploded and sank in the north branch of the river near Wabansia avenue, at 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning.

William J. Sotek, 5631 South Marshfield avenue, captain, and Henry Huart, the mate, were taken from the water by the Hudson avenue police and sent to the Passavant hospital. From there, after the company's physician, Dr. Frank M. Martin, had attended their burns, they were taken home.

The Red Crown No. 2, which supplies the gasoline launches in the harbor and in the Lincoln park lagoon with fuel, had been moored at the docks near Wabansia avenue and filled to its capacity, preparatory to making a delivery trip.

It had been untied from the docks and drifted a short way into the stream when Sotek started the engine. Immediately following the roar of the engine a loud blast occurred and a sheet of flame swept the craft from end to end. Huart was thrown from the deck into the river by the force of the blast. Sotek, knocked to the deck, was a bit more severely burned before he could leap into the river and swim away from the ship.

Pay Your Debts

Why Poke Along?

Why poke along working like a Trojan, punching the clock, drawing something or other on pay-day—and leaving it to friend wife to make this month's salary pay last year's bills?

Why keep reminding yourself of the reason you got behind — you know it by heart—why tell your wife again?

Lots of folks do it—they pay—and pay —and pay!

But they pay—in circles.

They pay him {doctor} and him {grocer} and him {established 1847!} but they pay —sure they do—only staving off him, and him, and about 14 other creditors, and nobody is satisfied—not even the fellow who pays {nor his wife}.

Group Your Debts Pay In One Place

The Morris Plan loans money—not to the shiftless—but to those who want to put behind themselves those harassing bills which have kept them running circles around themselves — getting nowhere — only—working—paying—getting nowhere.

Why poke along—and worry—and pay —and worry—when you can—if you are earnest and honest—borrow just a few hundred or so to clean the slate.

You can borrow on The Morris Plan— 72,000 have borrowed $15,000,000.

WRITE YOUR OWN MORAL

A man who raises chickens on a commercial basis told us recently of the method he uses to eliminate the unprofitable hens.

He mixes the food and distributes it in such a manner that the fowls are required to scratch for a living. This exercise helps to produce eggs.

Then he watches for the hens which go to roost the earliest at night. He examines their feet and finds that they are almost unmarred. They do not scratch for a living. They are not in the class of the profit producers.

These drones are promptly sold off or killed at any price the public will pay.

Any lesson in this for the average individual?

Forty manufacturers of quality cars—yet Paige stands third in sales. The two quality cars leading in sales are priced at $2685 and $2885; the Paige at $2450. What difference is there to justify the extra price? Check Paige points against these competitors—and you will realize that never before has $2450 bought such a car.

131-Inch Wheelbase
5-Foot Springs

Paige has a wheelbase of 131 inches—providing for roomy comfort besides roadability. Riding ease rarely equaled is further assured by rear springs more than 5 feet long. Check this against costlier cars! Paige leads them all in comfort.

More Power for Weight

Mark Paige piston displacement—compare it with others. Here is reserve power for all needs. Paige weight is 3850 pounds, yet the ratio to piston displacement is only 11.4 pounds per cubic inch. This low ratio is why Paige out-performs its competitors—climbs hills easier and at lower speed—gets away faster. Compare it in the chart above—nearly two pounds less per cubic inch—15% more ability!

Easy Handling

With a driving range of 2 to 70 miles an hour in high there is small need of gear shifting, though it may be done at a bare 3-inch movement, without clash or missing under any guidance. Steering is easy for the frailest hand—strain is absent.

What Is Equipment?

You wouldn't compare a car with three wheels to a car with four wheels, in relation to their prices. So Paige must be compared as to equipment with what its competitors would cost you if similarly equipped. Note the twelve items of equipment in the chart above—all things which you would eventually buy for any car. Paige has them all! One competitor has only two of them—and the other three. Calculate the cost of this equipment, and see how much more you get in the Paige.

Why Paige Can Be Sold at $2450

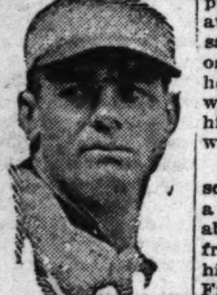
BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Detroit, Mich., June 23.—[Special.]—As a Tyger tamer Gorham Leverett proved a bust today, and the White Sox were whipped in the series opener, 5 to 3. The Gary, Ind., rabbit was gone and forgotten before the fourth round was concluded, and after that the Gleasons never had a chance, although they got two tallies in the ninth when Willie Kamm popped a homer over the left field barrier.



GORHAM LEVERETT
TRIBUNE Photo.]

The Tygers popped on Leverett for one run in the first frame and another in the second. Then he lost control in the fourth and two more Cobbmen counted. Stubby Mack, who rejoined his team this morning, stopped further scoring in that round and "Iron Man" Thurston came along at the start of the fifth to hold the foe to one run thereafter.

Sox Off Form.

The Sox were so far off form offensively that they could collect only five hits. Two of these were off Warren "Rip" Collins, who suddenly waxed wild in the fifth and had to be retired. This brought Bert Cole, a southpaw, into the act and for once in his life he looked like a fair pitcher, one run scoring in the fifth as the result of the loaded bases left by Rip Collins and the other two on Kamm's homer.

Haney started the Tygers in the right direction in the opening frame with a single. A few moments later the renowned Ty Cobb, who was alternately booed and applauded throughout the pastime, doubled and Haney counted. The run in the second inning was not entirely Leverett's fault. With Heilmann on third after a double and sacrifice, Sheely let a grounder seep through his paws and Heilmann scored.

Forces Run Home.

Leverett was so wabbly in the fourth that two hits and a pass filled the sacks with none out. Woodall fanned, but a pass to W. Collins forced a run home. Haney singled to drive in another and Mack then took up the burden, a double play completing the inning. The Tygers counted again in the seventh on hits by Cutshaw and Manush.

The only time the Sox really had a chance was the fifth when Falk doubled, Schalk was hit, and pinch hitter Strunk walked. This put three on with one out but only one run resulted, Falk scoring on Hooper's fly.

CUBS STUMBLE

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

St. Louis, Mo., June 23.—[Special.]—One bad inning beat the Cubs today, the Cardinals rearing up and chasing seven runs over the plate in the fourth and emerging from nine innings of tedium combat on the long end of a 9 to 5 count. However, the Cubs still are strongly entrenched in fourth place and head home tonight, where tomorrow they engage Cincinnati.

Tony Osborne, who had considerable trouble in getting started this season, took the flinging assignment and was the victim of the torrid Car-

LEARNING TO SHOOT

BY CAPT. E. V. RICKENBACKER.
ARTICLE VIII.

MY only experience with firearms, prior to the war, was in Arizona a number of years previous. I had sold an automobile to a Tucson physician and he suggested that we spend the following holiday morning in the foothills, shooting jack rabbits.

After an early start and a ride of two hours, we reached the abounding places of the rabbits. He had two shotguns, one a double barreled type, the other an automatic. With western courtesy he gave me my choice. I took the double barreled affair without comment.

I missed the first rabbit a good ten feet. A second lived because of my poor aim. Then I loaded both barrels. I placed one finger on one trigger, another on the second. Ready I waited. If I missed the first time I would be ready to shoot again instantaneously.

The jackrabbit appeared. In the excitement I operated both fingers at once. I had held the gun loosely to my shoulder. It kicked with the strength of a Missouri mule. Thus I had my first experience in aerial maneuvers. It was a reverse loop.

So I realized when I reached the school of gunnery in France that I had my work cut out for me. I didn't want to go to the front and be merely a roving target for the enemy.

All the fancy maneuvers known in aerial acrobacy are of little value in airplane dueling unless you are a master at the guns. It's like a dancing pugilist who is constantly stepping away from his antagonist, shifting to safety. He looks cute and dapper and one might be awed at his agility—but he wins few fights. It's the ring fighter who bores in, hits, backs away to clear his guns, and then lands again, who wins the laurels.

The first lesson at the gunnery school was firing at clay pigeons with a shotgun. I would average hitting about three birds of every fifty released from the trap. One should be able to hit more birds than that with a broom. Frankly I was worried. I didn't want to go up to the front and be shot down.

I remembered one trap shooting affair that I had witnessed. Two very good marksmen had argued over their respective prowess at the trap. They decided to shoot it out, with the customary box of cigars as a side wager.

One of the gunners was connected with a foundry. So before the match he had a number of aluminum birds cast and treated so that they appeared like twins of the clay models. Next he arranged with the trap boy to substitute the metal pigeons when his opponent was to shoot.

On the day for the match a large crowd of their friends and followers were assembled. The joker stepped to the line and shot out a wonderful score. Then came his foeman. The first bird soared from the trap and fell to the ground unbroken. He broke the next bird—it was a genuine clay pigeon. Then came a tin bird, and a metallic "ping," but no break. Unnerved and broken, the joker's opponent gave up in a short time. Then the ruse was explained.

Each day following I would shoot from three to five hundred rounds from a carbon rifle at a moving target in the water. Day by day in every way my marksmanship improved. Then came my first aerial target practice.

The instructor placed a hundred rounds of ammunition in the magazine of my plane. I was to go up and fire at a moving target, which consisted of a large sleeve twelve feet long and three feet in diameter, pulled on a rope, 300 feet in length, attached to a large French machine occupied by two French officers at an altitude of 1,000 feet.

Being very unfamiliar with the gun sights, I finally decided to fire after several dives at the target. Apparently my general aim on the line or flight of the target was correct, but some distance from the target itself. For after firing about twenty-five rounds one of the bullets cut the rope attached to the target ship and only a few feet from the plane itself.

I naturally was abashed. The target pilot landed on the airdrome. I followed shortly. He taxied up to my plane. Both of the Frenchmen in the plane jumped to the ground, rushed up to me, gesticulating with their hands and rattling French at the rate of three miles a minute.

Finally, after they had cooled down, one of them walked over to the center of the field, picked up the target, brought it back, and in his best broken English said, "It is dis which you should shoot at, and no ze plane—for I am ze pilot."

His First Story Tells of the Fighters' Heads.

This is the first of a series of ten articles describing Jack Dempsey's condition and comparing the two principals for July 4's world's heavyweight title bout as to their physical qualities.

BY HUGH FULLERTON.
ARTICLE I.

Great Falls, Mont., June 23.—[Special.]—There have been so many stories regarding the condition of Jack Dempsey, and so much talk of the improvement shown in Tom Gibbons, and so many contradictory reports, that I have made and am making a comparative study of the two men.

Muscle for muscle, limb for limb, bone for bone, I have gone over the two contestants and will make an effort to compare them in detail to see which should win the big quarrel at Shelby on July 4.

The size of a man's calf, the reach, the waist dimensions help in comparative study, but this time I have taken them apart almost, dissecting them figuratively, and tried to find how they compare in the vital points—the muscles used in fighting.

Champ Needs Punch.

No man can be a champion unless he has hitting power, nor can one remain champion long unless also he has powers of resistance. While refusing to make any predictions until the study of the two men is completed, I want to say that Gibbons compares more favorably with Dempsey than the weight and measurements would indicate. He is a bigger man when analyzed closely than his weight and size make him seem.

To start with, the vital point we will take up first, the heads of the two men, Gibbons' head is slightly larger and, in the opinion of cranial experts, better shaped. Dempsey's head bones are heavier and more closely knit. The two vital points in the head of a fighter are, of course, the point of the jaw and the thin spot at the temple. Dempsey's temple is thicker—so thick in fact that it is difficult to detect the pulse there.

The point of the jaw in the case of Dempsey is better protected by the muscles than is the case with Gibbons. The depressor muscle is heavy and his power in the jaw is evident even to a casual observer. Gibbons' jaw seems not so well hinged and he has a more prominent bone structure at the upper end of the lower maxillary.

Both Have Good Teeth.

The teeth of both are strong and good, the teeth of Dempsey, however, being smaller in front and larger far back, set very firmly into the jaw bone.

Many boxers, of course, suffer from sinus troubles, due to having been hit on the nose. Dempsey has no such trouble and Gibbons very little. Dempsey's nose construction is flatter and the bone is less prominent. The end of the nose is almost patulate and the gristle is heavy.

In many cases where boxers have been hit hard on the nose the fossae close and the breathing is hampered. The nasal ducts of both these men are open and they breath easily, although at times, when hitting hard, Dempsey makes a grunting sound as if expelling air with more difficulty.

Dempsey's ears set better on his head and are smaller. He never has had trouble from cauliflower ears, save the time Bill Brennan tore his left ear and that was mended quickly.

Gibbons has one ear which has suffered damage, but not serious. Both men have extremely keen sense of hearing, Dempsey being remarkable in that respect.

Will Study Eyes.

Where Dempsey shows best in comparison of the heads is in the junction of the head and spinal column. The poise and set of his head is better and heavier. Gibbons' articulars at the neck is longer and I think he can shift his head a trifle faster than Dempsey.

COLORED BROAD JUMPERS.

E. O. [NED] GOURDIN, former Harvard track star, who holds the world's record of 25 feet 3 inches for the running broad jump, is a colored man. So is De Hart Hubbard of Michigan, who came within one inch of that mark at the national collegiate games here June 16. So were Sol Butler, Howard Drew, and other notable performers.

Through track history of recent years we find colored athletes prominent in jumping and sprinting. Drew still shares with Kelly and Paddock the accepted world's record for the century. Binga Dismond, once University of Chicago, is joint holder with Meredith of the world mark for the quarter mile around a turn.

While there have been a few exceptions, colored men have not been prominent in the distance runs and weight events. Why? Some critics have satisfied themselves with ascribing it to lack of stamina. That answer never appealed to us, for we have seen great colored players go through the most gruelling and exhausting football battles.

Martin Delaney, one time athletic director and now business manager of the Chicago A. A., advances a theory, new to us, for colored prowess in the broad jump and sprints.

"Negroes have a natural spring," he says. "It's the same thing that makes them such naturally easy and graceful dancers. This established quality tends to cause track coaches to direct their efforts toward sprinting and jumping rather than distance runs."

World, with apple blossoms pink and white
At dawn; green sprays all faerie-like—
Gardens in long, growing rows,
Wind across the prairie blows;
Sunshine glowing warm and bright.

World, with tall, dark, stately pines
Growing in great, sweeping lines
Of forest: white birch gleaming in between.

Over a carpet of needles, soft and green,
Filters and quivers pale sunshine.

World, with gulls all flashing white
Over ever-changing waters take their flight,
Distinct against the opal sea,
Dipping and soaring seem lost in infinity....
A flaming sun sinks low and it is night.

Dear Wake: Tom Gibbons fights as he lives. Every day is training for him. Regardless of bunk reports of Dempsey's lack of condition, he cannot be at his best after his long layoff—Hollywood, Broadway, Europe, etc. No, I don't figure a knockout July 4, but Tom either will be there when the old bell rings the last round or it will be a Gibbons comet visible July 4.
G. E. M.

Wake: Dempsey should win in about nine rounds. Gibbons will give him a great battle and probably win the first three or four rounds. After that, superior weight and Dempsey's terrible hooks will begin to tell. You know a good little man can't beat a good big man.

THE QUESTION.

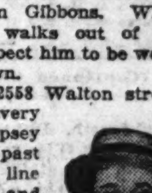
Do you think Jack Dempsey will stop Tom Gibbons?

Where Asked.

Madison at Clark street.

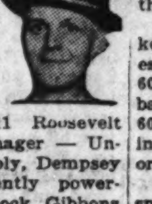
The Answers.

Arthur V. Ferry, 2141 Cleveland avenue, elevated railroad guard—I think Tom Gibbons is every whit the equal of Jack Dempsey. I expect this bout to be a knockout in favor of Tom Gibbons. When he walks out of the ring at Shelby I expect him to be wearing Dempsey's crown.

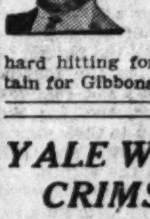


Fred Kosinski, 2558 Walton street, printer—I have every hope that Dempsey will live up to his past reputation in the line of pugilistic art, and if he does he will stop Gibbons. Gibbons is a great fighter, but the champion is too much for him.

Carl Dahlgren, 3601 North Cicero avenue, salesman—The way it looks to me, Dempsey will have the battle over in the sixth round at the latest. If it isn't over by that time it will end in a draw. Dempsey will undoubtedly work fast and furious.



Philip Buckbinder, proprietor, Buckbinder's hotel and restaurant — Why not? Dempsey is just as clever, and hits much harder. Gibbons won't last more than seven or eight rounds. Who has Gibbons licked? Unknowns, that's all.



George Goldberg, 1111 Roosevelt road, manager — Unquestionably, Dempsey is sufficiently powerful to knock Gibbons out if he ever hits him, and he has never fought anybody yet that he hasn't hit. He has been cultivating hard hitting for years. It is the curtain for Gibbons in the fifth or sixth.

Krogh, Buker, Watson and Ray Run.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.
(Pictures on page 3.)

Running without pace and competition, the Illinois A. C. relay team composed of Egil Krogh, formerly of Chicago; Ray Buker, who broke into the athletic limelight while running for Bates college; Ray Watson, one of the best milers ever developed at Kansas Aggies, and the redoubtable Joie Ray, yesterday established a new world's record of 17:21 2-5 for four miles.

ALBERT WASHINGTON.
TRIBUNE Photo.]

The event was the feature of the Greater Chicago Lodge, No. 3, of the L. O. O. M. on Stagg field. The former record for the race was 17:45, and was made at the Drake relay games last year by the University of Illinois quartet composed of Howard Yates, G. McGinnes, B. Patterson, and R. Wharton. The record breaking team is coached by Johnny Behr.

Krogh Starts.

Krogh started the record breaking performance by turning the first mile in 4:28 4-5. Buker then took the baton from the former Maroon and stepped his mile in 4:20 9-10. Watson, the third runner, surprised the crowd by covering his mile in 4:15 1-10, the fastest of the quartet. Ray finished by reeling off the final mile in 4:16 3-5.

The fact that the record was made by a team unpaced and without opposition stamps it as a wonderful performance. The athletes ran true to form and judged their pace faultlessly. Buker, Watson and Ray knew they would have to make up whatever time Krogh lost as it was known beforehand the team would have to average 4:25 to beat the old record. Krogh, however, turned a better mile than was generally expected. This performance, combined with the great running of Watson and Ray, made the record breaking performance doubly sure.

Colored Athlete Stars.

Albert Washington, the colored sprinter of Englewood high school fame and who now is a freshman at the University of Chicago, surprised the fans by taking the medley sprints 60, 100 and 150 yards—with a total of thirteen points. C. H. Coeffe of the I. A. C., was second with eleven points, and Harold Jones of the tri-color club third, with two markers. Washington won the 100 yard dash in :09 4-5 and took the 150 yard event in the fast time of :14 4-5. He was second in the short dash.

Paul Sweet, who captained this year's University of Illinois track and field team, won the diamond medal invitation quarter mile after an interesting race with Eric Wilson of Iowa, who competed unattached. Sweet, who ran under C. A. A. colors, covered the distance in :49 4-5 and beat the Hawkeye to the tape by a scant yard. Smith of Western State Normal was third.

French of the I. A. C. won the four mile run with W. Carlson, an unattached runner, in second place, while O. Collar of the I. A. C., who had finished sixth in a local four mile run held earlier in the day, was third. French covered the distance in 21:33 3-5.

Osborne Wins High Jump.

Harold Osborne, a former University of Illinois athlete, who is competing for the I. A. C., won the invitation high jump with a leap of 6 feet 4 inches, while Lane won two of the four high school relay races and the Canadian club lacrosse team defeated the I. A. C., 5 to 4.

In the girls' events, Miss Helen Filkey of Blaine school was credited with establishing a world's record for the 60 yard 2 foot hurdles. She ran the barriers in :08 2-5. Later she won the 60 yard low hurdles, 2 feet 6 inches, in :08 4-5, which ties the world's record, made by C. Sable last year.

Owing to the extreme heat, only a small crowd was on hand, but it was rewarded with some sparkling performances. Summaries:

CALL WITNESSES IN COAST LEAGUE BASEBALL FIGHT

Los Angeles, Cal., June 23.—Taking of depositions was practically completed today in behalf of the defense in the suit of Charles L. Lockard against William H. McCarthy, president of the Pacific Coast league, to compel McCarthy to recognize Lockard as a league director representing the Seattle club.

Two witnesses were examined in an effort to substantiate McCarthy's contention that Lockard is not entitled to recognition because William Wrigley Jr., part owner of the Los Angeles club, was financially interested in the Seattle club. James O. Moore, vice president of a Los Angeles bank from which Lockard and Wade Killefer borrowed $125,000 to buy control in the Seattle organization, said the money was loaned on a note indorsed by Wrigley, for which another note was substituted later, indorsed by Robert Killefer, cousin of Wade, and W. D. Hubbard. He said he was satisfied of the financial responsibility of the latter two.

ENGLAND REFUSES TO SANCTION GAMING BY TAXING SWEEPSTAKES

LONDON, June 23.—The craze in Great Britain for sweepstakes in horse racing, football, and other sports is growing, but the government has announced that it has no intention of considering a tax upon it.

In the office of the ministry of pensions at Leeds, Yorkshire, a big pool for the St. Leger racing event is being promoted but the pension authorities have announced that the pool is without official sanction.

The Church of England Men's society convention held here this week deeply deplored the gambling tendency of today. One clergyman delegate to the convention told of how some men in his parish bet on whether the vicar would preach from a verse in the old or new testament and the next Sunday went to church and found the vicar preaching on the revision of the prayer book.

dinal fourth. But it was not all Ernie's fault, for O'Farrell pulled two wild throws and Hollocher came through with a fumble, all of which coming along with two bases on balls issued by Ozzie and three hard Cardinal knocks went to chase over the seven markers.

Ten Hits for Cards.

Lightning Chief Cheeves relieved Osborne in that terrible fourth and worked until the eighth, the Cards adding their final run off his delivery in the seventh, when Vic Keen was yanked out to finish up. The Cards gathered ten hits off the trio of Cub hurlers, one of them being a homer by Jim Bottomley which came in the hostile fourth and scored two runs.

Fred Toney was the starting hurler for the locals, but Fred got into an argument with George Toporcer in the Cub second inning and, after a pugilistic exhibition, didn't appear for the start of the third. In that Cub second the first of the Chicago runs counted on singles by O'Farrell, Friberg and Heathcote. Toney thought Toporcer should have knocked down Heathcote's drive and took the bespectacled shortstop to task, but Toporcer tore off his glasses and offered to battle. Both Toney and Toporcer squared off, and then Umpire Wilson took a hand and halted the impending encounter.

Ohio Star Stumbles Through.

Johnny Stuart, former halfback and star of the baseball team at Ohio State university, took the hill after Toney disappeared and received the benefit of the Cardinal outbreak in the fourth. It was well that Johnny got that fat inning in back of him, too, for the bears added a single run to their string in the fourth, one in the fifth, and then counted a final pair in the eighth.

Despite defeat, the bears showed some fancy fielding in the late innings. Heathcote and Miller raced through the outer garden to haul down hard Cardinal liners, while George Grantham and Bernie Friberg flagged several hard hit grounders and turned them into easy outs.

HORNSBY DENIES WRONGDOING IN DIVORCE HEARING

St. Louis, Mo., June 23.—Rogers Hornsby in a deposition in the John W. Hine divorce proceedings, denied he ever had written Mrs. Hine a letter containing endearing terms, and asserted when he met Mrs. Hine last summer he did not know she was married.

Mr. Hine, an automobile salesman, has instituted proceedings to set aside the divorce Mrs. Hine obtained last February, alleging he was the injured party and asserting Hornsby had been escorting Mrs. Hine.

Mrs. Hornsby has a divorce case pending decision, and Circuit Judge Hogan has indicated he would grant it.

Hornsby, in the deposition, stated he met Mrs. Hine as "Jeanette Pennington," her maiden name, adding "I never knew her as Mrs. Hine." He said he had taken her to dinner, and last summer had met her in the lobby of a hotel in New York.

The Cardinals' second baseman admitted he had written her a letter this spring in reply to one from her, but denied the epistle contained any terms of endearment.

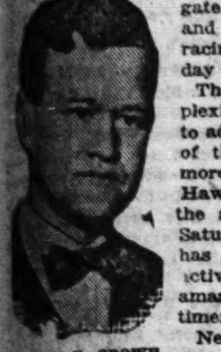
RACE MEET HERE TO STEER SHOALS OF ANTI-BET LAW

BY FRENCH LANE.



ROBERT E. CROWE.

Chicago again a thoroughbred racing center; a place where the blue bloods of the turf world can congregate and talk, eat and sleep hoss racing from one day to another.

That is the complexion beginning to adorn the brow of this city once more. Out at Hawthorne, where the season opens Saturday, there has been enough activity lately to amaze the old timers.

Never before, except in the heyday of Washington park and the American derby, have such elaborate plans been made for a Chicago race meeting as at Hawthorne this year. And not in a score of years has there been such an array of racing talent awaiting the bugle call.

Meeting Must Be Betless.

This in the face of a warning from State's Attorney Crowe that if there is betting or gambling, the races cannot continue. Will Chicago support betless racing?

A trip to Hawthorne, where $100,000 or more has been expended dressing up the historic old plant, will convince even the most skeptical that Hawthorne promoters mean business, and just as certain of continuing their meeting for the scheduled twenty-five days as they are of starting the first field away. The men who unbuckled this bankroll and have spent close to another $50,000 getting ready for next Saturday's opening, do not expect to have John Law lock up their gates.

The sponsors of the Hawthorne meeting themselves are steadfast against open betting.

Anticipate Test of State Law.

Another test, and a bitter one, on the oral betting laws of Illinois, where no money is passed, probably will be the result. If there is racing with no open betting—and there is no indication now that open betting will be attempted—the task of stamping out oral wagering between acquaintances will be a tremendous one.

Last year the oralizers operated in the last meeting at Hawthorne. There were arrests, but few if any convictions, with some cases still pending where indictments were returned against the alleged bookmaker. None of these cases ever reached the higher courts where it was intended to take them for a final decision.

Hawthorne officials say they will welcome the presence of State's Attorney Crowe's men. The track management will employ its own considerable force to stop open betting, but where no money passes on bets between friends or acquaintances, it will be up to the officials to show if this is contrary to the Illinois laws or if convictions can be secured in the courts of the state.

Kentucky Stables Well Represented.

Track Superintendent John M. Keegan returned yesterday from Latonia with a pocket full of amended stable reservations, and with the assurance that the silks of practically every big breeding and racing establishment in the Blue Grass state would be represented in Chicago.

He partly solved the stable room congestion problem by getting several of the more extensive Kentucky owners to cut their string for the shipment here, as every stall had been reserved for several weeks. Kay Spence cut his string from 20 to 10. Rome Respass from 22 to 16, Peter Coyne from 25 to 18, Kohn & Thiessen from 22 to 18, and S. M. Holman from 17 to 14.

The great 2 year old Black Gold will be among the shipments late this week, according to Supt. Keegan. Tommy Botts is bringing Blanche II. Ed Trotter will have the speedy John Finn in his string, and Braedelbane, Anna M. Humphrey and Dust Flower will be here on opening day, Keegan announced.

Jockey Petzholdt Back.

William Cain reached Hawthorne yesterday with the following string: Sen. Miramba, Plantoon, Golden Gloss, William A., Sewell Coombs, Court View, Rory B. and Tan Son.

Jockey Eddie Petzholdt has been engaged to ride the Cain horses. He was the champion rider of last year's Hawthorne meeting.

Starting time for the first race each day at 2:15 was announced yesterday following a conference between track officials and Illinois Central representatives.

GOING AFTER THE SMALL MOUTH BASS.

ONE of the delightful features about bass fishing is that a fellow can get a lot of fun out of it no matter how much cash he may or may not sink in the tackle he uses, because the bass tribes are no respecters of tackle. Of course it's nice to have a beautiful outfit, fine rods and a flock of lures to toss around, but the chap with a simple, inexpensive outfit can have just as much fun if he uses his gray matter a little and steps out to meet the bass half way. One morning a few seasons ago we had a circus using strips of a handkerchief as bass bait—about as crude and primitive a combination as you can imagine. Last summer we tackled a little grayling stream in Alaska when all we had for a fly rod was a long cut pole that formerly adorned the bank of the stream. The orthodox "drawing room" style of tackle had been left behind at the base camp, but we refused to pass up that stream. And maybe you think we didn't have fun.

So in this game of going after the small mouth bass the fish that gives you an awful kick out of fishing, although you may not have the most expensive outfit ever toted out of a tackle store, it is well to have variety in your lures. You never can tell what the small mouth bass is going to take.

The bait caster who goes after the small mouth doesn't have much trouble picking out lures for his outfit. He can step into the fun with light tackle and have all kinds of sport with pork rind and spinner combinations, pork rind with a weighted fly, or the regular weighted flies that have a spinner attached. They are easy to cast with light tackle, and sure to get the fish.

Not that larger lures do not sometimes attract the fish. One day when we weren't having much luck with flies and small lures we nearly keeled over at the sight of a fellow with two whopper small mouths which he said he had caught on one of these plug, nine hook baits that weighed about a pound. He had tied that on some 100 feet of line and just dragged it along behind his boat.

But taking the red eyes on a fly rod while wading a stream is the sport that is guaranteed to give a fisherman 100 per cent returns in fun and fish. One hour of this kind of fishing is sure to convert any angler to this type of fishing. When a good sized red eye starts tearing up the landscape and the angler has a fly rod with which to handle his fish in swift water, he gets more thrills a minute than one can imagine.

GRASMERE POLO TEAM MEETS N. S. OUTFIT TODAY

The North Shore Polo and Hunt club will meet the Grasmere Farms Polo club at Lincoln and Peterson avenues today at 3:30. Since Grasmere now holds the midwest championship and North Shore the Nelson cup, the indoor polo championship, as well as the midwest championship in 1921, this battle promises to draw a record breaking crowd and many of the members of other polo clubs in the surrounding country as spectators. Special races will be held from 2:30 to 3:30 on the half mile track.

The North Shore has recently imported many new ponies and some of them will be introduced to the public for the first time in the coming match. Grasmere has the reputation of being the best mounted team in the west. Capt. Byfield of the Grasmere and Capt. Lorber of the North Shore have been putting horses and men through some strenuous work by way of preparation.

UNACCUSTOMED LUXURY.

Whene'er, for some reason, or maybe for none
I decide to switch places to slumber,
And interview dames, who, in need of the men,
Condescend, for a price, to encumber
Themselves with paid guests, I can guess right away
The reception awaiting, because it's
A cinch that each hostess will have on display
An elegant circle of closets.

I never saw one who was anxious to boast
The comfort her rooms had to offer;
They figure most any old kind of a roost
Will do for a guy if they proffer
A lot of dark alcoves to fill up with junk—
I know what I'm saying, because it's
A long trail I've trouped with my six-dollar trunk
In the maze of the landladies' closets.

I don't like to seem to be peevishly grim,
But hearken, dear women, my holler:
I have only two suits; my possessions are slim;
A razor, a change of a collar
And necktie—these cover the wardrobe I flaunt;
I'm wising you thusly, because it's
A bed and a window and table I want
And I've got no blamed use for your closets.

Schou Christensen, Illinois A. C., one of the pioneers of long distance running in Chicago, yesterday won the fifth annual road race of the Chicago Daily News. The start was made from a point off the bathing beach in Lincoln park and the finish in Grant park. The winner covered the distance, approximately four miles, in 20:23.

Henry Bourke of University of Chicago, who finished third in the two mile in the track and field games of the National Collegiate A. A. on Stagg field recently, was second, with Russell Wharton, formerly of the University of Illinois but running under Chicago A. A. colors, third.

Large Field Despite Heat.

Despite the intense heat, a large field turned out to face the starter and there were no accidents along the course, according to Frank Hill, coach at Northwestern, who acted as starter and referee. Some of the boys showed effects of the long grind in the boiling sun, but a cool shower and rest enabled them to go home showing no bad results.

Christensen ran his usual "out-in-front" race. Shortly after he received the starting gun, Schou started to forge his way through the large field. Yard by yard he crept up on the leaders and caught the first runner at Grant monument in Lincoln park.

One Hundred Yard Lead.

When the baseball field was reached, the tri-color club runner was ten yards in the lead, and had increased his advantage to 100 yards at North avenue. At this point Bourke and Wharton started to make a bid for the race. The Maroon runner cut Christensen's lead to fifty yards at Ohio street with Wharton slightly behind.

After the leaders had crossed the viaduct into Grant park, Bourke made a gallant effort to catch Christensen, but the latter had enough in reserve to stave off the challenge. Wharton also made a commendable effort to catch the leaders but fell short by fifty yards.

Collar Runs Twice.

Olcott Collar of the I. A. C., who finished sixth, was not content with his showing. He hopped into an automobile and was taken to Stagg field, where he finished third in a four mile run. Ted Lapins, who was seventeenth in the Daily News event, finished fourth in the race at Stagg field.

The runners, according to officials of the race, did well to avoid the heavy traffic in the park and on Michigan avenue. Some were compelled to dodge autos and pedestrians, but none were slowed up to any considerable extent. Considering the heat and heavy traffic, it was fortunate no accidents took place. This, however, may be attributed to the splendid condition of the athletes.

Policemen Begin Drill for Fall Field Events

Hundreds of Chicago policemen have started training in the parks and playgrounds for the second annual field day of the department, to be held in Grant park Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 8 and 9. Chief Morgan Collins has appointed the various committees for the big event, which was inaugurated under the administration of Chief Charles G. Fitzmorris for the benefit of the Police Benevolent association.

DEDICATE NEW BUTTERFIELD COUNTRY CLUB

BY JOE DAVIS.

The new Butterfield Country club blossomed forth in full glory yesterday, the fine, modern clubhouse being opened in every department, while perhaps better still, the second nine holes were thrown open for play. Greater playing facilities engender larger appetites and so the new dining room held a large gathering of members and guests who took part in the dedication ceremonies.

The course, designed by Willie Langford, will rank high among the local courses while the members believe their new club will rank equally high with any in the middle west. The second nine holes were constructed under the supervision of Burt Sturm, formerly assistant pro at Glen View.

The grounds are in Du Page county, midway between Villa Park, Elmhurst, and Hinsdale. The land is exceptionally well wooded and contains a fair sized natural lake. The property is reached by automobile by way of Roosevelt road to Canfield road, and thence south to 22d street.

FREEDMAN GOES TO PREPARE FOR TENDLER SCRAP

Sailor Freedman, matched to meet Lew Tendler of Philadelphia in the windup of the boxing show to be conducted by Floyd Fitzsimmons at Michigan City on July 4, departed yesterday afternoon for the battleground to complete preparation. He was accompanied by his wife, who will do all the cooking, and Manager Dick Curley.

According to Manager Curley, his fighter will do road work each morning through the woods on the lake shore and box in the afternoons. Enough sparring partners have been engaged to give Sailor the necessary workouts every afternoon. Herbie Schaeffer, the bantamweight of the Curley stable, who will meet Patsy Wallace of Philadelphia on the same card, also departed for Michigan City. The party will be housed in two cottages on the lake shore.

Tendler will be in Chicago Wednesday morning and will work at the Arcade in the afternoon. He will depart late Thursday afternoon for Michigan City, where training quarters have been established. The Quaker city boxer will engage in a bout tomorrow night in Philadelphia and will leave there for the west on Tuesday. Manager Phil Glassman will have charge of the fighter's training.

Patsy Rocco of East Chicago and Dennis O'Keefe of South Chicago, who mingle in one of the preliminaries, are hard at work in their respective gymnasium.

Sammy Mandell of Rockford, who meets Harry Leonard of South Chicago in the main event of George Oswego's show at East Chicago on Tuesday night, resumed training at the Arcade. Four other bouts are on the card and popular prices of $2 and $3 will prevail.

Eddie Long, manager of Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, departed yesterday for his fighter's home to second Bud in his fight with Battling Murray of Philadelphia, tomorrow night. After this fracas Taylor will remain in training for his ten round bout with Johnnie Sheppard of Boston before Steve Harder's club in Indianapolis on the night of July 3.

JACK AND TOMMY GET THE RANGE

Jack Dempsey is pictured above in the midst of his daily bouts with his sparring partners. Jack Burke is getting it this time. As the photo shows, the champ now wears a headgear to protect a cut over his eye. Tom Gibbons (photo to right) is known as one of the hardest hitting body punchers in the heavyweight ranks. He is shown starting a short left uppercut to the body preparatory to a shift and crossing his right to the head or body.

COLUMBIA CREW IN FAST WORKOUT

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 23.—As crews entered for the intercollegiate regatta on June 28 were going over the course today, widespread attention was given to the announcement by Coach Rice that in a time trial last night his Columbia varsity went over the three mile course in less than fourteen minutes. This is many seconds better than the mark made by Pennsylvania and Washington eights in time trials during the week.

Washington and the Navy had impressive workouts today, the long, clean pull of the Annapolis oarsmen and the speed with which the westerners get their hands away, sending both boats along at a rapid, even pace.

CUMMINGS WINS APAWAMIS FINAL IN GREAT PLAY

New York, June 23.—[Special.]—Dexter Cummings of Chicago, 20 year old Yale student, gave a wonderful exhibition of golf in defeating Oswald Kirby in the final round of the Apawamis club tournament today by 6 and 5. With the possible exception of Kirby's medal round of 71 on Thursday, Cummings' game today was the most finished and most impressive of any in this meeting. Although he did not sink one long putt, excepting an eight footer in the fifth where both he and Kirby had twos, Cummings was one under fours at the thirteenth hole, where the match ended. ## Prehn and Engel to Meet on Mat July 4

Urbana, Ill., June 23.—Paul Prehn, wrestling coach at the University of Illinois, and Heine Engel of Dubuque, Ia., will meet in a finish wrestling bout as one of the feature events of the Fourth of July celebration to be held at the fair grounds here. Hille Levine of New York, and Jimmie Dale of Decatur will clash in the main boxing bout.

VITAL POINTS OF JACK AND TOM TO BE COMPARED

which is a valuable assistance in slipping punches past.

Later we must study the eyes separately, as the eye is one of the three vital factors in any boxing.

In the next articles I want to present the comparative study of the lungs and hearts of the men, having received the dope on both from examining specialists. The heart and lungs are the engines that propel the boxers—and unless they are good the speed and punch are useless. The figures of lung and heart capacity of the two men will prove something of a surprise.

Sees Jack Train.

Today I visited Dempsey and he had one of the best workouts of his training without smearing up the landscape with sparring partners. He boxed six hard, fast rounds, two each with Godfrey, Burke, and Draake, and failed to score a knockout, although he had all three punch drunk at the finish.

In the last second of his second round with Burke the champion seemed to lose his temper because Burke had been roughing him, and he cut loose with everything he had behind his right. He missed the punch by inches, saving Burke's life.

Dempsey looked as if he missed more than he ever did, but he sped up considerably and seems to be working for speed more than anything else.

I spent the morning with Dempsey in his zoological garden, and if any of his admirers are worrying they can be assured and reassured. He is in better condition than I have ever seen him excepting once, and is faster and lighter. Just to make certain we stripped him and weighed him, and he scaled 192 pounds. He expects to step into the ring weighing around 190.

GIBBONS FAST WITH LEFT

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

Shelby, Mont., June 23.—[Special.]—Rain and plenty of it sent Tommy Gibbons and his stable of sparring partners indoors this afternoon. The folks in this neck of the woods never put up a kick when it rains. As a matter of fact, they would rather step into a cloudburst than go to a picnic.

Gib was in great fettle and how that bird did step around with the gang. Just a wizard of a boxer is Gibbons. Mayor Jim Johnson and the Missus, who occupied prominent places on the side lines, were pulling for Tom to knock off one of his sparring mates, but Tommy never does cut in for that stuff when engaged in training parts.

Idahoan After Match.

While Tom was in there knocking the stuffing out of his mates there was a millionaire lumberman from Spokane looking on and giving Tom a careful up and down. The person in question was none other than John H. Sexsmith, who, for many years, has been identified with the boxing racket merely for the fun that he can get out of it.

Mr. Sexsmith is the proprietor and matchmaker of one of the biggest fight arenas in Couer d'Alene, Idaho, and announced today that he stood ready to match the winner of this Dempsey and Gibbons fuss against Harry Wills or the winner of the fight between Jess Willard and Luis Firpo.

"I will give $500,000 for a match between the winner of this fight and that row between Willard and Firpo," said the genial little fellow from Spokane. "This jam ought to be a corker. It is probably the best matched pair since the memorable fight between Jim Corbett and Bob Fitzsimmons. We have an arena out home that seats 35,000 people, but we can extend it to accommodate 100,000 if we get the next big match."

Sweet Singers of Shelby Soften Hard Heart of Dick with 'Cowboy's Lament'

BY RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.

Shelby, Mont., June 23.—[Special.]—Pause, gentle reader, pause and reflect that every time your watch or clock ticks off sixty seconds, a single minute, a new hot dog joint is opened up in Shelby, Montana. If this thought is not sufficiently appalling to make you consider the evil of your way then, while you look at your little wrist watch or stare into the great open face of the Wrigley clock, remember that every time that little watch, or that great big Wrigley clock shows that thirty seconds have gone out of your life, a new soft drink parlor is ready for business in Shelby, Montana.

Judging by the number of hot dog restaurants and soda pop parlors now in Shelby, Montana, there will be at least five hundred thousand persons here on our glorious national holiday to witness the collision between the Messrs. Gibbons and Dempsey. The entire five hundred thousand will subsist entirely on hot dog and lemon pop.

GIT 'EM, BOYS, GIT 'EM WHILE THEY'RE HOT!
RED HOT
HOT DOG

Stand Neglected and Alone.

These new establishments will no doubt do a most thriving business ere long, but right now they are pathetically lonely. There are no fight visitors yet in Shelby, Montana. So, as the hot dog and soda pop emporiums open like a field of daisies kissed by the morning sun, they stand neglected and alone. One of the most heartrending incidents I ever saw I was privileged to behold this morning. The proprietor of a hot dog kiosk looked across the street at the sad-eyed owner of a lemon pop café. "Hello," said the hot dog dispenser to the soda pop clerk, "For the love of Mike come over and eat a hot dog in my joint and I'll come over to your place and order a lemon pop."

Another who is also waiting through the long days until the rich harvest in July is Mysterious Mellicent, the Sooth Sayer, whose Egyptian temple stands right in the center of bustling Main street. One would think with so much doubt in the minds of men as to whether Col. Dempsey or Col. Gibbons will win the debate on the Fourth of July that Mysterious Mellicent, the Sooth Sayer, would be taking in golden doubloons and pieces of eight by the bushel; but ah, such, gentle reader, is far from the truth of the state of affairs. Mysterious Mellicent sits rocking on the front porch of her King Tut's Tomb reading "The Life and Thrilling Adventures of Billy the Kid."

They Doubt Mellicent's Powers.

"How come," you may ask, "do not the multitude besiege Mysterious Mellicent when she, and she alone, knows who will wear the champion's crown after the great battle of July Fourth is lost and won?"

One reason, of course, is that they who are now in Shelby, Montana, do not care a tinker's hoot whether Mr. Dempsey or Mr. Gibbons prevail in the great contest in the arena July 4. What they are concerned in is, will the multitude come and will it buy feverishly of hot dog and lemon pop?

But that is not all. In the storm three or four nights ago, the angry waters overflowed Mysterious Mellicent's Egyptian tent. She rode out on that storm tossed and tempestuous sea on the platform. Long was her frail raft adrift on the deep, but finally it was cast on a coral reef inhabited by kindly soda pop natives who plunged in and brought Mysterious Mellicent to shore.

Since then there has been a doubt in the minds of men regarding Mysterious Mellicent and they have said the one to the other, "Say, if this dame can tell whether Jack is going to murder Tommy or if Tommy is going to run Jack clear out of Montana and half way across the state of Oregon, why wasn't she hep to the fact she was going to be drowned out by the rain, huh?"

Gay Minstrels Abound.

Many street minstrels with banjoes, violins, hand organs and accordions are now dotted all over Shelby. I like the blind man with the concertina best because he sings simple ballads of the great west, such as "The Cowboy's Lament" and "Bury Me Not on the Lone Prairie." The one about Jesse James is the saddest of all. It goes something like this:

Jesse had a wife, the pride of his life,
Of children he had three;
But that dirty little coward,
That sneakin' Bob Howard,
He laid Jesse James in his grave.

That may not seem sad, but remember the accompaniment is furnished by the concertina. Of course, that makes it much sadder.

Another song the blind man with the concertina has is about a cowboy who was young and careless and who acted very rudely in a saloon one day. I can't recall the song exactly, but it's something about a cowboy who grew irritable one afternoon because a Salvation Army girl asked him to buy a War Cry or put two bits in her tambourine, and so he unthinkingly drew his six gun and shot the lady. But he repented very bitterly because the last line of each verse concludes with the pathetic refrain, "I was only a cowboy, but I knowed I done wrong."

Eager as we are in Shelby, Montana, are to see red blood flow in the great arena on July 4, we are subdued and softened by the simple songs of the Main street minstrel.

DORT SIX

We have always held that the Dort Six oil-cushioned motor is one of the finest running pieces of mechanism ever put into an automobile, irrespective of price or size. This phenomenal record made at Lookout Mountain June 13 and 14 proves it:

Traveling through thick traffic with radiator cap sealed and gears sealed in high, Floyd Clymer, in a stock Dort Six, made 34 continuous and complete trips over Lookout Mountain at Golden, Colorado, carrying 185 passengers in a 24-hour record run. At least five passengers were taken each trip. The accumulated distance of 437 miles, which was made without any mechanical attention, is considered by motoring authorities a wonderful tribute to Dort power, endurance and dependability, as few cars have ever made this steep and curving road once, to say nothing of 34 times, without changing gears and stopping to let the radiator cool. No change was made in water or oil and the same driver piloted the car the entire distance.

Only those who have driven a car over this mountain can fully realize what this feat means. This record re-emphasizes and re-affirms the quality that is built into the Dort Six and proves conclusively that it is an unusually high value.

New Contest Is Opened to Help Safety Education

Kids and Teachers Enlist in Country-Wide Campaign.

FIVE hundred prizes, totalling $6,500, are offered by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce to school children and teachers for the best essays and lessons on how to promote safety on the highways.

A trip to Washington with all expenses paid is the award for the best essay by a school child and the best lesson by a chool teacher.

The actual competition will begin in the fall, but the summer season offers an opportunity for traffic safety study and campaigning in every community.

Details of the contest may be obtained from the Highway Education Board, Willard building, Washington D. C.

"We believe that the number of highways accidents can be very materially reduced," said Edward S. Jordan in announcing the contest.

"Massachusetts and Connecticut lowered their mortality rates in 1922. New York City effected a reduction in its motor accidents in May as compared with April. In each of these places the authorities have been active in safety campaigning.

"The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce is offering these prizes for the third successive year because it believes that many lives can be saved through teaching the children how to behave in traffic, and by urging them and their parents to uphold public officials in traffic law enforcement.

"At least five factors must be considered in the bringing about of safer highways:

"1. Safety Education — In the schools, and also for adult motorists and pedestrians so that observance of rules of the road becomes a habit.

"2. Jail for Reckless Drivers—There is no room for the careless few who endanger the great majority.

"3. Adequate Playgrounds—Children have a right to play. Let certain streets be set aside exclusively for play spaces if existing playgrounds are not sufficient.

"4. Better Traffic Regulation—In general, traffic regulation is being well handled, but there is a lack of uniformity between local laws which is often confusing. Speed traps are fortunately less frequent than formerly. They are harmful, as they create an atmosphere of unfair tactics. The aim of traffic control is to prevent the offense of careless driving, and the best way to do that is to have the officer out on the roads where all can see him.

"5. City Planning—Most of our city streets were laid out in the days of the horse drawn vehicle, and were built in days of smaller urban population. Congestion has reached a point where new boulevards and parking spaces are required in many communities."

Motorizing Canada.

Canadian registrations have passed the half million mark. Reports earlier in the year from the Dominion gave registration as 499,000. The latest figures from the ministry of trade and commerce, however, show that the total has reached 514,000.

BARKING LABOR'S AUTOMOBILE

Big industrial plants in Chicago are facing a parking problem almost as serious as that in the loop. Here is the way the Hawthorne plant of the Western Electric company has met the extra demand for space this season. The company, through arrangement with the town of Cicero, has filled in the area between car tracks and driveway along 22d street to care for 1,000 cars in addition to the 2,000 parked every working day inside the plant tract.

Saves $50,000,000 by Expert Work in Auto Loading

THERE is in Detroit an individual wholly unknown to the motoring public and almost equally unknown to the automotive industry itself, who in the last eight years has saved automobile owners in the United States a sum estimated at approximately $50,000,000.

This vast saving has been effected as the result of expert knowledge regarding one item generally assumed to be of small importance—that of proper and yet economical loading of automobiles for shipment. The man responsible for the big saving is E. S. Evans, head of the company that bears his name.

Evans' discoveries and inventions and the discoveries and inventions of those associated with him since that time have resulted in almost universal use of his devices by automobile manufacturers. It is estimated that they have in freight, materials and labor alone, to the industry, in excess of $20 per automobile whose destination is reached by rail, and considerably more on cars sent abroad. Freight savings alone in the last eight years through his methods have exceeded $14,500,000.

Soon after beginning to sell materials to manufacturers several years ago for loading automobiles, the thought came to Evans that no one had ever given serious consideration to mastering such a common, prosaic thing as properly loading a motor car. He set about to do it, as a sales asset. Among other things, he hired a switching engine until he was able to tell just what strain loading devices must endure in protecting motor cars of various sizes and weights against damage, through rough handling of freight cars in transit or in switching. He kept the engine two weeks, making all manner of experiments in the Detroit switching yards until he was satisfied he had complete data. With that information, he was able to point out to the various companies just where their mistakes were and how to correct them.

As a result of this experience and several years of study along other lines, his loading methods have reduced claims for motor cars damaged in transit more than 90 per cent in the last eight years. Of approximately 2,000,000 motor vehicles shipped by rail last year, claims for damages aggregated $893,927, according to official figures of the American Railroad association, or less than 50 cents per motor car shipped. Claims were less than 60 per cent of those of 1921, despite materially larger shipments.

New Transport Plan.

The extensive operation of motor buses in eastern Massachusetts is forecast by the granting by the state department of public works to the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway company the right to "aquire, own and operate motor vehicles not running upon rails or tracks for the transportation of passengers in a total of seventy-one specified cities and towns in the eastern counties of the commonwealth." This permission was granted dependent upon the company obtaining licenses from the various cities and towns in question.

The Gypsy MOON is not a "freak" or "novelty." It is in every respect a standard Six-40 MOON Touring car except for these special and wonderful features: First, in less than two minutes the interior of the car can be transformed into a sleeping apartment with a full sized spring bed. Second, in place of the usual rear trunk is the Quinlan Gypsy Kitchen Trunk, patented by Quinlan, which contains complete cooking and serving equipment, food containers, storage space, water tank, etc.—a regular kitchen and dining room combined!

And the price is just $1770, complete, delivered—ready to go. Complete even to front bumper, motor semaphore, spare wheel, cord tire and cover, luggage carrier, and the complete Gypsy equipment.

COVERING CHICAGO LIKE A BLANKET

Chicago owners measure the greater value of Overland and Willys-Knight motor cars in terms of the good service the cars give—and the good service given by the 24 local organizations behind the cars.

This good service is always convenient, wherever you live, wherever you drive, whenever you want it. It is city-wide and neighborhood-close. Facilities that give an added satisfaction to cars that perform smoothly and faithfully, on and on through the months and the miles—cars that are by all tests the greatest automobile values Willys-Overland ever produced.

Overland has longer, lower lines. It is the only car in the world with Triplex Springs [Patented], which yield the riding ease of a much longer wheelbase. It is the only car at or near its price having an all-steel touring body, finished in hard-baked enamel—and so plentifully equipped with genuine Timken and New Departure Bearings in its sturdy Mo-lyb-de-num axles.

Willys-Knight is a brilliant combination of charming coachwork and flashing performance. The marvelous Willys-Knight sleeve-valve engine actually improves with use. Carbon only makes it better. There are no valves to grind. Owners report 50,000 miles and more without a single engine adjustment. And no Willys-Knight engine has ever been known to wear out.

No wonder these cars play so great a part in the life, pursuits and happiness of Chicago.

MICHIGAN highways, cutting into and through the great summer playgrounds of the middle west, have never been better than they are this season. Thousands of vacation-bound cars are heading into this land of limitless lake shore and thousands more are nosing north and east to descend on the resorts via the straits and the famous West Michigan pike, which offers an ideal trip all the way from Petoskey on the north to Michigan City on the south.

The suggested tour this week may serve almost any vacation desire. It offers a circle tour via St. Joe and Detroit through Lansing and Grand Rapids to Grand Haven and return with pavement and good gravel footing the entire distance.

The run from Chicago to Michigan City is the one drawback. Here the new Dunes highway is still incomplete and from two to five miles of rough stone road will be met on any of the detour options. By using Broadway in Gary to Twenty-first avenue, the concrete to East Gary, and the detour route to Michigan City via McCool and the completed Dunes road section, most of the bumps are eliminated.

Michigan highway 11, the West Michigan pike, is now either paved or graveled over its entire length with short detours existing near Manistee and above Petoskey. Perfect state markings and detour signs make this trip one of the most enjoyable in the Chicago territory.

Names Instead of Numbers on Roads in Pennsylvania

THAT an intensive campaign be inaugurated to make each state highway in the Keystone state known by name for the entire length of the route is one of the recommendations in a report to Gov. Gifford Pinchot by the citizens' committee on finances appointed by the governor to recommend a fiscal policy for the new state highway department. The committee recommends also that separate names, instead of numbers, be adopted for highway sections between centers of population symbolic of the communities through which the highways pass. A more extensive application of information and direction signs and traffic control markers to the state roads is also recommended.

In reference to engineering and construction policy the committee recommends that the department "discontinue the policy of calling for bids exclusively on cement concrete pavement to such an extent as has been the practice where other comparable standard high class types would fit the situation equally as well."

"In cases where detours will result in great hardship to the traveling public," says the report, "the pavements should be constructed for half the width at a time where practicable, and the traffic allowed to use the other half of the roadway.

"A more rigid policy should be adopted with respect to oiling only half sections of a road at a time. This work should be done in such a manner that one side of the road will always be sufficiently dry so that it will not damage the paint on vehicles traveling at a normal rate of speed.

"Nothing has been done to allay the dust on the several thousand miles of earth roads. The more important of these roads should be oiled."

The report was drafted for the citizens' committee by William H. Connell, formerly chief of the Philadelphia bureau of highways, who has been appointed chief deputyt state highway commissioner by Gov. Pinchot and the recommendations made have been approved and adopted by the administration.

Save Woodlands.

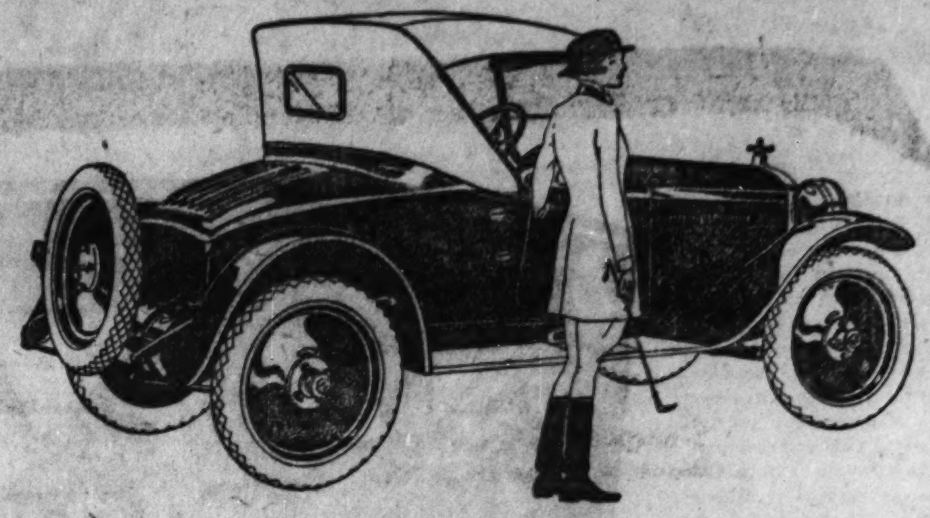
Organization of local chapters of the Motorist League for Countryside Preservation throughout the United States is progressing rapidly, automobile owners and civic clubs generally having indorsed the league's creed that motorists owe to themselves, their fellow men and the nation the care and preservation of woods, hills and countryside.



At its comparatively low price, the Hupmobile Special Roadster stands out as an unusual high value. There is much of the Hupmobile's smart, dashing performance and its dependable, consistent service, expressed in the appearance of this fine car. Single-Eight Principles New to Eight-Cylinder Engineering

PACKARD SINGLE-EIGHT—companion of Packard Single-Six—carries power to its extremest possibilities—with all the luxury of travel such an over-abundance of power implies.

Packard Single-Eight is a demonstration of Packard's long cherished conviction that it was entirely possible to combine the phenomenal performance demanded by the exacting few with the ease and economy of maintenance which characterizes the Single-Six.

Packard Single-Eight is successor to the Twin-Six—and superior to any car on the market by reason of the lessons learned from the success of the Single-Six.

The Single-Eight has been three years in the making,—and has profited by the splendid qualities of the Single-Six, applying them to another sphere of power, and developing in that sphere principles new to eight-cylinder engineering.

Superseding the V-type principle and departing from conventional eight-in-line design, the Packard Single-Eight has entirely escaped the penalty of vibration these practices have always entailed, and attained a perfection of balance without precedent.

Packard Single-Eight demonstrates an ample margin of superiority over any car in the world—revealing a degree of acceleration and deceleration, smoothness and control, nothing short of phenomenal.

All of this the Packard Single-Eight will reveal almost immediately to the one who sits behind the wheel, disclosing at the same time an elemental simplicity only comparable to the clean-cut design of its companion car—the Single-Six.

Better Models at Lower Prices to Mark Auto Trade

Closed Cars Have Right of Way in Big Market.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., June 23.—May's output of automobiles and trucks totaled 404,992. It was a production that astonished the manufacturers themselves, and one they could hardly believe possible until shown the official figures. These same manufacturers are right now confident that, with the weather stimulating motor car sales, a new high production mark will be set for the month of June, although it will fall considerably short of the May production.

In order to handle the steadily increasing volume of closed car sales, facilities are being rapidly transformed. Body plants are most affected in this transformation. This division has conluded that closed bodies will constitute at least 75 per cent of next year's output.

From now on the public may expect announcements covering new models. The Packard has led off with a formal introduction of their "Single Eight," which supercedes the "Twin Six." Automobile row has, for several months, been acquainted with the Packard plan, but the company engineers kept details well under cover. It is the second "straight eight" now being built in America, Duesenberg in Indianapolis having produced the type for the last few years. A rumor is current that a third car, in the medium price class, will soon come out with a similar motor. The trend is expected to lead towards four wheel brakes and closed bodies for 1924 styles.

At the present time people are buying cars because the prices are reasonable. The motor car is the one product at a price which compared favorably with the pre-war period, made possible by scientific curtailment of expenses and increased production. Production of open cars is rapidly decreasing, builders being satisfied that through the elimination of several luxuries they can furnish the enclosed models at open car prices.

Before the days of the coach, closed cars on high grade chassis were too expensive for the majority of buyers and a moderate priced closed car meant a low priced chassis. But that condition is fast passing, and it is predicted that within a short time closed models will be down to the open type prices.

There is a de[illegible] tendency in present day automobile development towards the "complete line" idea. In past periods, no matter how satisfactory the old car was to its owner, it was necessary to switch to some other make if the owner wished a larger car. Now it is possible for the owner to replace his old car with a larger or more completely equipped model of the same make. Most of the manufacturers are producing cars to fit any sized pocketbook.

Good Customer.

More than 523,000 freight carloads of automobiles, motor trucks, and parts [except tires and chains] were shipped last year. This volume of rail business is the third largest among all manufactures. The commodity which headed the list was refined petroleum and its products, calling for 1,110,107 carloads. As the greater part of this fuel is consumed by motor vehicles, it appears that the automobile is the leading industrial customer of the railroads.

Dayton Out Ahead.

Dayton, O., has 1,885 motor vehicles per square mile of territory. This leads all other cities of the United States. Detroit is second with a rating of 1,867, and San Francisco third, with 1,803 cars and trucks to the square mile.

AUTO HITS LIMITED; RAILROAD COLLECTS $1,050 IN DAMAGES

DANVILLE, Ill., June 23.—[Special.]—With a settlement out of court, comes to an end the unique case in which the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad actually collected damages because of a collision between an automobile and a passenger train. By the terms of the settlement the railroad is allowed $1,050 for injury to track, locomotive cars, interlocking plant and signals, delay to trains, and other expense, occasioned by the careless operation of an automobile by Harper Daniels, retired business man of Danville, on June 3, 1916.

Daniels was killed, as was Engineer Charles Everhart. The estate of Daniels brought suit for damages. The railroad filed a counter suit against the estate, claiming that the crossing where the accident occurred afforded a plain view of the railroad for more than a mile in each direction.

The case filed by the estate was withdrawn and that filed by the road went to trial. The road demanded $10,000, while the family of the engineer sought an equal amount. For the past six years the case has been running the gamut of the courts from the lower to the upper and back.

The case was pushed by the railroad, largely to influence the motoring public to exercise caution in approaching railroad crossings, and is said to be the first instance of a western road endeavoring to collect damages from the owner of a wrecked car.

CHICAGO'S MOTOR CAMPS

COOK county's world famous forest preserves now offer fifteen free tourist camp grounds to the summer visitor. All of them are equipped with the camping essentials, water, comfort stations, and fuel. A few have serviceable shelters, ovens, and like facilities. Caretakers are in charge of each of the camps, with instructions to make visitors comfortable.

In addition there are ten free summer camps in the preserves where automobile parties may make themselves at home for a month's stay.

The tourist camps now open and in service are indicated on the above Rice's Pathfinder map by crosses. The summer camps are indicated by circles. Where a preserve district offers both tourist and permanent camps the cross is within the circle.

Following are locations of the tourist camps: 1—Green Bay road north of Glencoe; 2—Dundee road west of Glencoe; 3—Dundee road at Wheeling; 4—Milwaukee avenue and Hintz roads south of Wheeling; 5—River road just north of Des Plaines; 6—Dundee and Northwest highways north of Palatine; 7—Higgins and Arlington Heights roads; 8—Caldwell reserve at Niles; 9—Lake street and Keystone avenue, River Forest; 10—22d street and Mannheim road; 11—Lyons, south of Ogden avenue; 12—87th street and Western avenue; 13—183d street and Chicago road north of Glenwood; 14—Dixie and Lincoln highways, Chicago Heights; 15—Sauk trail and King road, South Chicago Heights.

Summer camps: In preserve bordering Milwaukee avenue south of Wheeling; preserve bordering River road south of Wheeling; preserve bordering River road north of Des Plaines; in preserve near intersection of Higgins and Arlington Heights roads; in Caldwell preserve at Niles; River road at Schiller park; Joliet and Brainard roads southwest of Lyons; at 183d street and Chicago road; in the Sauk woods near South Chicago Heights.

Tourist Camps Draw Thousands to Open Road

GROWTH of tourist travel this year, largely due to the increased number of tourist camps, has been unprecedented so far, according to officials of the American Automobile association. There are at the present time, according to figures compiled by the A. A. A., more than 1,800 tourist camps in the United States, in addition to hundreds of available camp sites for the wayside motorist.

Reports from every part of the country are to the effect that never before in history has there been such a great demand for touring information. The movement has no particular local, but is found in every section of the United States. On every important highway can be found the tourist with his camp equipment strapped to running board or back of the car, bound for some spot in the great outdoors.

"The increased efficiency of the automobile undoubtedly has had something to do with this great exodus to the outdoors," said W. H. Loller, chairman of the touring and transportation of the association. "The average motorist has the feeling that he can now venture out on long distance tours without the fear of motor or tire trouble to mar his journey. He can do this by having his car thoroughly gone over by his home garage before starting. He knows that almost anywhere he chooses to go in this present motor age he is certain to find dependable garages to make necessary repairs or again check up on the various mechanical features of his automobile, which permits him to again start out on the next lap of his journey reasonably assured of freedom from further trouble.

"The cheapness with which a vacation may be spent in touring the country, stopping over night at well equipped auto camps, also is a contributing factor," he added. "And then there are always a large number of people, able to stay where they please, who prefer living out of doors as much as possible, and they augment the crowd of motor campers to a considerable extent."

Keep License Clear.

Acccording to information received by the legal department of the Chicago Motor club, the police are now arresting motorists for using bumpers that obscure the state license plate.

Motorists should be sure that the state license plate can be read easily.

SAFETY CHIEF WANTS SPEED COPS TO STOP HIDE AND SEEK GAME

MOTORCYCLE sleuths in Chicago will find byway hiding places closed to them and receive instructions to patrol the boulevards in plain view of all automobile drivers if Ald. Frank J. Tomczak's recommendations to the park boards are followed.

As chairman of the newly organized Chicago Safety commission, the alderman last week investigated boulevard conditions as well as automobile courts. He reached the conclusion that an officer can enforce speed laws better by patrolling his beat openly with the idea of holding the speed of all cars under the limit than by hiding his machine and pouncing out on the speeder. His note to the park boards adds that fewer arrests and less court congestion will result if officers supervise the speed on boulevards rather than work for arrests alone.

Bad Thieves' Market.

Thieves are finding automobiles to be an unprofitable form of loot. In 1922, 78 per cent of vehicles stolen were recovered, according to the National Automobile Dealers' association. Those high in robbery circles are reported to have said that the car stealing business is highly unsatisfactory, due to the fact that the product cannot be readily hidden, that it goes out of style if concealed too long and that the number of vehicles recovered makes the overhead cost so high as to render a good business profit almost impossible.

USE THE CLUTCH.
Cultivate the habit of coasting around corners or going into second gear.

Watch the Tube.

A leaky inner tube is a parasite of the tire mileage. Even a slow leak will handicap a tire and sap the life of the casing. In a few miles, underinflation will rob the tire of many miles of service. Leaky tubes come from a variety of causes. It may be that the valve plunger is worn or sticks; the lock-nut at the base of the valve stem may work loose; or running flat may honeycomb the inside of the tube with tiny holes through which air constantly seeps out.

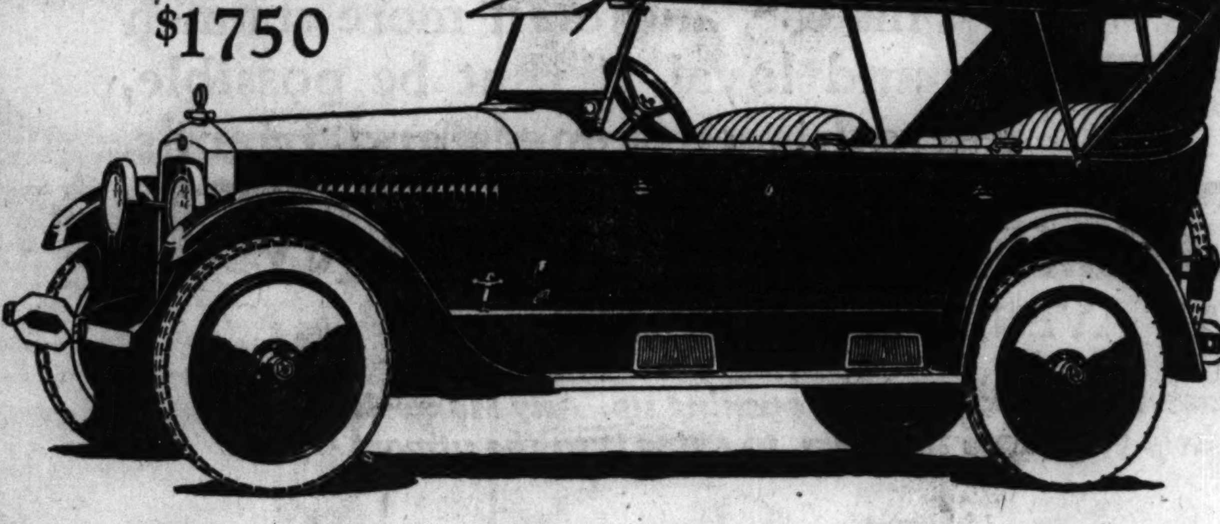
STUDEBAKER BIG-SIX
TOURING CAR
$1750



You Can Buy More Weight—But You Won't Find a Better Car

In the Studebaker Big-Six you get all the performance, all the comfort, and all the dependability that any car can give—at a price that smaller producers cannot even approach.

The Big-Six Touring is a seven-passenger car with a seven-passenger motor and seven-passenger dimensions throughout. It distinctly is not a seven-passenger body mounted on a five-passenger chassis.

The Big-Six will take the steepest hills on high. It will maintain a high rate of speed over long stretches hour after hour. Yet no car is better adapted to constant city use. None provides more restful riding—none is easier to operate. None is freer from frequent repairs.

And all the equipment you will ever want or need is an integral part of the car. It is complete even to an extra disc wheel with tire, tube and tire cover.

Its low price is due to large volume and to the fact that Studebaker overhead is shared by three models—all sixes. Then, too, only one manufacturing profit is included in the Big-Six price because all vital parts are manufactured in Studebaker plants.

If you spend more than the Big-Six price you can buy more weight and bulkiness and pay more for overhead and operation but you will not get a better automobile.

Studebaker has been building quality vehicles for 71 years and the name Studebaker is assurance of satisfaction.

Power to climb in high gear any climbable hill

Extra disc wheel complete with cord tire, tube and tire cover. Bumpers. Motometer. One-piece, rain-proof windshield, automatic windshield cleaner, and glare-proof visor. Rear-view mirror. Walnut steering wheel with new-type spark and throttle control. Aluminum-bound running boards with corrugated rubber mats and step pads. Aluminum kick plates. Grip handles on body rails. Snubbers. Cowl lights, courtesy light, tonneau lamp and combination stop-and-tail light. Cowl ventilator. Clock. Thief-proof transmission lock.

WAYCROSS
Automatic Windshield Cleaner

Have BOTH eyes open when you drive

OLD TYPE CLEANER
[Like driving with only one eye open]

See the full road ahead—not a part of it. Safety demands clear vision all the way across, through rain, sleet, mist or snow.

You are taking chances with a "squeegee" or cleaner that simply clears off a semi-circle. Don't take chances of hitting a child who suddenly jumps into the street ahead of you. Some rainy day a car trying to get clear from the curb will crumple your right fender just because you can't see into the "blind spot."

Make your stormy-day driving safe and pleasant for yourself and passengers. Get a Waycross. It keeps your windshield clean all the way across.

Costs nothing to operate as it runs from the vacuum of the motor. No noise, squeaks or jar. To put in action, simply turn a control valve. When not in use, cleaner is out of the way at end of windshield. Nothing to get out of order. Will last for years.

Motorists everywhere who have used the Waycross on stormy days, declare it is the greatest safety device ever invented for an automobile.

Right now make a note to have a Waycross attached to your car tomorrow. The price is $10. Nominal charge for installation. It will be put on while you wait, at any of the responsible dealers listed below.

To Buyers of New Cars—Have the Waycross put on your new car before you drive it off the dealer's floor. It may save you an accident later.

De Palma Signs to Pilot "Dark Horse" for Wade

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 23.—Ralph De Palma, hero of scores of hard fought speed battles, will represent Kansas City in the 250 mile National Championship automobile race on July 4 on the local speedway and in the various contests of the United States this season. This fact became assured late last night when he affixed his signature to a contract with George L. Wade, to pilot the Missouri built car which will be known as the "Wade Special."

It was a peculiar combination of events which led up to this agreement. Originally Harlan Fengler was selected to drive this entry, but later it was found that he was under contract with E. C. "Cliff" Durant, who refused to release him. Wade immediately began looking for a capable driver and just at this time it was learned that De Palma was available. For 24 hours the telephone and telegraph wires were kept hot with the result that on Sunday evening De Palma stepped from the train here and a few hours later had signed on the dotted line.

For almost a quarter of a century he has been identified with this superlative sport and during that time has won, at least one time, practically every event of importance in America and many in Europe. On numerous occasions he has had victory almost in his grasp only to be cheated at the last minute by some unusual or spectacular incident or accident. In 1912, with less than two laps to go and with a lead of eighteen miles over his nearest rival, he was forced out of the race at Indianapolis. Three years later, in a wild burst of speed, he succeeded in capturing the capital prize in this contest and establishing a record at the same time, which withstood all attacks made on it until seven years later, when it was broken.

This is the first appearance of De Palma in Kansas City since 1916, when he competed in a series of races at Dodson, winning the feature event that day, after a vicious contest with Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker.

CHICAGO'S HARDENED ARTERIES

Erase the surface cars in these pictures and imagine motor traffic flowing over loop streets at boulevard speed. John A. Ritchie, president of the Chicago Motor Coach company, told the city council last week this vital improvement can be brought about only through "burying" every track entering the business district in a complete system of subway terminals.

The first scene is State street at Madison at 1:30 p. m. on a May day. Official counts show that 36,000 people pass through this intersection every hour in the rush period, plus 200 vehicles. Mr. Ritchie contends that motor vehicles must be adopted for surface transportation. The other is a typical scene at State and Washington streets.

Buy Your New Columbia Six From Your Neighborhood Dealer

Allison-Rood Company announces a new sales policy which benefits all present and prospective owners of Columbia Sixes.

There are two basic reasons for the conspicuous success attained by the Columbia Six in the city of Chicago during the past year:

REASON NO. 1—

The car has always made good with the public. Built throughout from standard units of specialized construction, Columbia Six assures dependable service and lasting satisfaction. Never before has a six cylinder car of such established value been offered for less than $1,000. Columbia Sixes are beautiful in appearance and consistent in performance. These dependable cars excel in power, easy riding, acceleration, quietness of operation and all around economy. A demonstration will convince you. In fact, you never will know how good a six cylinder automobile you can buy for less than $1,000 until you have driven a Columbia Six.

REASON NO. 2—

Located at convenient points of distribution, reliable dealers are selling and servicing the Columbia Six. One of these reputable dealers is convenient to your home, right in your neighborhood. For a long time these well organized dealers have been adhering closely to those sales and service policies which create and hold public confidence. Square Deal policies guarantee that these organizations are in business to stay. Each Columbia dealer has long been courteously caring for the wants of owners and building good will through the delivery of conscientious, intelligent service. It will pay you to see the Columbia Six before you buy. The dealer nearest your home will be pleased to give all the information you desire. He will be happy to prove the many superiorities of Columbia Six performance in an actual demonstration. In many ways it will pay you to buy a Columbia Six from the Columbia dealer in your neighborhood.

To co-operate more fully with this splendid and rapidly growing sales organization—in appreciation of the very fine work these dealers have done in selling and servicing the many hundreds of Columbia Sixes in Chicago and vicinity, the Allison-Rood Company, pioneer automobile dealers in the Chicago market, withdraw from the retail sales field. This long-established organization now takes up the bigger and more important work of improving service and developing the distribution of Columbia Sixes in Cook County and throughout Illinois, eastern Iowa, southern Michigan and northern Indiana.

This radical change of policy has been adopted in order that the Allison-Rood Company might withdraw from direct competition with its many active and efficient (associate) dealers, who are so well equipped to completely serve present and prospective Columbia owners. Through this move we strengthen and expand Columbia Six service and distribution in Chicago, while leaving the Allison-Rood Company free to co-operate closely with the established dealers in the development of their businesses.

Buy your new Columbia Six from the dealer who is located most conveniently to your home, thus assuring closer attention, better service and complete satisfaction.

STUTZ SIX

Motorists in these parts need capable cars—those with the sort of innards that will withstand the strenuous going of this locality.

They need endurance and comfort, power and speed—brakes that are gentle but giants in strength. If the Stutz Six had been designed for use in this section exclusively it could not meet its needs more completely.

Easier to handle than any car you ever drove—cushioned by springs 100 inches long—equipped with brakes fully 10% larger than those of any comparable car—and so frugal in the use of gasoline and oil—the Stutz Six is a value you can't afford to overlook in selecting your next motor car.

And in traffic, too, as on the hills, you'll find it a master performer—quick as a flash when you give it the gas and able to hold any pace on high from a creep to speeds faster than you'll ever care to drive it.

The market today offers no finer investment than this phenomenal car—the first Stutz ever priced under $2000. And besides, there is the distinction of Stutz ownership and the fascination that only a Stutz affords.

You'll sell yourself on the Stutz Six if you'll come in and examine it. You'll find it a worthy contemporary of the higher priced Stutz Speedway Four Models—America's preeminent Sport Cars—now also on display.

FARM AND GARDEN

Quarantine Puts Cattle Malady Under Control

By Frank Ridgway.

This is the second of a series of articles on infectious abortion in cattle.

INFECTIOUS, contagious abortion in cattle has become so widely spread that the problem of controlling the disease calls for nation wide action by breeders of both beef and dairy herds. Mysteriously entering herds, like burglars in the night, the disease works in such secret fashion that each year a large percentage of the nation's calf crop is mowed down, and the farmer has heretofore accepted it as an uncontrollable malady.

While many questions about abortion are still unanswered, much of the germ's mysterious garb has been removed by scientists. Isolation, sanitation, and careful management will control the disease effectively in an infected herd and prevent it from getting a foothold in a clean herd. Through the findings of scientific investigators, the experience of veterinarians in the field, and practical dairymen, several cardinal principles have been fairly well established, making possible the prevention and control of this corrosive, gnawing disease of the live stock industry.

Can Be Cured.

While there is no specific cure for the disease, it is certain that infected animals can be cured and losses materially lessened through a continuous fight. Every farmer should examine his herd and make a careful study to see if the disease is present. If he is not familiar with the symptoms of the disease, a skilled veterinarian should be called in, especially where premature calves have been dropped. The farmer who has a herd entirely free from the disease is rare, at least fortunate, and should fight to keep the infection out. For authorities say the owner's eternal vigilance is the first essential to success in any attempt to keep a herd free from abortion.

Hadley of the Wisconsin station says that in building up a herd by buying stock, preference should be given to calves under ten months of age, as they are less apt to be infected at the time of purchase than are heifers or cows. If cows are bought, they should be subjected to a blood test that veterinarians are now able to give. The test should be made before the new animals are turned in with the clean herd. If the cows are not tested, they should be kept in quarantine for thirty days before they are allowed to run with the clean herd.

Isolate the Animal.

While preventing the infection from getting into the herd is always of vital importance, the main question with the average farmer today is what can be done to control abortion that is already in the herd.

Authorities are fairly well agreed upon the principal method to follow. In summarizing the measures Dr. J. W. Connaway of Missouri station says that, if an abortion occurs in the herd, isolate the animal promptly and do not take the risk that it was due to an accidental injury, shock, or some nonspecific infection. It is particularly important to "destroy the aborted fetus and afterbirth; burn or bury them deeply, adding quicklime before covering with earth."

Disinfect the stall and litter where the abortion occurred. Farmers are often thorough in their cleanup work up to this point, but are neglectful when the abortion occurs in an open field. If it happens in the open field or barnyard, cover the spot with freshly slaked lime, or sprinkle thoroughly with a disinfectant that has a disagreeable odor which will keep other animals away. Remember that the great danger is in passing the disease from cow to cow through contaminated grass, hay, and other feed.

Quarantine Is Effective.

Always watch the aborter; keep the animal and her stall thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. Hold her in quarantine for at least three weeks. Some authorities believe it is worth the time and trouble to keep the animal separated from the herd for a month or six weeks. When all discharge has stopped, the cow may be returned to the herd, but not bred for at least two months.

Liquid cresolis compositus, six ounces to a gallon of water, makes a good stable and litter disinfectant, and two ounces to the gallon is about the right strength solution to use on the exterior of the cow.

If the right control measures are practiced the aborting cow may be more valuable than cows bought from other herds about which little or nothing is known. However, if only one cow in the herd is a persistent aborter, it may be best to dispose of her to prevent spreading the disease to other members of the herd. There is no law to prevent the sale of aborting cows, but a practice is developing among breeders to inform the buyer of animals coming from herds where abortion has occurred that the disease is present and precautions should be taken as a safeguard.

To aid in keeping abortion under control in Missouri the veterinary science department at the university, Columbia, Mo., runs tests free of charge for farmers who send in blood samples. While the aborting cow is in quarantine a sample of blood is taken by the farmer with tubes, needles, and directions furnished by the university. If the test indicates that the abortion germ is present, the entire herd is tested and the aborters or carriers of the germ are marked accordingly, and the farmer is advised to keep them separated.

Bulls may be infected with the abortion bacilli. Views of different authorities about the part they play in spreading the disease are conflicting. They are less susceptible than the cow. Cows are usually infected by other cows. The safest plan is to use precautions and disinfectants at breeding time to prevent the bull from acting as a mechanical carrier of the disease.

No attempt has been made to give the views of the various investigators and authorities on the different factors entering in the control of this menacing disease, for they are numerous and varied. Practically all state agricultural colleges have experts who have made thorough investigations and have published free farmer bulletins, summarizing the known facts about abortion and making recommendations of control measures simple enough for any farmer to follow. Every breeder should have one of these practical bulletins in his library.

DOWN ON THE FARM

FARM MENAGERIE—Hogs, corn, and fat steers are not the only product of Iowa farms. Fred Dorhmann's pet raccoons, shown here, are the foundation stock of the fur farm now being established on the Dorhmann farm near Persia, Ia. The "coons" were caught playing pranks in Mr. Dorhmann's back yard by Mrs. J. D. Foster, Bloomington, Ill., who sent in the picture.

Send in good, clear pictures taken in the field or around the farm home to the Agricultural Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

POULTRY TIPS

Chicken owners cannot afford to neglect the feeding of their layers during the summer months. Every poultryman knows that March, April and May are the egg laying months, but few of them know that if a hen is well fed during June, July and August she will produce almost as many eggs during the summer months as she does in the spring. It only costs about 10 cents a month to feed a hen. Poultry experts have figured it out that about seven out of ten eggs are produced by the average hen between the first of March and the first of September.

If your chickens are being killed by rats send for the government's new free bulletin No. 1302, "How to Get Rid of Rats." With some of the remedies recommended in this bulletin a whole family of rats can be killed in a single night. Two or three rats can kill dozens of chickens in a few hours. One practical way of killing rats is to fumigate the burrows with the fumes that come from the exhaust of a gasoline engine. The exhaust from an automobile may be directed into the rat burrow by means of a hose and the entrance around the hose sealed with damp earth to prevent the escape of gas.

Diarrhea, which often causes heavy losses in chicks, may be caused by allowing the little chicks to eat feed that has accumulated on the ground, feeding floors or in hoppers where it becomes moist and moldy or sour.

Joke on Joker, Not on Goats, Expert Avers

RAPID developments of the milk goat among suburbanites, particularly around midwest and Pacific coast cities, within the last ten years, has brought into the industry a group of breeders who resent the buffoon's cheap remarks about the goat's ravenous appetite for tin cans. Those who know the merits of the milk goat class it with the most valuable domestic animals.

"Though popular above any other domestic animal in Europe, Asia and Africa, we Americans with all our pride of achievements in numerous lines are at the rear end of the procession when it comes to an economical supply of pure, rich milk for bottle fed infants and invalid adults. Such milk is supplied by the improved breeds of milk goats," says W. L. TeWalt, Vincennes, Ind., an authority on goats and a practical breeder for more than thirty years.

Mr. TeWalt says that many enthusiastic breeders emphasize the richness of goat milk as being the chief and most important quality, but "in my estimation that ranks third; surely it is of less consequence than its outstanding quality of being free from disease germs and of its being so easily digested by persons with delicate stomachs.

"No animal known is so fastidious in its selection of clean feed and drink as is the goat (the jester to the contrary notwithstanding)," he added. "My goats always select a clean place to lie down, and their excretions are of such a character that they do not create an objectionable stable.

"Goats have no long tails with which to switch dirt into the milk; they are the healthiest known domestic animal, and the milk is pure.

"The other outstanding feature of goat's milk lies in the fact that the fat globules are but one-fifth the size of the fat globules in the milk of the cow. The sacks or capsules containing the fat are more easily broken up so the fat can be readily digested and assimilated.

"These are indisputable facts, backed up by innumerable scientific tests. The medical profession throughout the country is beginning to recommend the use of goat milk for cases of malnutrition, tuberculosis, for convalescents, and persons with delicate stomachs."

As secretary of the American Milk Goat Record association, Mr. TeWalt said:

"We are not trying to develop the milk goat as a competitor of the cow. Each has its place, just as the horse and mule, the sheep and the hog, or the turkey and the hen. There is ample room and need for all, and each has a place to fill."

GARDEN NOTES

The spraying ring idea is growing in popularity throughout the middle west. Five sprays usually are necessary during the season, and they cost the grower about 10 cents a spray, or 50 cents a tree, but the extra fruit picked from sprayed trees will more than pay the bill.

In watering such plants as beans and tomatoes it is a good plan to allow the water to run slowly and keep pulling the hoes along the row as the soil becomes thoroughly soaked.

MORE than one million automobiles now have been built and sold by the Willys-Overland organization. One million cars! This is not merely an accomplishment in production and distribution. It is an accomplishment in civilization.

Many Overlands and Willys-Knights are playing a tremendous part in the life and happiness of our own community. They are putting our families on swift wheels. They are multiplying the earning power of our men. They are lightening and quickening the work of our women. They are carrying our children to school. They are promoting business and bringing our people together in closer, friendlier relationship.

Today's Overland and Willys-Knight cars unquestionably are the best automobiles Willys-Overland ever built—and at the lowest price. All past achievements are being excelled in beauty of design, in comfort, in faithful performance—in the giving of real value.

Reflecting such quality, sales this season are the greatest in our history. The public has registered unmistakably its appreciation of great value.

Speeders and Bad Motor Laws Hit by State Solons

Long Campaign Ends with Adoption of Popular Measures.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

CHICAGO motorists cashed in last week on more than three years' campaigning for automobile safety and traffic improvement measures. Yesterday they were able to celebrate the official adoption of regulations which promise immediate relief from the speeder evil, the court "fixer," the jay walker, and the mass of contradictory regulations which make interstate travel in the middle west a continuous hazard.

Among the most important successes in the long automobile campaign was the anti-speeder and fixer bill passed by the legislature. It provides for jail sentences in addition to fines in Illinois for the punishment of the dangerous 10 per cent among automobile drivers who, according to safety authorities, cause the majority of automobile deaths and injuries. Under the bill all motorcycle and traffic policemen are made officers of the court. When they issue an arrest slip it automatically becomes a court document. Heavy penalties are attached to tampering with the slip or attempting to "pull" it.

This measure was originally conceived by Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal Court of Chicago after he had completed a detailed study of Speeder court records in coöperation with THE TRIBUNE. It was backed by Sheriff Hoffman, Coroner Wolf, the Chicago Safety Council, automobile associations and other agencies enlisted in the campaign to stop auto deaths.

"I am convinced that there is only one practical way to stop the persistent speeder," said Judge Olson in commenting on the bill. "Every man who drives a car must be examined mentally before he is allowed to take out a license. Then, if he persists in reckless driving a jail sentence and revocation of license will certainly relieve society of his menace."

The new bill levies a fine of from $5 to $200 or a jail sentence not to exceed thirty days, or both, for speeding and reckless driving. It is understood that jail sentences will be ordered only against serious offenders in Chicago. When a driver is arrested the third time, however, his license may be revoked for a full year by the court and a jail sentence ordered.

In addition to safeguarding the courts against "fixers," the new arrest slip system will provide a systematic record of offenders. It is planned to issue arrest books in duplicate. One will be retained by the court, the other given to the police officer. Each slip is to be numbered in duplicate to form a direct check on both the violator and officer.

Another bill adopted steps up the legal speed limit for country driving to 35 miles an hour in Illinois. Michigan and California have found that this limit is safe. The Illinois regulation, like that in the other states, will require observance of "reasonable" speed at all times.

Motor transportation students agree that the organization last week of state motor vehicle department officials into the middle west conference is one of the most important steps taken in recent years. State department officers of thirteen states perfected the interstate combine in Chicago at the suggestion of the national safety council. They pledged themselves to unify and dovetail state motor regulations and launched this work through active committees.

They hope to unify the speed laws, license laws, headlight laws, and highway weight regulations throughout the west and coördinate these regulations with like blanket rules in the east. Their work will also extend to the unification of highway marking and, eventually, may make one set of driving rules official in all cities of the territory.

A blanket law regulating automobile lights in all states of the conference is already being worked out by Mike Holm, secretary of state of Minnesota, who was named as a committee of one to handle this issue. Charles Higbee, Chicago headlight expert, has volunteered his aid in framing the practical measure needed in the west. The problem lies in regulating all headlights to eliminate the glare which causes so many fatal accidents, and still give a safe night driving light. This problem will be worked out and submitted to all of the conference states by the committee and the national council.

W. W. Miller, chief of the automobile bureau under Secretary of State Emerson, and Charles W. Becker were named as a special committee to investigate and recommend a unified license law to all the states. Other officials are working out unified laws governing road markings, truck weights, and speeds. It is expected that the blanket regulations will be ready by Sept. 4, when the conference holds its second session in Des Moines, Iowa.

In addition to these improvements, President John Hertz of the Yellow Taxi company launched a city campaign last week against the jay-walker evil. Its aim is the regulation of pedestrian traffic in the loop to avert accidents.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question Mrs. Houston Spyller, 402 Ewing avenue, Decatur, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

Where do you plan to drive for this year's vacation trip?

Where Asked.

City hall.

The Answers.

R. W. Hutchins, 33 North Lotus avenue, police officer—I'll be on my way to Washington, D. C., about the middle of July. I have taken this same trip before, and it is wonderful. It goes over the National Old trails, the first government road ever built. Climbing the Blue Ridge mountains is one of the features.

F. Parry-Williams, 28 East Jackson boulevard, real estate broker—Somewhere in northern Wisconsin. We go fishing up there every year. If we can't catch bass, it's a poor lake that won't cough up a good string of perch. Rent a cottage; motor, fish, do just as one pleases—that's one way to have a wonderful time.

Albert Waller, 4142 North Whipple street, moving picture operator—My summer vacation will not be as long this year. I bought a new car, a big one. Last year I made my wife a present of a trip to Fargo, N. D. Came back via the Mississippi river from Red Wing to Baraboo, and we thought it the most wonderful scenery in the world. Going to Clinton, Ia., only, this year.

J. A. Wilson, Princeton, Ill., post-office clerk—My wife and I are on our vacation now. We are on our way to La Peer, Mich. From there we will tour through northern Michigan. I haven't taken a vacation for five years, and for the time being we have thrown our cares to the four winds.

Joseph F. Merrill, 5010 Wentworth avenue, police officer—To the Ozark mountains; mountain trout fishing—that's where I'm going. We go loaded to the springs—shotguns, rifles, fishing paraphernalia, and everything we need or think we will need—and camp as we hit. And the more places we hit the better, O, boy!

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

THE new Stutz Six made the best of Chicago's traffic congestion last week through a series of city runs to demonstrate the flexibility of its famous motor and its easy handling qualities. The car, which Charles M. Schwab has chosen as his chief industrial pet, threaded the congestion of loop streets and boulevards in high gear, parked easily in seemingly impossible spaces, and emerged without a scratch from the practical test. The Chicago traffic test supplements the sustained speed trials given to each new Stutz car on the Indianapolis speedway.

A new model, the Haynes 60 standard touring car at $1,295, has been officially announced by Alton G. Seiberling, general manager of the Kokomo company. This is the lowest price ever placed on a Haynes car. Distributors report an instant demand for the new model.

A commercial department has been established by W. C. Auble, Durant distributor, for the sale of Durant's new 1¼ ton speed truck, the Mason Road King. G. A. Randall has joined the Auble company as manager of the commercial division.

June finds the Ford Motor company undertaking the greatest task of its career, that of attempting to fill an order list for cars and trucks which totals 311,000 for the month.

Jack Quinlan has hung up another distribution record for Moon cars in Chicago by delivering 163 automobiles to purchasers in the local territory in five days.

The Automotive Specialty company, Indiana avenue and 23d street, has been appointed distributor for the Waycross automatic windshield cleaner. The device operates over the entire width of the shield.

The new Cole Royal sedan, one of the new Cole models which have attracted unusual attention on the row recently, has among its features a multiple disc, self-adjusting clutch, and insulation between all body and mental work.

Howard Capper has severed connection with the Chicago firm of Capper & Capper to ally himself with the Stutz Chicago company, according to announcement made last week.

Claims Auto Patent.

The first patent for a gasoline automobile has been claimed by Georges Belmont, a Frenchman. His patent has been discovered, numbered 174,870, in the archives of the French patent registry office, dated Oct. 23, 1885. Belmont is still living in a small town near Clermont-Ferrand, existing on a tiny old age pension accorded him as a warrior of the war of 1870.

Into New Fields.

All parts of the world are opening up as markets for American motor vehicles. Though some European countries are heavy purchasers of the United States product, the best customers for motor cars from the United States in 1922 were Australia, Canada, and Mexico, which purchased 11,236, 10,214, and 7,279, respectively.

PLAN GUILD HALL AT U. OF I. FOR EPISCOPALIANS

Chapel to Be Erected in Near Future.

BY AL CHASE.

BISHOP ANDERSON.
[Gibson, Sykes & Fowler Photo.]

Some time ago the Rt. Rev. Charles Palmerston Anderson, Episcopal bishop of Chicago, after a few days spent at Champaign, made the following comments:

"My visit to the University of Illinois has completely converted me to the need of a chapel, not in the dim and distant future, but in the immediate present. I told some of the students that they could have a chapel if they wanted it, but that they themselves would have to show that they wanted it. I am sure that the student body themselves will prove irresistible.

"I have come home feeling that it is somewhat of a scandal and humiliation that the Episcopal church does not have a beautiful chapel at the University of Illinois, and I am ready to do everything I can. I think that if the young people themselves, organized as they were for the stadium, go to people up and down the state with such backing as we can give them the chapel might be consecrated on Whitsunday, 1924."

Students Notify Bishop.

The Episcopalian students of the university immediately let Bishop Anderson know their stand in the matter by passing resolutions dedicating themselves to the erection of a "real church building."

"We feel that students who are forced to be away from the organized parishes of their home towns for three-fourths of the year should have an adequate center for religious activities," the resolutions state. "The membership of a university group is a fluctuating one, and since it can be only partly self-supporting the parishes throughout the state may help to establish the work here."

Since then a drive for funds has been started, conducted by Brewster Stickney, U. of I. '25, a Chicago boy, with the aid of his fellow students and a group of prominent Chicagoans. He has headquarters in the offices of the diocese of Chicago in the Le Moyne building, 180 North Wabash avenue.

Plans have just been completed by Architect J. E. O. Pridmore of Chicago for a chapel and guild hall of Gothic design, modeled after the old English chapel form. It will cost $250,000 and an additional $100,000 is necessary as an endowment. There is now $50,000 in the chapel fund. The drive for funds has started in Chicago because 55 per cent of the church students live in this city. It is hoped that ground may be broken next fall.

Site Now Ready.

A site is now available at Wright and Armory avenues in Champaign. Some adjoining property will be needed, but the main part of the building may be started on what is now owned. The corner is bounded on two sides by the university campus and adjoins the site of the new $500,000 university library.

The Episcopal church is the third denomination to plan a university religious center. The Methodists have partially completed their $2,500,000 group of buildings known as the Wesley Foundation. The Catholics have plans under way for a students church and community center. The proposed buildings of the Episcopalians will be called the Chapel of St. John the Divine.

Building Permits

Eighteen permits for a total valuation of $119,000 were issued yesterday, among them being the following:

Armitage-av., 2924; 2 story brick; A. Louthan, owner; E. P. Ruppert, arch.; J. J. Murphy, mason; A. Carlsen, carp. ....$12,500
Tripp-av., S., 1423; 3 story brick flats; A. Rosener, owner; Rawson-Eisenberg, arch.; R. Skopp, mason 18,000
Whipple-st., S., 5829; 2 story brick; Anderson & Kowel, owners; R. L. Lang, arch.; J. B. Hughes, mason; W. Warner, carp. .... 12,000
Irving-av., N., 6224; 2 story brick; J. A. Anderson, owner; A. Burns, arch.; O. Carlson, mason; H. Beckmann, carp. .... 10,000

NEW RELIGIOUS CENTER FOR U. OF I.

Proposed Episcopal chapel and guild hall to care for Episcopalian students at the University of Illinois at Champaign. Architect J. E. O. Pridmore's plans call for 333 seats in the chapel proper. A small morning chapel, which will open into the nave of the larger one, will contain fifty-six seats. Plans include a hall, 30x68, for social and meeting purposes. There will also be class rooms, offices, and kitchen facilities.

REALTORS KEEP EYE ON ADVERSE REALTY BILLS

All but One Law They O. K. Is Passed.

The average real estate dealer probably doesn't know that "there's enough unwise legislation in Springfield to put all real estate brokers out of business." This quote is from J. Soule Warterfield, business manager of the Chicago Real Estate board, and he adds: "and if they didn't put 'em all out directly, they'd make the commodity they deal in so unattractive that they might as well go out of business."

During the last session of the state general assembly 1,396 bills were introduced. Careful study of every one by the realtors' legislative committee disclosed that 100 affected real estate in some way.

Steers Clear of Politics.

Illinois realtors have a legislative committee headed by Col. Gilbert F. Woods, which has done much constructive work towards protecting real estate interests. Politics have been avoided and senators and congressmen have not been antagonized. They have been supplied with facts about unwise bills and also authentic information about legitimate legislation. As a result every bill that has been condemned by the realtors' committee has failed to pass. On the other hand, with one exception, every bill backed by the relators has been made a law.

As an example of some of the proposed laws which would have worked hardships on the realty profession and the general public was a bill prohibiting the issuing or selling of a mortgage on real estate in excess of 60 per cent of the value of the property. This, it was pointed out, practically would have put the small home movement out of business.

May Have Hall of Records.

Another bill prohibited any one but a lawyer from drawing up a contract or lease. Still another bill which was killed would have made any deal void unless every detail of the contract was in writing.

Among the many constructive real estate laws enacted probably the one that appeals most to the imagination is the one authorizing Cook county to have a hall of records. Formerly the law compelled all records to be kept in the county building, which is much overcrowded.

An appropriation bill was passed for the enforcement of the brokers' license law.

Zoning Legislation Passed.

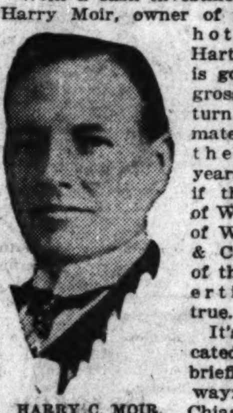
The bill authorizing the appointment of boards of appeal for zoning in various cities was passed.

Bills were passed legalizing real estate agency corporations, which means brokers now can legally form a corporation to conduct their business.

One member of the Realtors' Association of Illinois will be on the state committee to evolve a better taxation system for Illinois.

The only bill which didn't pass was that licensing all mortgage bankers. It is understood this will be passed at the next session.

MOIR PAYS $50,000 TO BUY BACK LEASES IN HIS OWN BUILDING



HARRY C. MOIR.

With a cash investment of $50,000, Harry Moir, owner of the Morrison hotel and the Hartford building, is going to get a gross annual return of approximately $30,765 for the next seven years. That is, if the prediction of W. D. Cousins, of W. D. Cousins & Co., managers of the Moir properties, comes true.

It's a complicated story, but briefly it's this way: George P. Chiagouris held a lease on 1,000 square feet in the Hartford building, paying Mr. Moir $13,675 annually. It still has seven years to run. Mr. Chiagouris had subdivided his space into three shops and subleased, and was getting an annual $6,500 above the $13,675 and charges. The store is L shaped and is at 51-53 West Madison and 4 South Dearborn.

Mr. Cousins estimated that the three shops should rent for $35,000 annually, instead of the $20,175 they now bring. So Mr. Moir signed a check for $50,000 and Mr. Chiagouris turned back his lease to him. The subleases expire April 30, 1925.

If things turn out the way Mr. Cousins predicts, Mr. Moir will receive in the next seven years $215,350. To get this he has forfeited $13,675 annually for seven years, or $95,725, and paid $50,000 cash, making a total of $145,725.

Beg Your Pardon

In the text under the photograph of the new Gethsemane Evangelical Lutheran church in this department last Sunday, the name of the architect, William Campbell Wright, was unintentionally omitted.

BEACH MANOR TO BE COMPLETED BY MAY 1, 1924

The Beach Manor cooperative apartment project, a picture of which was shown in this department last year, is now going ahead on a much more comprehensive and elaborate scale than before. N. Max Dunning is now architect and is financially interested in the project. He has drawn new plans. Instead of eleven stories there will be seven.

The same site, on No Man's land, on the lake shore, between Wilmette and Kenilworth, is to be used. There'll be 120 apartments of four, five, and six rooms, which will sell at from $13,000 to $19,000. According to Omer C. Harris, engineer and originator of the project, thirty already have been disposed of. Members of the syndicate promoting the Beach Manor project are: Architect Dunning, Fred J. Ratsch, W. D. Davis, Harmon S. Blaich, Patrick J. McArdle, and Mr. Harris. The cost is placed at $2,500,000 and completion is set for May 1, 1924.

Beach Manor has its own artesian wells and has made arrangements with the sanitary district to care for its sewage. Its war with Wilmette is over and it'll have both gas and electricity.

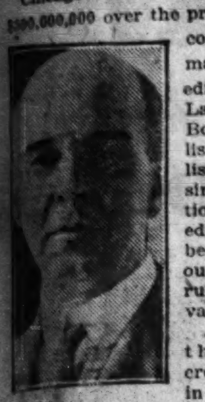
CHICAGO REALTY VALUES GO UP $300,000,000

Olcott's 1923 Blue Book Gives Estimates.

Chicago realty values increased $300,000,000 over the previous year, according to estimates of the 1923 edition of Olcott's Land Values Blue Book, just published. The publishers state that since the publication of the 1922 edition there has been a continuous and uninterrupted advance in values.



GEORGE C. OLCOTT. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

As heretofore, the main increases have been in the previously favored districts along the lake shore, both north and south. A noticeable feature was the broadening of the market to older settled districts which had not previously responded to the activity prevailing elsewhere.

Hegewisch a Star Performer.

"On account of local developments of a highly speculative nature, several neighborhoods like Hegewisch, Oak Park, Berwyn, and the north shore suburbs enjoyed unprecedented advances in the value of their real estate," comments George C. Olcott, head of George Olcott & Co., the publishers of the Land Values Blue Book. "Hegewisch furnished the phenomenal advance of the year. Under the stimulus of the location of the Ford plant there business locations on Baltimore and Brandon avenues advanced 700 to 1,000 per cent. Acres advanced from 100 to 200 per cent, and residential streets from 25 to 50 per cent.

Zoning Helps Evanston.

"Winnetka property advanced from 25 to 50 per cent, according to location. Wilmette from 10 to 25 per cent. Evanston from 15 to 100 per cent, the latter being due largely to the zoning ordinance. Rogers Park, east of Clark, 50 to 75 per cent; west of Clark, 10 to 50 per cent.

"Lake View, east of Broadway, 25 to 50 per cent; Broadway business, 35 to 60 per cent; Leland and Lawrence avenues, between Broadway and Sheridan, 50 to 100 per cent; residential west of Clark, 10 to 40 per cent; apartment house districts east of Clark, 25 to 50 per cent.

Boul Mich a Leader.

"High class apartment sites vicinity of Lincoln park, 25 to 50 per cent; North La Salle, north of Chicago avenue, 30 to 70 per cent; North State, Grand to North, 25 to 50 per cent; North Michigan industrial district, 25 to 50 per cent.

"Michigan avenue near the bridge and also south of Harrison were the featured spots of the year's advances, closely followed by the downtown streets affected by widening ordinances."

Mr. Olcott's book is on sale at all book stores.

Brokers' Notes

The Noel State bank has established a real estate department to facilitate the buying and selling of northwest side property. John S. Brice is in charge.

Baird & Warner are to open a north suburban office at 528 Davis street, Evanston, opposite the North Shore hotel. L. A. Griffin will be in charge.

Berwyn's New Methodist Church

Above is the new First Methodist Episcopal church of Berwyn, designed by Lowe & Bollenbacher, to be erected, probably next fall, at the southeast corner of Elliot avenue and 34th street, Berwyn, on the site of the present church edifice. The Sunday school building and community house will be erected first. There will be a community hall, seating 670; a dining room, women's social room, a chapel, and rooms for Sunday school and other church activities. Later on the main part of the church will be erected. It will seat 680 and cost $100,000. The community house will cost approximately $130,000. The entire building will be of Indiana limestone. The Rev. George T. Nesmith is pastor.

CINDERELLA CAFE NEWEST ADDITION TO GROVE RIALTO

Woodlawn's rialto is going to have one of the city's most gorgeous cafés as a result of Frank Loeffler leasing the entire second floor of his new building at the northeast corner of Cottage Grove and 64th, to Thomas Wing, a Chinaman. The restaurant will be called "The Cinderella Café" and one of its features will be a huge and dazzling crystal slipper suspended from the ceiling in the center of the large dancing floor.

The café will be one of the largest in the city, having 13,000 square feet of floor space, with a capacity of 1,000 guests. It also will have what is claimed will be the largest electric café sign in Chicago. In addition 1,500 lights will be used on the exterior of the building which will make it one of the most spectacular along the Grove.

Mr. Loeffler will receive a total rental of $354,000 during the fifteen year term. The lessee has operated a south side café for the last fifteen years. Loewenberg & Loewenberg are the architects of Mr. Loeffler's new building.

Workmen Busy Making Columbia Into "Adelphi"

Architect J. E. O. Pridmore, who designed the original Columbia theater on Clark, just north of Madison, is now actively engaged in making the one time home of burlesque into one of the most luxurious homes of legitimate drama in the loop. The new "Adelphi" sign is already over the entrance.

The interior is to be entirely redesigned, including a new foyer and lobby. The foyer will have a walnut wainscoting effect and the lobby will be remodeled with Travetine walls and entirely new ceiling. There'll be new seats throughout the house, as well as a new lighting system. The ventilating system was always a good one, for it had to handle the smoking allowed in burlesque days, but it will be overhauled, Mr. Pridmore says.

Pays $3,920 a Front Foot for 25 Feet in Englewood

Morris Z. Holland, owner of a jewelry shop and a phonograph store, has bought twenty-five feet frontage at 6335 South Halsted from William G. Tegtmeir, for $98,000. This is at the rate of $3,920 per front foot. The lot is 110 feet deep and improved with a two-story store building. Harry M. and Louis Englestein were brokers for both parties. They also sold the twenty-five feet adjoining on the south, with old improvements, at No. 6337, for Anna L. Tobias, to David E. Bloch, for $55,000. There is a four-year lease at $200 a month. This property is 125 feet deep.

FURNITURE COMPANY BUYS PLANT.

W. C. Reeble & Bro. have sold to the Ohio Parlor Furniture company, now at 1510 West Ohio, the two story building at 2529-33 Sheffield, 75x75, for $30,000, through E. A. Radtke of E. N. Duerlein & Co.

Park Ridge's Unique Community House

Above is the $50,000 community center which Park Ridge is to build for its American Legion post, its Boy Scouts, and its Girl Scouts, but which will be available for all sorts of public and private gatherings. The Scout Legion Home association has already raised $11,000 from forty Park Ridge citizens. Architects Rowe, Dillard & Rowe have designed a building which will have a large community hall on the first floor, 40x70, with completely equipped stage and seating capacity of 600. In addition there will be space for several hundred spectators on one side when the hall is used for athletic contests. There will be a kitchen on the first floor, next the stage. At the other end will be three clubrooms, each with a large fireplace—one for the Mel Tierney post of the Legion, one for the Boy Scouts, and one for the Girl Scouts. Each organization will fit up its own clubroom to suit its own needs.

An outdoor swimming pool and later a covered tank is hoped for within a year or so. The building is on the ground of the Park Ridge Playground association and was leased by it to the Scout Legion Home association for fifty years at $1 annually. O, for more landlords like that! Work will start within six weeks and part of the buildings will be completed by fall.

The hope of the promoters of this unique community house is that it will be a bond between the grownups, the war veterans, and the still younger generation.

Start on $225,000 Flats After Year's Zone Delay

Work has started, after nearly a year's delay in waiting for passage of the zoning ordinance, on twenty-five apartments at the northeast corner of Kenmore and Rosemont, by Scott Jordan. Oman & Lilienthal are architects. The building will have a 75x75 garden court on the corner. The entire lot is 150x150, with an alley on the east. The flats will be five rooms and two baths and will be ready by October. The total cost is placed at $225,000.

Block of One Story Stores on 47th Sold for $200,000

The block of seventeen one story stores just completed on the south side of 47th, running from Vincennes to Forrestville, all occupied, has been sold by Nathan Edenburg to Fred S. Wolffs for a reported $200,000, subject to $140,000. Mr. Wolffs gave as part payment the two one story stores at 7422-26 Cottage Grove, at $60,000, subject to $25,000. Charles Spare was the only broker and will retain charge of the property for Mr. Wolffs.

TWO PASTORS TO RESIGN BAPTIST CHARGES TODAY

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

A surprise awaits two congregations of important Baptist churches today when the resignations of their pastors are read. While those on the inner circle in both congregations are expecting the announcements many others will hear the news with something of a shock.

The pastors are the Rev. Charles T. Holman, for nearly five years pastor of the Normal Park Baptist church, 70th street and Stewart avenue, and the Rev. William H. Jones, pastor for a little more than five years of the North Shore Baptist church, Berwyn and Lakewood avenues.

Accepts Call to School.

THE REV. C. T. HOLMAN.

THE REV. W. H. JONES. [Gibson-Sykes-Fowler.]

The Rev. Mr. Holman will resign in order to accept an appointment on the faculty of the Divinity school of the University of Chicago. He will become assistant professor of pastoral duties and extension secretary. He will visit churches, group meetings and conferences in an endeavor to arouse interest in the divinity school. During his pastorate at Normal Park more than 300 have been received into church membership and the financial support has increased threefold. Mr. Holman is president of the Baptist ministers' conference.

Goes to Maine Pastorate.

The Rev. Mr. Jones will become pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church of Portland, Me., a new organization formed by the uniting of two Baptist churches with the purpose of erecting a new building. The church has a membership of 900.

During Mr. Jones' pastorate of the North Shore church he has led in the erection of a church building and community house valued at $225,000.

U. S. LACKS FUNDS TO SEND FOREIGN MAIL FOR 4 DAYS

Washington, D. C., June 23.—[Special.]—American mail destined for foreign countries has increased so tremendously and so unexpectedly in volume within the fiscal year now ending that the post office department finds its $6,500,000 appropriation for that purpose practically exhausted. In fact, the department is running so short that between June 27 and July 1 there will be no movement of either first class mail or parcel post abroad.

RUSH REPORT ON COAL INDUSTRY AS STRIKE LOOMS

Men to Demand Pay Boost on Aug. 31.

Washington, D. C., June 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—The coal commission is rushing to completion its report on wages, profits and costs in anthracite mining, in order that its findings may be brought to bear in a labor situation of increasing intensity. Miners' wage contracts expire Aug. 31, and a strike is threatened unless negotiations for replacement are successful.

In recent union elections supporters of John L. Lewis, national head of the United Mine Workers, have met with defeat, and it is thought that when delegates of anthracite workers meet June 26 to frame new wage demands they will demand substantial advances.

The commission will show the actual earnings of practically all the anthracite workers employed, grouped on a scale running from $300 a year to $3,000 and $4,000, according to number of days employed and rate of pay. The largest group of anthracite workers, it is expected, will be shown earning annual incomes of $1,700 to $1,800, at approximately 270 days of work per year.

When the report comes to finding the costs of anthracite—now somewhere around a base of $8.20 at the mines—commission members expect to face another vexatious problem. Some big anthracite producing companies are inclined to deal with production costs on the assumption that the unmined coal in the ground was worth 10 cents per ton, while a number of independent producers, leased land owners and leased land developers, value it all the way up to $2.40 a ton.

'L' DOORS LIKELY TO STAY LOCKED UNTIL THE FALL

Elevated train doors now locked during non-rush hour periods will remain locked until the council resumes fall sessions or until the elevated lines are able to put into service 105 new cars equipped with automatic doors operated with push buttons, as a result of temporary rejection by the council local transportation committee of an ordinance to make the present system illegal.

The ordinance, drafted by Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph Cooper, was returned to Corporation Counsel Francis X. Busch for approval after former Attorney General P. J. Lucey, elevated lines' counsel, had followed General Manager B. J. Fallon's plea for delay with a threat of injunction proceedings if the ordinance were passed by the council.

It is not believed the ordinance can be resubmitted before the council adjourns for its vacation.

Bank Surrenders Funds Deposited by Goldman

The Century Trust and Savings bank yesterday tendered $10,728.70 in currency and $3,280 in notes to Judge Kickham Scanlan who demanded the money when he learned it was an asset of the defunct Fantasia corporation, for which Jacob Goldman had been appointed receiver. The money and notes had been held by the bank for the protection of stock purchasers.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The New York curb market yesterday announced that the common stock of the Roamer Motor Car company, manufacturers of Roamer cars and Pennant taxicabs, would be admitted to trading on Monday. The new Goodrich prices will be effective as of June 11 and public announcement of the new schedule will be made within a day or two.

General Fireproofing company declared a quarterly dividend of 30 cents a share on its no par common stock, payable July 2. This is the same as the former $1.50 quarterly dividend on the $100 par shares. The company at the opening of the year declared the dividend on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock, payable quarterly.

Sales in June of the Coca Cola company are expected to be the largest of any month in its history, according to W. C. Bradley, chairman of the Board. Earnings are very satisfactory, he says, and for the year should show a substantial increase over 1922. Coca Cola is erecting new plants at Chicago and Toronto, and enlarging those at Havana and Ottawa.

Plans for the merging of ten important American silk manufacturing companies are approaching the final stages, according to reports in the financial district today. The combined companies, it is stated, will have a total capitalization of $50,000,000. No hitch has developed in negotiations thus far, although many details will have to be ironed out before the combination can become effective. According to the present plan, about 25 per cent of the total capacity of the country will be brought under one head. This organization would be able to market its goods in every section of the country at a minimum cost of freight shipments.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

North African wheat crop is officially estimated at 104,000,000 bu, or 87,000,000 bu in excess of 1922. Harvesting is nearing completion and new wheat is already being exported. Barley crop also exceeds last year.

Burton Hungerford wired Logan & Bryan from Dodge City, Kas.: "In Ford and Hodgman counties wheat yield will probably run from 5 to 12 bu per acre. Much more wheat here than expected to find."

"Harvest will be general Monday," wired George M. Le Count to Stein, Alstrin & Co. from Newton, Kas., "Lots of splendid wheat of good quality. Can see no reason for lowering my earlier estimate for Kansas. Corn very uneven and weedy."

RAILROAD NOTES

Control of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railway company has virtually passed to the Tuttle-Harriman interests, says a Pittsburgh dispatch. It has been decided that these interests shall take over the 25,000 shares of Pittsburgh and West Virginia common stock owned and controlled by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company on Wednesday, June 27, on the upset date of the option. The option on the common stock held by Metropolitan Life involved a contract price on a sixty day option of $65 a share, upon which an option reported as $5 a share was paid.

Mrs. Cora B. Williams, who is president of the Georgia, Florida and Alabama railroad, desires to cancel the outstanding bond issue against that line, according to finance applications made to the interstate commerce commission. The railroad sought permission to increase its capital stock from $450,000 to $2,685,000. All of the new stock would be delivered to Mrs. Williams, who would give up in exchange for it $2,113,000 in bond issues by the company and forego collection of $122,000 in interest and premium which the company also owes.

The Chicago and Northwestern railway applied to the interstate commerce commission for permission to assume the obligation of $4,755,000 7 per cent equipment trust certificates, the proceeds to be used in the purchase of equipment to cost $6,630,000 and to be sold to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. at 96.50 per cent.

CASH DIVIDENDS OF $36,311,251 BY STANDARD OIL

The various units comprising the Standard Oil group of companies will have distributed to stockholders $36,311,251 in cash dividends during the three months ending June 30, 1923. This is a new high record when compared with the corresponding period for any other year since the dismemberment of the old Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, under order of the United States Supreme court, in 1911. The disbursements for the current quarter compare with $33,499,988 in the first quarter of 1923 and with $29,205,349 in the second quarter of last year. The numerous stock dividends declared by the Standard Oil companies during the closing months of 1922 were mainly responsible for the increase in the total of cash dividends during the first two quarters of 1923.

INVEST for SAFETY and 7%

BUSINESS MEN, WAGE WORKERS, INVESTORS large and small, should not be satisfied with investments that pay only 6% or less. You are not satisfied with the wages, salaries, nor prices which prevailed when 6% was rightly considered the mark of a safe investment. 7% now is just as conservative, has the same economic value behind it now as 6% had before the war. In fact the assured progress of our time makes 7% even safer.

TO THE INVESTOR of small sums, as well as to the investor of large amounts, we unhesitatingly recommend the purchase of

CHEAPER LABOR SEEN AS MENACE OF PROSPERITY

BY SCRUTATOR.

That the "liberalization" of immigration restriction and cheaper labor will not promote progress or prosperity, but on the other hand shunt American industry toward the lower levels of its competitors in productive efficiency, is the inference to be drawn from recent statement by two leaders of the electrical industry—M. H. Aylesworth of the National Electric Light association and Frank G. Baum, one of the men who made California what she is today—the region nearest of all others to the electric civilization of the near future.

Cheap labor in any country will determine to a large extent all plans of industrial development adopted by financiers or industrialists. Where labor is cheap, capital will not be invested in expensive power developments or machine equipment. We shall soon see a consolidation of the French, Belgian, and German coal, ore and fertilizer resources, into a productive unit—and that's what all the row is about—the question of who is to control the combine.

An American who served on the allied commission that took charge of the districts after the armistice, says that American steel has nothing to fear, despite the enormous natural economies which are possible from such a coördination. "They will keep on using their small uneconomical machinery until it's worn out. Over here we would scrap and replace our equipment two or three times while they were using up theirs," he said. Of course—labor is too cheap to put a whole lot of money into new labor saving devices—and, therefore, plans are always based on cheap labor, which always costs heavily in the end, because of the high ratio of consumption to production, inherent in hand industry.

Discussing the question of developing an electrical America M. H. Aylesworth says: "Super power is a measure of advancing civilization. It is machinery raised to the nth degree, superseding municipal and state boundaries and becoming national and continental in character. It can find no abiding place in countries where life is primitive and labor cheap.

A super power system in China and India, for instance would manifestly be a wild extravagance. The simpler manufacturing processes, the only ones that are performed in primitive countries, are in those lands more economically carried on by man power than they could be through the use of electrical energy, even at a rate that will barely pay interest on the cost of setting up the generators and building the transmission lines." "Manifestly if we are to maintain the high standard of living which is characteristic of America, the per capita earnings of the country must also be high. The United States through its great use of machinery and electricity is able to maintain a higher standard of living than any other country, because its labor produces more and earns more."

Says Mr. Baum:

"The real economic value of electric power is not so much due to its application to lighting, but due to its use to replace human energy and perform work. So long as we can replace human energy costing from $2.50 to $5 per day by power costing from 2.5 to 5 cents per day we should use this method to increase our labor supply as far as practicable rather than import "cheap" labor from other countries.

"Electric power is the best laborer, stays on the job, and costs little. There is no labor that can compete with power. For at $1 per day, the cost of feeding a man, the cost of horsepower for one shift of eight hours for 300 days per year, if supplied by human labor, would amount to $2,400, and for three shifts per day to $7,200 per year. Besides, we cannot conceive a way of placing human labor in such a way as to produce the output and results that can be produced by power. So long as we can keep well ahead of other countries in the power available and in the machinery placed at the control of the worker we need not fear keeping our place among nations.

"In terms of energy a man can do only about one kilowatt hour per day of eight hours, requiring eight men per horsepower for one eight hour shift. The cost of this labor would, at present rates of say $4 per day per man, be $32 per eight hours per horsepower. But this power can be supplied mechanically for a few cents per day. I understand the horsepower use per man in England is about one-half that in the United States and wages are about one-half. The horse power per man in Japan is about one-fourth that of the United States and the wages are about one-fourth. The higher wages in this country are due largely to the fact that 29,000,000 horsepower in the factories is equivalent to about 290,000,000 workers when expressed in terms of energy. To compete with cheap labor countries, where wages paid are about what is necessary to feed a man so he can do energy consuming work, it is evident that the United States, without a greater use of power, would be forced to pay the same wages."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Answers are based upon information which THE TRIBUNE believes correct, but beyond care in securing it THE TRIBUNE assumes no responsibility.

Inquiries must bear the signature and address of writer. Answers of public interest will be published; those not of general interest will be mailed if stamped, self-addressed envelope is inclosed. Address letters to Investors' Guide.

Don't Invest in Promises.

Were it not for that trait in human nature which seems to rob men of reason when cupidity is aroused by the idea of sudden riches there would be fewer losses and more successful investments. Men and women who normally watch their expenditures carefully, both in business and private life, will often rush blindly into an investment which, they are told, will bring them big and quick returns. They do not stop to inquire, or even wonder, why they should be singled out and offered the privilege of getting in on such a good thing, or why it should be necessary to offer such large returns for the use of their money.

Money is a commodity and is worth just so much. Its price fluctuates from time to time, as do the prices of other commodities, but the fluctuation is not very great or very sudden. A legitimate and prospering concern can obtain the money it needs at a reasonable rate of interest. It is not necessary for such a concern to offer an excessively high rate of return. If it does there usually is something the matter and the prospective investor will do well to inquire the reason.

As a rule it will be found that the safety of an investment decreases in proportion as the promised rate of return rises above the normal prevailing interest rate. When, therefore, the investor is offered an investment promising an excessive return he will do well to find out just why this offer is necessary.

Do not be beguiled or stampeded into investing in something because it promises to pay large returns.

Do not risk losing 100 per cent of principal in order to secure 2 or 3 per cent additional interest in a year—you may lose both.

If your money is worth working for it is worth safeguarding. You worked hard for that money—see that it is safe when you put it to work for you.

An unscrupulous salesman will promise you all sorts of things in order to get your money. Most of these things, however, do not appear in the contract which he asks you to sign. Do not sign unless these are included, as you cannot enforce compliance with terms not in the contract.

When an investment seems too good to be true, it generally is.

The careful investor has a much better chance of getting rich than the one who tries to get rich quickly.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

Largely in sympathy with the listed markets, local curb securities worked somewhat lower, but displayed a considerably better tone toward the close with a partial recovery in prices.

Butler Brothers was forced to low sales at 34¼, but was bid up sharply to a close of 35¼@35¾. Kellogg Switchboard & Supply on few sales dropped to 45 bid, 46 asked. Sales of Hurley Machine common ranged between 45½ and 46½. Fairbanks Morse was neglected and unchanged at 52½ bid, 53½ asked, ex the quarterly dividend of $1.00. Bucyrus common at 36 bid, 38 asked, reflected a loss of 3 points. The preferred closed at 102½ bid, 104½ asked, ex the regular $1.75 dividend, and a 50c payment on the accumulated back dividends. Northwestern Yeast was again quoted 195 bid, 198 asked, without reported sales. Burroughs Adding Machine, ex dividend $2.00, sold at 127 and 129.

Independent Pneumatic Tool, carrying the 100% stock dividend recently declared, was quoted at the close 135 bid, 140 asked. By-Products Coke was quiet between 56 and 59. National Grocer common declined a major fraction to low sales at 6⅞. The preferred was unchanged at 86 bid, 88 asked. Closing quotations on Elgin Watch at 46 bid, 48 asked, showed little net change. Interstate Iron and Steel was without feature at 66 bid, 68 asked. Some few transactions in Beatrice Creamery were reported at 62 and 64. Chicago Railway Equipment issues were again fractionally lower, the common being quoted 30 bid, 31 asked; preferred 24 bid, 25 asked. Albert Pick preferred was inactive between 92 and 94, while Wahl preferred was again quoted 85½ bid, 87½ asked, with little stock changing hands.

Ford of Canada was steady at 435 bid, 440 asked. Page-Detroit broke 2 points to 18 bid, 18¾ asked. Motor Wheel and Timken Axle were each off one-half point at 9½ bid, 10 asked, and 9¼ bid, 9¾ asked, respectively. Edmund Jones sold at 34 and 34½, off ½ point. Firestone Tire & Rubber common was weak, declining some 4 points to 70 bid, 71 asked.

The sugar group was sluggish and fractionally lower. Closing bid and asked prices follow: Coumbia, 5@5½; Godchaux preferred, 85@87; Holland-St. Louis, 4½@4¾; Michigan, 5@5½; Utah-Idaho, 3@3¼.

While Public Utility shares were somewhat lower there were few drastic declines. American Light & Traction common at 114 bid, 116 asked, was off 3 points. American Public Utilities common sold at 34 and 36. Cities Service issues were all lower. The common declined from 146 to low sales at 131, but then rallied to a close of 134 bid, 136 asked. The preferred closed at 65-65½, a loss of 2 points. Bankers' shares was quoted 13½ bid, 14 asked, off 1 point. Commonwealth Power Railway & Light common was 1 point easier at 31½ bid, 32½ asked. Bids of 69 for the preferred failed to bring out definite offerings. The Commonwealth Power corporation preferred showed little net change at 67 bid, 69 asked. Consumers Power 6% preferred was steady between 86 and 88, ex dividend, while the 7% preferred was again wanted at 99 ex dividend. A good demand developed for Grand Rapids Railway preferred, advancing approximately 4 points to 39 bid, without attracting possible sellers. Offerings of Illinois Traction common found ready sale at 50@50½. Northern Ohio Electric common suffered a loss of 1⅛ points at 10½ bid, 11½ asked, but the preferred was without material change at 27½ bid, 29 asked.

SHARP DECLINE IN GRAIN MART TO CLOSE WEEK

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Signing of the regulations that will govern the grain exchanges by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, combined with rains in North Dakota from sections that have been sending dry weather reports of late led to general selling of wheat, and a sharp decline following a small bulge early. Final trades were at net losses of 1⅝@1⅞c. Corn was off ⅝@1½c, and rye ⅝c. Oats were unchanged to ⅛c higher.

Lowest prices of the season were made on September and December wheat and oats and on all deliveries of rye the last week, the wheat conference here being instrumental in inducing liquidation and the break. While the markets showed a tendency to rally at times, there is still a noticeable lack of general speculation, and at the last wheat was 4⅝@6c lower, while oats were ¼@1¼c lower and rye 4⅝@5⅝c. Corn acted very tight and closed unchanged to 1½c higher. Provisions were dull and finished at the bottom, with lard off 27½@30c and ribs 30@32½c lower.

Wheat Breaks 3 Cents.

A leading local professional who was long a line of July wheat sold out as the result of the grain exchange regulations being signed and was largely responsible for the break in that delivery to practically the same figure as the September at the last. Hot and dry weather in the southwest is resulting in harvesting becoming general, and the southwest asked for offers to arrive which helped to weaken the July. At the inside figure July was off nearly 3c from the early high and within 1¼c of the lowest figure of the week.

While dry weather continues in parts of North Dakota sections that sent claims of deterioration, the previous day received moisture. Some buying orders were received at Minneapolis from around the Minot territory, which has had no rain. Export demand was very slow, with resellers of Manitobas abroad at 2½c under fresh offers from this side.

Profit Taking in Corn.

Deferred deliveries of corn sold at a new high on the present upturn early, but profit taking on the weakness in wheat and on the continued favorable weather for the growth of the new crop. There was 350,000 bu. corn sold to go to store which weakened the July to some extent. The Corn Products company's plants will close down for the week of July 4 for overhauling. Sample values showed little change.

July oats showed stubborn resistance to pressure. July acted tight and there were some unfavorable reports from Illinois as the result of continued hot weather.

Trade in rye broadened considerably, but the weakness in wheat more than offset buying of September by the northwest. Locals were fair sellers early to secure profits. There was 100,000 bu. sold to go to store.

Provision Trade Dull.

Provisions were extremely dull with all interests doing little. Closing trades were unchanged to 2½c lower on both lard and ribs. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the season to date aggregated 2,706,000 against 2,680,000 last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Regulations governing the grain futures act which have been under consideration by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace have been issued. The trade is uneasy over the latest action, but Secretary Wallace says they need not be, and that legitimate operators on the market need have no fear of unwarranted meddling with their business. The rules are practically the same as given out tentatively two months ago. Secretary Wallace deprecated the persistent rumors which have come out of some of the future trading markets to the effect that his administration of the law was driving or would drive operators out of the market and cause severe decline in prices. On this subject he said:

"Violent opponents of the law have always claimed that the price of grain is regulated by supply and demand. How has this law affected supply nad demand? Some have said that the decline in wheat prices is due to this law. What about corn prices? Does not the law affect corn exactly as it affects wheat?

If it drives down the price of one, why not the other? If some of these gentlemen would stop their misrepresentation of the law and coöperate in administering it, it would be better for all concerned."

Reports must be made before the opening of the market the following day unless the government supervisor for good reason grants more time. These reports must contain the following information for each clearing house member of the market.

1. The net position at the beginning of the period covered by the report.
2. The quantity of grain purchased and the quantity of grain sold on contracts.
3. The quantity of grain delivered and received.
4. The net position at the end of the day.
5. The aggregate of all long and short accounts.
6. The net position at the end of the day of each separate account carried by the firm making the report, if the net position equals or exceeds such amount as may be specified by the administration. It is understood that this amount may vary according to the size of the different markets.

Sentiment in the wheat trade changes from bullish to bearish with the action of the market. It was said that local traders were mostly long overnight and failed to get enough outside help to carry prices higher. Profit taking by longs through the largest buyers of Friday precipitated the decline and made an uncertain feeling at the last. The disposition was to look for lower prices.

Good weather in the central west of late has matured the winter wheat crop faster than expected, and reports from down state yesterday said that new wheat might be expected to be thrashed sooner than looked for. Some reports said it would begin to move by July 15.

The New York Times.

New York, June 23.—[Special.]—A week of confused movements in the markets of repeated reversal in the course of prices ended today with no uniform trend. Not only did different speculative markets move in opposite directions, but parts of the same market acted differently from other parts. As against the further rise of spot cotton to the previous week's closing price, after having fallen 1⅛ cents a pound in the interval.

France and sterling dropped back fractionally on the foreign exchange market today, while marks ran up suddenly to the highest price of the week, considerably above the price of a week ago. On the stock exchange, where the day's business was light, most of the industrial shares went somewhat lower.

Rails Show Strength.

It is possible that the strength of the railway stocks had something to do with President Harding's speech at Kansas City. It was in fact a somewhat unfamiliar experience for the railways to hear their problems discussed without heat or animus by the chief executive, and with fair recognition of the railway manager's point of view. The importance of the speech is that it positively aligns the administration on the side of practical treatment of a practical situation, and therefore against the purposeless policies of political agitation.

Bond prices exhibited a firm tone. Except for a point drop in Mexican 4s, the fluctuations in the foreign group were exceedingly small. United States government bonds moved irregularly within a radius of one-quarter of 1 point. Most of the active railroad liens moved to higher ground, Seaboard Air Line 5s and Norfolk and Western convertible 6s standing out with gains of 1@1¼ points respectively. New Orleans, Texas and Mexico income 5s were heavy.

Deadlock Stops Loans Here.

Of the foreign exchange market it is difficult to judge how far the weakness in most of the rates on Europe has reflected financial influences pure and simple and how far the European political situation. It is still the most plausible explanation of the market that the present complete absence of the recently large investment of American capital in new European securities leaves the foreign interest payments to offset the swing to a merchandise import balance. But since it is probable that the Franco-German deadlock is the primary cause for the stopping of new European loan issues in this country, the state of the exchanges possibly rests after all on political considerations.

$1,129,895 in Interest for D. & R. G. Bondholders

Denver, Colo., June 23.—The Denver and Rio Grande railroad today was authorized to pay out of general funds interest of $1,129,895 on first consolidated mortgage and first trust bonds of the road when a petition for such authority presented on behalf of the receiver, James H. Young, was approved by J. Foster Symes, United States District judge. The interest will be paid on July 1.

Authorization also was granted to use $1,400,000 received from the sale of receiver's certificates as time deposits with country banks along the lines of the railroad, where the money could be used to assist shippers of the company. The reorganization plan, whereby control of the railroad would be vested jointly in the Missouri Pacific and the Western Pacific roads, was presented to the court, but no formal hearing will be held on it for at least sixty days.

Making Illinois a Reo State

How two tendencies in truck buying make the Speed Wagon outsell everything but Fords!

The registration lists for new trucks in the State of Illinois show that the Speed Wagon now has a clean-cut lead over 56 other trucks listed—and also over the entire electric and miscellaneous classifications.

This dominance of the Speed Wagon is due to the now general recognition of two well-known principles governing motor haulage costs.

The first has been proved by the cost reports and experience of heavy truck users who are also users of the Speed Wagon.

It is this: Lighter loads and more speed make for lower ton-mile costs in an exceptionally wide range of cases—and the Speed Wagon cuts these costs to the bone.

Away from the very light

The second principle is even more revolutionary. It is this: The lightest truck is not necessarily the most economical means for carrying light loads.

Although the Speed Wagon has a rated capacity of 2,500 pounds—a ton and a quarter—it also hauls loads of from 1,000 to 2,000 pounds more cheaply than lighter trucks can.

This proven fact is the most important single reason for its rapidly increasing use.

Bodies sold with the chassis

One of the many minor advantages of the Speed Wagon is that a variety of standard bodies are made for it by the manufacturer.

The bodies are as thoroughly standardized in design and manufacture as the chassis itself.

Like the chassis they give you the advantages of volume production and unsurpassed experience in design and manufacture.

And they are instantly available for any hauling need. You don't have to wait for the type of body that your business requires.

Have you seen these?

Have you ever inspected the Reo double chassis construction?

Have you seen the Reo Cab Express, Canopy Express, Carryall, Double Deck, and Stake bodies—and the six other standard bodies manufactured by Reo?

Have you ever investigated the haulage cost records that the Speed Wagon is making in Chicago and in the State?

If you haven't, come in and see them.

They help to explain why in the first quarter of 1923 the Speed Wagon outsold everything but Fords in the State of Illinois.

HOW TO BE WELL DRESSED IN SPORTS TOGS

by [illegible]

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—With all the world turning to sports clothes you would think it would be easy to fit one's self for a summer of active games.

That isn't the idea with the big designers at all, at all.

The new sports toggery is devised distinctly with an eye to how you look when you look on. It's meant largely for those who stand by and watch the game from the piazza or the side lines.

So my friend in the country has found out. She wants to know how to go through a day of active sports in good form, appearing well attired at every turn, though up to her ears in the vigor of the game.

Here comes in the old rules. Simplicity must be the keynote, and a good cut. Sparkling colors aren't at all characteristic of the true mode. You can have some, but not many, never going in for the animated poster effect, as she knows.

Other views of drawings.

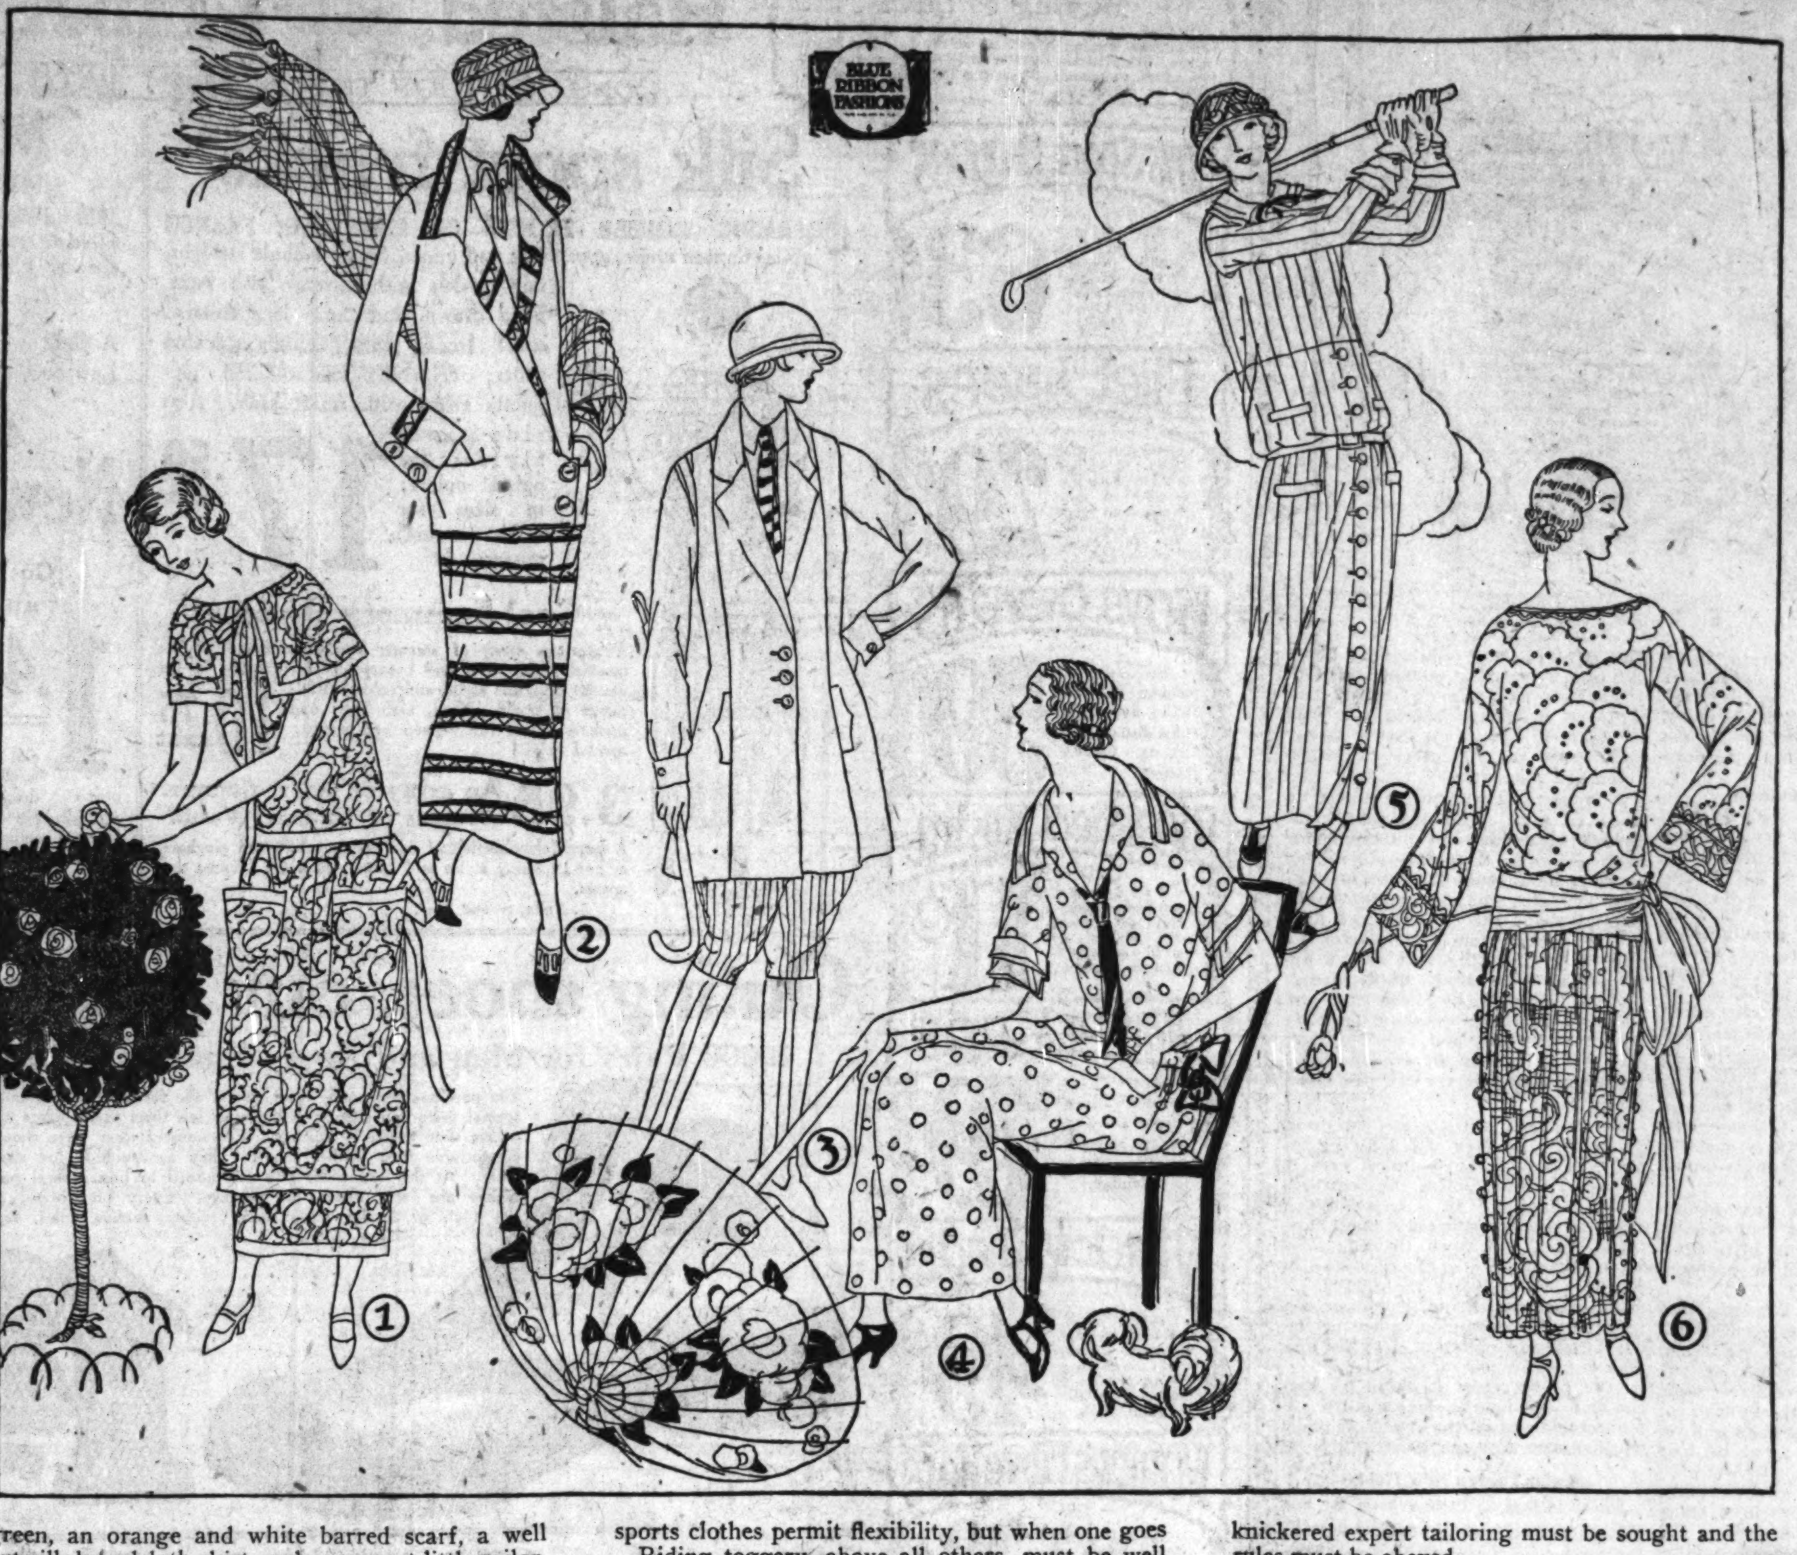
Let us begin early in the morning, in the garden. Something washable, for that. Cretonne, or a pretty print, or other washable cotton. We saw the very thing in a little specialty shop devoted to cotton country frocks, a tan paisley design on white, made with a cape collar of the fabric, and an apron front with big pockets for a gardening tool or two, and one's gloves. The green edge was of delicate lawn, lighting up the frock deliciously.

Flannel for the walking jacket, preferably white, this season. So we select for our friend to promenade to the postoffice or to the drug store for an ice cream soda, a smart side buttoned white flannel jacket, held closely at the hip, and with its collar, cuffs, and broad lapels striped with red and black banded white corduroy, of which the skirt of the sport suit is made.

With this she will wear a red silk jumper, loop fastened close at the neck. Her close fitting white felt hat will boast a red suede band, and she will carry a huge white wool scarf, cross-banded with black, in case the ice cream soda should be cold.



We shall put her into pin-striped tan covert cloth breeches for her turn with Young Dobbin, and give her a sleeveless coat, faultlessly fitted, of bright green, an orange and white barred scarf, a well cut silk broadcloth skirt, and a compact little sailor. Or she may wear her round brown felt if she chooses.

sports clothes permit flexibility, but when one goes .Riding toggery, above all others, must be well selected. The best is none too good. It and the kindred golf costume have a distinctive cast. Other knickered expert tailoring must be sought and the rules must be obeyed.

My friend golfs in a dress, as I know, or goes tweed skirted and jacketed, and her most becoming color is blue. Let's give her a copy of the vigorously striped blue and white frock with long sleeves met with in a smart dress house the other day. Notable for its simplicity, though meant for a woman of great wealth, it buttoned down the side from a little below the bust line, permitting freedom to the swing, and nothing broke the up and down line except tiny pocket slits on blouse and skirt. There were collar and cuffs of triple folds of organdy. We shall give my friend a tight rimmed white panama with scarf trimming to golf in.

These scarf effects in hat trimming are enormously popular. A body can display originality in thinking up new ones. The hat is frequently dispensed with and the scarf takes sole charge of wrapping up the hair securely.

About working sports togs in general it must be noted that nothing is added simply for effect. There must be a reason and a good one for the presence of an adjunct, or the girl marks herself as not belonging, in the strict sense.

Other views of drawings.

So much for sports attire. For my friend's leisurely hour there are the new foulards, gorgeously beflowered. Or perhaps a navy foulard with the polka dots would suit her better, its collar and cuffs composed of double rows of crepe de chine in white, and a finishing touch given with black grosgrain ribbon.

Then let us give her a smart dinner gown of ecru batiste joined to ecru lace with a square mesh, worn over a brown crepe slip and set off by a girlish girdle, posed low, and a huge bow and sash end of orange faille silk.

Plainness, practicality, usefulness—these are the proper country notes. Things that cannot stand use are taboo. Wool jersey and knitted fiber silks, or silks and mohair frocks and two piece suits are good. The knitted chemise dress, gathered at the waist line, is most practical. This is not forgetting the white plaited crepe skirt and monogrammed blouse, the real old reliables this summer. And the silk or wool sweater was never more liked than today.

THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy

PROLOGUE.

Thanks to the explicit and voluminous instructions with which Ma bombarded Mamie and Bill, all the important arrangements were successfully made. . . . Grandma was brought up from the country to take care of the flat . . . the ferns and the canary were judiciously distributed among neighbors, who smiled outwardly but bled internally . . . three times as many things were packed as anybody will ever have any use for, and Mamie and Bill between them succeeded in getting the Baby to Washington to meet Ma and Pa, who are awaiting them there for the passport ordeal.

SCENE I.

You enter the passport office through a large swinging door which reminds you poignantly of those other swinging doors now rusting on dry and inhospitable hinges. The Potters enter fearfully, oppressed by that atmosphere of official doom which broods over all haunts of law and order . . . a bright-eyed lady with a crisp voice halts Pa's futile wanderings.

PA (in answer to question):
Is this the place I get passports?

LADY (crisply):
Naturalized, or native born?

PA (huffily):
I'm a hundred per cent American.

(Lady has no time to argue the point . . . shoos Pa over to energetic young clerk in the corner, who takes Pa in hand right off.)

CLERK:
Where's your photographs.

PA (surprised):
Photographs of what?

CLERK:
Why, of you and whoever is going with you. Are you taking anybody?

MA: Well, I'd just like to see him go without me. We're all going.

CLERK (taking in group with shrewd eye):
Well, one passport will be enough for you and your wife and your minor children.

MAMIE (gleefully):
Minor children: that means you and the baby, Bill.

(Bill gives her poisonous glare.)

CLERK:
You better have two photographs taken—one group of you and your wife and the boy and baby, and the young lady will need one by herself for her own passport. And how about your birth certificate?

PA: Birth certificate? Do I have to prove I was born? Never had a birth certificate.

CLERK (calmly):
Well, then, you've got to have the affidavit of the physician who attended the birth.

O, Driver, what's that big building?

PA (hotly):
My God, he's been dead for twenty years.

CLERK:
Well, you got to get an affidavit from your parents or somebody who can swear to when and where you were born or you don't get any passport. (Turns to Mamie): Have you got your birth certificate?

"Well, then, you've got to have an affidavit from the physician who attended the birth."

MAMIE:
Have you got my birth certificate, Ma?

MA (astonished):
My goodness, child, do you think I carry your birth certificate around with me?

MAMIE (helplessly):
What am I going to do?

CLERK (gallantly):
O, that's all right; your mother's affidavit will be plenty. (To Pa): You better write to somebody who can give you an affidavit that you were born in this country—you can wire, if you want to.

MA: Why don't you wire Uncle Tom, or John Riley Buckner?

PA: All right; I suppose that is all, is it?

CLERK:
You'll have to bring a witness in with you when you sign the application—somebody that's known you at least two years.

PA (hopelessly):
I don't know anybody in Washington. Gosh, you certainly make it tough for a fellow to leave this country.

(Pa may wish they had made it tougher before he gets back.)

CLERK (tartly):
I didn't make the rules. I'm here only to see that they're followed out. No witness, no passport.

PA (doggedly, jamming on hat):
All right, then; all right. (To Ma): I'll go out and dig up a witness, and photographs, birth certificates, baptismal records, marriage licenses, high school diplomas, dog tax receipts, auto registration card, license plates, and some suburban time tables . . . he don't believe I'm born, eh? . . . I'll show him. C'mon, let's go.

(They go.)

SCENE II.

"While we are waiting for our photographs and things," says Ma, "why wouldn't it be a good idea to see a little bit of Washington. It's the capital, you know." "I know," says Pa. "We had that in school." "We could take one of those automobiles by the hour," says Ma, "and we wouldn't even have to get out. . . ." It was only a half an hour later that Pa, after watching twenty automobiles cruising by with $4 per hour on them, finally spotted a joyous $2.50 per hour legend.

PA (waving frantically):
Hey, there, you!

MA (gazing regretfully after luxurious limousine and then with mild dismay on Pa's choice):
That other one was a much better one, Pa.

PA (bundling them in hastily):
O, this is all right. (Climbing in beside driver): Drive us around for an hour or so; we want to see the sights.

CHAUFFEUR (nonenthusiastically):
Where ja wanna go?

PA (vaguely):
O, just around—you know.

MA: Tell him we want to see the White House and Washington's monument and where Wilson lives and the capitol and everything.

PA (dutifully):
All right. (To chauffeur): Take us where she said.

MA: It'll be so nice to have some one who knows Washington point out all the places of interest as we go along. (Suddenly): O, Driver, what's that big building?

CHAUFFEUR (absently):
Huh?

MA (anxiously):
That big white building we passed back there.

PA (to chauffeur):
Sounds like you got a knock.

CHAUFFEUR:
Just a loose tappet. They're always working loose. (To Ma): What did you say, lady?

(They turn into the Speedway and whiz by the impressively beautiful Lincoln memorial . . . the new reflection pool mirrors the stately shaft of Washington's monument beyond . . . Pa and the Chauffeur are getting acquainted.)

PA: Look at the ducks on the river. Gosh, I wish I had a gun . . . I bet there's good hunting around here.

MA (to chauffeur):
What was that big white building on the hill we just went by?

CHAUFFEUR (warming to Pa's suggestion):
There sure is some good hunting over in Virginia . . . that's Virginia you see over there across the river.

PA: Well, there's some pretty good hunting up in Minnesota.

MA: What river is that?

BILL:
I think that's the Ohio.

MAMIE:
The Ohio! That's the Susquehanna.

CHAUFFEUR:
What kinda hunting do you get up there in Minnesota?

PA: Ducks and geese, but there ain't many geese any more; you've got to go over into Dakota for them . . . the late flight of ducks are better than the early ones.

MA (plaintively):
What's that big building over there?

CHAUFFEUR:
I never hunted in Minnesota, but I sure shot all over the hills in Virginia . . . didja ever carry a ten gauge double-barrel all day in the hills?

PA: Did jever stand in waders up to your neck in ice water all day, waiting for a flight of mallards or blue bills?

MAMIE:
Isn't that the Smithsonian Institute? It looks just like the picture.

CHAUFFEUR:
I'll bet that's fun. I'd like to go duck hunting some of these days. (Steps on gas and fairly flies.)

BILL:
O, we're coming right up to the Washington monument. (Admiringly): Ain't it a wow?

MA: What makes it a different color part of the way up?

CHAUFFEUR (coming to a stop opposite monument, mechanically):

Here's my card, if you want to do any more sightseeing.

How about them moose up there, and deer? Do you get any deer?

PA: Well, it's a mighty short season for moose . . . (Suddenly): O, that's the Washington monument.

BILL:
Can't we go up to the top and look out?

MA: Don't you dare; you'll fall and kill yourself. I read in the paper where somebody jumped off of it once. He must have jumped out of one of those little holes up there.

BILL (with professional interest):
I'll bet he lit all spread out. Who was that fellow caught a baseball dropped from the top of that?

MAMIE (unfeelingly):
Who cares?

CHAUFFEUR (chanting mechanically):
The Washtnmonumnt 'rected by grateful people Unitsates to 'memorate memory George Washntn firs fathruvus country, fi'hundrd fift'-five'nquartr feet high . . . (steps on the gas and goes.)

MA (with sign of satisfaction):
I've, always wanted to see the Washington monument. He was a wonderful man. (To chauffeur): O, look! Isn't that the White House over there?

PA (to chauffeur):
How many miles do you get out of a gallon?

CHAUFFEUR:
About nine in traffic; but I get more'n that out in the country.

(An argument on the relative gas consumption in city and country takes up Chauffeur's undivided attention while he rushes the Potter party around the capitol, past the Congressional library, and back again to their hotel.)

MA (desperately, as they whiz past Pension building):
What's the name of that big red building?

CHAUFFEUR:
You ought to take the folks out to Arlington and Mount Vernon before you leave. I could guide you swell. (Stops in front of hotel and Potters unload.) Here's my card, if you want to do any more sightseeing.

PA (hastily, paying him off):
O, that's all right. We've seen everything, haven't we, Ma?

(And that's that—until next Sunday.

BEAUTY VALUE of the RIGHT COLOR

"MY DEAR," came in a piercing whisper from a smartly dressed woman in a crowded tea room, "if there isn't the mouse—the MOUSE!"

The one addressed lifted a startled face from the menu and half rose.

"Wait a minute," the speaker resumed hurriedly, "I don't mean a mouse but the Mouse. Don't you remember that little remnant at school we called the Mouse? Look at her now. What is it?"

Following the motion of guiding eyes the woman's companion saw a girl sitting alone a few rods away. There was nothing alarming about the figure, but it possessed a distinction that had caught the attention of others beside the two schoolmates. Heads gently veered in its direction and little murmurs, like the whispering of leaves in a stimulating breeze, came from all quarters.

Tired of Being a Drab.

The girl who attracted the attention knew perfectly well what was in the air, and there was a good reason why she should, for the effect had been planned deliberately. Tired of being a drab little remnant she had concentrated "according to the latest and most scientific methods," with the result that even her critical sense was lulled.

She had been reared by the doctrine that inward beauty was all. It was all that had come her way. Other girls were more favored, for they possessed outward beauty and let the inward worry along on its own. She could not understand why they should have been so favored and she left in the shade. One day she woke up. She had been poking about in the basement of her home and had come across a pallid little plant which she had taken to the veranda and placed in a sunny spot. Within a week it was flaunting itself, gayly covered with crisp yellow petals. With the suddenness with which many a problem solves itself the girl knew what she lacked was COLOR, not powder, tints, shading, but color that would clothe her and make her fill a cheerful place in a cheerful world.

She was drab—quite negative—without the redeeming feature of gray or blue eyes, but when a woman starts for a thing it saves time for any obstacle to hop out of the way at once, and in three months the little remnant had emerged from her study as a girl with the much coveted knack of wearing her clothes with an air. The amusing thing in the change was that the difference was not in the clothes but their color. To the discerning eyes of the tea-tasters the girl as she sat at her table was as delectable as an interesting bit of china. She wore a jersey suit in a neutral tone with deep collar and cuffs of the thin white embroidered in a pink orchid. The crush hat pulled well down over her eyes was a pink orchid and her handbag was the same shade.

Turns Color Consultant.

White the girl had set aside as making her dull skin look worse than dull though collar and cuff sets in thin material softened the rather harsh complexion. All browns had been cast into outer darkness. Black was kept for evening wear and then it was lightened by a large rosette or velvet rose in nasturtium shades that was worn wherever the waist line happened to be. The cheeks were tinted enough to harmonize with the bright note and the lips touched up judiciously. But the girl's most reliable allies were sport clothes with which her wardrobe was three-quarters filled. Mixed suitings in dark shades and inconspicuous plaids were her joy, for they could be lightened by scarfs that were in all tones of subdued red.

The flavor of being a somebody instead of an "also present" had so stimulated the girl she pitched in to work with enthusiasm and set up her sign as a color consultant.

For a heavy featured brunette with a strong physique she prescribed rich warm tones of orange and burnt umber that made their wearer as picturesque as a gypsy. For street wear a dark clear blue with a dash of scarlet at the neck and cuffs and on the hat and a combination of blue and green were allowed.

A girl with hair the color of platinum was made a picture in a black that accentuated her fairness to the point of fragility. Delicate pinks, blues, and orchids were allowed, but black was the winning note. The girl had been trying to make herself attractive while wearing gold ornaments but a stern command was issued: "Stick to silver and platinum, but let gold alone. It makes your hair look like brass." And, rather to the wearer's astonishment she gave away her trifles of gold and copper and held herself to silver, the platinum as yet being but a Christmas hope.

Green for the Blondes.

Blondes with hair that ranged from the English auburn to the Irish red and from there to the American henna were given all shades of green to wear, a jade green being especially favored. When the eyes were a decided blue a blue holding considerable gray was added and when the eyes were brown a brown with a portion of red was chosen. Both blue and reddish heliotrope proved becoming. The creamy blonde could float about in a gown of apricot chiffon with telling effect and the girl with clear skin and mahogany brown hair was fortunate in having all shades at her back with the exception of yellow green and magenta.

It is amazing what color can do to make or mar. The girl who made herself over from an unstimulating neutral into a delightful object had no more intelligence than the average girl, but she was determined to be attractive and the only way for anyone to emerge from a lack-luster cocoon into something that rouses appreciation is to study until success arrives. Saleswomen often are consulted on the color question but they wish to make sales and, then too, they may not know any more about color vibration than does the one who questions them.

For instance, when a girl has been given hair and eyes of a light brown and a fair skin she is almost certain to appear insipid unless she possesses great animation. In a conscientious effort to appear animated women have made faces and worn their families into sanitariums. Let the right shades do the work and save the nerves. A color artist to such a woman would recommend a cinnamon brown or the charming combination of light tan and blue so popular in France. The yellow in the brown gives it character and the blue supplies the same quality. A pink orchid and all the shades of pinkish lavender also are lovely.

Color Taking New Hold.

There is just as little reason for the elderly woman to sigh and feel dowdy, for distinction depends on something other than the cut of a gown. A woman with gray hair is blessed with a dignity that does not always accompany added weight. She should appear regal in black or purple velvet and a gray with cut steel ornaments that catch the light should be becoming. It is hardly necessary to say that the hair should always be dressed by the most skillful hands to be obtained for love or money. All women past the meridian should keep away from browns, and yet, for some strange reason, they seem to be the ones who gravitate toward the earth shades. Blacks, grays, a plum, a deep heliotrope, taupe, and violet make beautiful settings for them.

Color is making itself felt more forcibly every year, and now that the average woman is realizing it is a necessary part of her every day existence it is not likely to be relegated to the background again. When crude, it softens with time and wear into beautiful blends, and when exquisite time but adds to its soft harmony.

Usually a woman's hair, eyes, and skin blend well, but instead of acknowledging that fact she seems possessed to change the hair and the skin and likely would the eyes if she could get away with it. Her constant experimenting causes effects that are strange and often really irritating—combinations that the subtlest of color harmonies cannot alter for the better. It is so much easier to change the color of the dress—and so very much safer. Isn't it more intelligent to place a yellow flower in a blue vase than to change the color of the flower into something that is neither yellow, red, nor white?

HELEN: BRAN ADDED TO HARD water in the proportion of about half a gallon to the ordinary thirty-gallon bath is recommended. Let the bran steep for five minutes, then put it in a gauze bag to prevent clogging of the pipes. A handful of steeped bran added to a wash bowl of water for the face is the right amount. It is soothing and cleansing as well.

IRENE: FIVE FEET TWO, 20 years, and a girl call for about 118 pounds. Pretty nearly O. K., aren't you?

EDNA: THROAT DISORDERS call for medical attention.

X. Y. Z.: HAIRS DO GET THEIR sustenance, like every structure of the body, from the blood. You need no further proof of that than the hair loss which invariably follows an attack of flu or some other sickness. I can see where you need to build up your entire system in order to help along your hair. Why don't you dash off to the country or the woods for your vacation, instead of making for the big city? There you would get the fresh air, the good food, the swimming and the hiking, all of which would do more for you in one month than the hair specialists can do for you in a dozen.

D. E. F.: YEPPE! THEY ARE good exercises, and if done every day, there'd be many better looking figures wearing more normal sizes, wouldn't there? I will gladly send you a half dozen of them to distribute among your co-workers if you say the words with stamped addressed envelope. Ask for "My Youth Preservers," that is exactly what they are.

MARIE: A SUN BATH IS GOOD for the hair. And where it is possible to dry the hair in the sun after the shampoo, you are lending it a splendid bit of first aid. Too long or too frequent exposure is likely to do damage. I have seen cases where after a couple of weeks' vacation, during which the hair was unprotected, the color was faded out and the hair made harsh and brittle. Moderation, my dear, in all things. You might, however, rub a little almond oil, vaseline, or olive oil into the scalp to help restore the luster. You can apply the latter to the scalp with an eye dropper, and thus keep it from spreading all over the hair.

UNHAPPY: IN THE CARE OF acne the chief thing is to cleanse the skin and free it as far as possible from blackheads. Almost all complexion blemishes begin with the retention in the pores of blackheads. By preventing them in the first place you see what a lot of trouble one may save her face. I think it almost necessary in the midst of soot and grime and dust met in almost every community of human habitation today to apply a good cleansing cream first. It penetrates the glands, softens up the imbedded particles, and makes them easier of removal. After wiping off with a clean bit of cheesecloth, wash the face in warm water and use a face brush to scrub around nose, across forehead, and at mouth corners, where the blackheads usually settle. Rinse in warm water, then cold—and here's the big trick in keeping a clear skin, after the thorough washing, of course—give the face an ice rub, or, that impossible, apply cold water cloths to the parts most apt to be affected. This is the best kind of astringent.

Simple Home Remedy for Wrinkled Faces

Thousands of the fair sex are spending fortunes in frantic efforts to remove the signs of premature age from their faces. Such women willingly pay almost any amount of money for worthless wrinkle removers, of which there are many.

If they only knew it, the most effective remedy imaginable is a simple, harmless lotion which can be made up at home in less than a minute. They have only to get an ounce of pure powdered Saxolite and half a pint of witch hazel at the drug store and mix the two. Apply this daily for a while as a refreshing face wash. The effect is almost magical. Even after the first treatment a marked improvement is noticed and the face has a smug, firm feeling that is most pleasing.

How to Be Happy Though Married

BY DORIS BLAKE

HELEN SPENGLER

IT is not uncommon for the phrase "she is so delightfully feminine" to be used, nor is it uncommon to hear "He is a wonderful fellow—a regular he-man," meaning, of course, that he possesses the attributes of masculinity.

Femininity and masculinity are attributes responsible for much of the happiness and considerable of the unhappiness in married life.

In a desire to be ultra-feminine a girl may plaster her face with chalk, hang herself with earrings, be ridiculously extravagant in items of perfumes, lingerie, negligees, and, in addition, play the feminine rôle of weakness and helplessness to the point of establishing a conviction of inferiority.

To be masculine can be carried to as great an extreme by the underdone youth or the bullying, tyrannical man, but these blunders do not alter the essential of attractiveness of both attributes.

Today we are taking the masculine side of the problem.

American women do not care for effeminate men. As "playmates" flatterers, may be—but not as husbands. It is a platitude to repeat the words of Peggy Joyce and other women of the world whose acquaintance among men of other countries gives them authority to concur, there are no men to compare with the American business man. And primarily the American business man who attains success is masculine.

The American man in general is a self-controlled, wholesome specimen, loyal to his responsibilities and able to put up a good fight in defense of them.

The girl he marries thinks him about right and he sustains against all comers the deserved reputation of being the nicest man in the world when it comes to the strain of everyday wear and tear. They start off at an even pace.

The man is occupied in making a living six days a week and occasionally seven. The girl is occupied in spending the living he makes. In many instances she lends little or no cooperation at all in helping him make the living, although she has a golden opportunity. To this class of woman about whom I write today and incidentally a class which contributes much toward marital discord, it does not seem to occur that she could be of invaluable assistance through her management of the home, as her idea of earning money instead of connecting inevitable a married woman's capacity for contributing to the budget with "being out in the great world," an idea not generally encouraged by the masculine type of man.

Unless a woman does look upon her home as her money earning job after a while the home seems able to run itself practically, and there is "oodles" of time on hand. Occasionally the woman joins a club that has some useful place in the world, probably, but in the majority of cases she does not wish serious occupation and so amuses herself by joining other women as possessed of leisure as herself.

What is the result?

Quite persuaded that they are truly progressive, the young women discuss manners, styles, plays, and eventually the strange ways of their respective husbands, who, through the superficial analysis appear to be unmodish, blundering beings, needing lessons in refinement, to be administered delightedly and firmly by wife.

There the trouble begins.

The man, heretofore, though aware that his wife was not growing more loving as the days went on, has been loyally fond and considerate of her whims. When he has come home, his masculinity to the fore where it has been forced by the hard competition with other men in putting a business deal across, his lessons in conduct are begun. His nap before dinner, in which he snores, may be the motive for correction. Or the sliding into a beloved but shaggy coat and comfy shoes, or dragging out a companionable old meerschaum, or it might be one of a thousand little old habits upon which the wife perpetrates her lessons in refinement.

If a woman marries a man because he is of the thoroughly masculine type and she knows she can depend on his strength and sense of honor to shelter and provide for her, why under the sun cannot she be contented with her choice? Why spoil an exceptionally good thing by trying to extract the square roots of the dependable virtues?

Why try to make a tea hound or a parlor ornament out of something that will wear a life time if only given half a chance.

The woman would bitterly resent having any one meddle with her tastes that have formed and think an effort to meddle showed impertinence. Why should she not realize that her husband is an individual and that meddling with his tastes is quite as impertinent? His masculinity is what attracted her, and if he should become refined to the point she apparently wishes him to reach that attraction would be dead.

The old saying that "women love a cave man" is not based on any feminine desire to be dragged around by the hair of her head, but comes from that inevitable leaning of the feminine nature toward the masculine.

Women love a cave man because in their inmost souls they know he will never be anything but masculine, and they know their efforts to change his nature will not accentuate what is to them his greatest attraction.

My advice to a husband suffering the trials of remodeling by a misguided wife would be definitely not to acquiesce in her plans for the new model. For the very simple reason, based on pure feminine psychology, if you do cooperate in the new plans and specifications you are not going to be the man she wants at all.

Because a woman tries to do a certain thing does not show that she will be pleased if she succeeds.

If a man is everything else to his wife implied in the analysis of the good American business man he need not be afraid to raise the voice of authority around the house when his tastes and habits are threatened. It is the voice of authority which every last woman of us respects, even unto the most independent, the worst naggers, the worst fault finders, among us.

Being masculine in nowise implies bullying or terrorizing the woman. But better that than by a too easy submission evolve into a henpecked mate.

MARITAL REEFS

What was the greatest stumbling block to happiness in your married life? Did you have to struggle with too idealistic and too romantic a viewpoint toward mate and matrimony? Was it incompatibility of temperament or interests? Was there an economic reason for the reef you nearly struck? Was your stumbling block age disparity? Religious differences? Too much mother-in-law? Poor housekeeping? Extravagance? Jealousy? Unfair division of the pay envelope? Husband unfaithful, thoughtless, unkind, alcoholic, lazy, deceitful? Perhaps it was some other stumbling block about which you can tell us and which may help some other couple about to embark upon the good ship Matrimony. Tell us about it, won't you? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Doris Blake, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Disastrous "Puppy Love."

Have read your column "Marital Reefs," and am anxious to help any one whose conditions during their marriage were similar to mine. I would appreciate it very much if you'd print the following:

Very young marriages are nothing short of tragical. I married [an elopement] when I was 15. I'm 18 now—and divorced. I married a handsome, "spoiled baby" of 20, and an only child who, in his mother's eyes, was faultless. Of course he wasn't making much money, and as I had never worked I was unable to help him, except in being as economical as possible, which was hard, for I had always had servants, a car, and plenty of money. However, I was willing to give up all these things, because I loved him. I started right in, learning by experience, and a great many burns and tears, how to cook. But my husband didn't seem to realize how hard it was to learn, and he didn't appreciate my effort and forgot completely that I had given up a life of luxury and my family for him.

He would become so irritable at times that he would swear at me, and even strike me. I stood it about a year longer than I should have; in fact, I am too disillusioned to say "yes" to one who has been proposing every week since I've been "free." And so, little 15 year olders, be very "slow and careful" when you are about to embark on that great adventure—matrimony.

Temperamental Storms Abating.

Incompatibility of temperament was the greatest stumbling block to our domestic felicity. I was serious minded and somewhat sentimental; the man I married was practical and apt to see the humorous side of every situation. There were many misunderstandings before we managed to adjust our differences in viewpoints and our outlook upon life. But we endeavored to tolerate each other's opinions, likes and dislikes, because we were sincere in desiring to make each other happy. Because we realized we could not live apart, we learned how to live together in peace.

We both were quick-tempered and outspoken, and unwittingly hurt each other's feelings time and again; but in doing so necessarily we grew less sensitive, and neither harbored hard feeling toward the other for any length of time. With tacit understanding we refrained from criticism, and each permitted the other perfect freedom of conduct. Association with each other influenced our tastes and opinions, and gradually we grew more congenial. I have become more practical in many ways and have developed a sense of humor nearly equaling his own, while he has acquired more sentiment.

There still are differences in our temperaments that need adjustment, but we are contented, and after forty years of married life we can truthfully say we "are happy though married."

E. M.

Sister Causes Trouble.

I truly believe I had a stumbling block after I was married. My husband's mother died when he was 10 years old, leaving him with a sister four years older. She, of course, expected him to do exactly as she told him, and after he was married she still expected it.

It finally went as far as this: When she came to visit us she would bring her Saturday's baking with her—pie, cake, bread, and some vegetables. I was young and did my best, as most young brides try to do, but this was too much for me, as I knew she did not mean it in the right way.

There would have been a divorce if I hadn't had grit enough to tell her to come but leave her food at home, as I would furnish that. She still looks upon my cooking as inferior to hers, but she brings no more food.

P. O. U.

The Way Out.

I married by husband because of his never failing good nature. During our courtship, never once did an unpleasant circumstance mar his sunny disposition. Therefore, when, a few days after our marriage, I discovered he had a nasty temper, and indulged in outbursts of cursing and vile language, I was violently disillusioned, and quite stunned. I thought at first that I could not live with him, but he was good to me, and I soon realized I loved him nevertheless, and that I must make the best of it.

His working hours were long and he had very little time to spend upon the house or car. Consequently he was always hurried to get things done, and an unexpected delay sometimes meant being late for work or losing precious sleep. It was always when he was trying to do a great many things in a short time that he lost his temper. So I learned never to ask his help if I could get along without it, and to offer myself whenever I could to make matters easier for him. In this way, he seldom becomes furious enough to forget himself, and true happiness has been my reward.

Whenever an outburst does occur, though I shudder inwardly, I pretend not to mind, and thus avoid a subsequent family "tiff." I was quite some time learning the way out of our difficulties, but in the end saved our happiness from going on the rocks.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

BY CLOTILD

APRON NEEDLEWORK BAGS.

WOMEN who like to knit will surely want one of these pretty and convenient apron bags made to hold knitting. The apron is made of one width of 36 inch cretonne, surf satin, or any preferred material. Cretonne would seem to be almost prettier than the surf satin, although if some gaily colored embroidered design were put on the pocket of the apron, the result would be most satisfactory.

One yard of material is all that is needed, and the apron should measure about 17 inches in length, and the material should be shaped across the top, so it will fit smoothly. Curve it down towards the middle about one inch. Across the bottom, you will see from the picture that the apron is shaped curving up towards the sides about 3 inches. The pocket below the facing measures 14 or 15 inches; so that the pocket piece should be cut about 18 inches deep. This will allow for a one inch hem and a casing measuring ¾ inch, or possibly one inch in width. The casing is left open at the ends and through this are run two ribbons, finished with bows, so that when one wishes, the pocket can be pulled together across the top.

When not being used, fold the upper part down over the pocket, and it can be carried with very little trouble.

MISS JANE S.: Tucks are used a great deal on dresses now, and make attractive decoration; but you will not make a mistake if you embroider in beads or silk floss. Those things must always be largely a matter of individual taste.

When Jane's Secret Came Out

THE GIRLS filed upstairs to dress for dinner. It had been a long contest on the tennis courts, and they were fagged.

"We'll have to hurry—the boys are coming at six, and we'll look like frights—'cept Jane—she has a secret. What is it, Jane?"

Jane smiled mysteriously, and answered, "Just give me a few minutes in my room."

In an unbelievably short time Jane reappeared, her little dressing-coat flung over bare shoulders. Her amber-colored hair glistened. She looked as though she had been touched by a magic wand that had transformed her to radiant beauty. Her skin had the delicate tint of a tea rose—warmly white, tinged with pink.

"What have you done?" they chorused.

"You can all do it, girls. It's the most wonderful secret in the world—it's the Pompeian Beauty Trio."

"Don't Envy Beauty—Use Pompeian"

WOMEN of all types and ages are increasing their attractiveness by the use of the Pompeian Instant Beauty Trio. The Trio consists of Day Cream, Beauty Powder, and Pompeian Bloom (a rouge). They are to be applied in this order:

First—the Day Cream should be carefully distributed over the skin. It vanishes as it is used, leaving only a delicate coating that protects the skin against sun, wind and dust.

Next—the Beauty Powder is applied—and Pompeian powder is not only unusually soft and delicate, but it adheres remarkably long.

Then—just the artistic amount of Pompeian Bloom. It comes in Dark, Medium, Light, and Orange Tint, so you will be sure to get the right shade for your skin.

Finally, when the Pompeian Bloom has been carefully blended, a light application again of the Beauty Powder gives that lovely flower-bloom finish that makes the skin look so natural.

The Pompeian Lip Stick gives the desirable touch of color that completes the fresh look of healthy beauty.

These preparations are scientifically made, and perfectly pure. Their properties and their colors blend together to produce the most natural-looking effect.

The Girl Who Was Out of Date

By MME. JEANNETTE

Not long ago I had a call from a young friend. She came in wearily and sank into a chair. The brilliant afternoon sunlight fell full on her face, and I was appalled when I saw how pale she looked.

"What is the matter?" I asked, expecting to be told that she was ill.

"Oh, I'm just tired," she said; "so tired I don't care how I look."

I was so indignant that for a moment I could not speak. There is no possible excuse for such an attitude!

To make the best of herself is the conceded duty of every woman, young or old; and a modish gown means very little when the complexion is uncared for.

"Come here," I said to her, "and let me see what I can do for you."

First I used a vanishing cream, gently patting it into the skin. This was Pompeian Day Cream. I always use this, for it leaves only a faint creamy film on the surface and holds powder and rouge so well. Next a coating of the soft, clinging Beauty Powder. Then a bit of rouge blended downward and outward from the cheekbone; dusting over all with a last touch of the powder. And this I had done to only one side of her face!

I turned her around to face the mirror. You never saw anyone so surprised! She looked and looked, turning from side to side; and I don't wonder, for she saw two entirely different girls, and one was so much lovelier it seemed incredible.

"That is what you can make of yourself every day, and it will take only a few minutes," I told her.

I couldn't help laughing at her astonishment; she had never had an idea she could be so pretty. She realized now the mistake she had been making, and watched with the keenest interest, while I made the other side of her face just as charming, adding at the last a touch of Pompeian Lip Stick.

She didn't say very much, but all the afternoon I saw her eyes straying toward the mirror. I hoped then that she would profit by my little lesson, and I know now that she did, for I've never seen her looking pale and weary since.

DRESS ON INCLINED PLANE.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—This is what Madeleine is doing at Paquin's. Bias folds mounting from a low level on the right side to an altitude on the left, as in the first sketch. One can almost imagine them as set with underground machinery and a furnicular mounting them by the clutch system, so like a mountain slope is their incline. You might use a phrase to describe this dress that is sometimes so employed to people who struggle to make a showing: "It is all front and no back." That is to say, the series of inclined plains and other garnishment go only across the half of the dress that shows in the model. The back is quite plain and flat—following the fashion which the designer of this dress herself launched.

The other significant item in it is the very tight effect of sleeve just as it descends from the shoulder. That is one of the details in the movements of the day. Sleeves fit tightly at the base, and widen into the bell shape later. The dress carries the tie round belt which is not so new and not so distinguished as the other two items noted. But don't you think the bias folds and the fox fur make a smart combination? The hat is of black crepe de chine with the high crown of the day, and as garnishment it carries two big poppies, one black and the other white—two of the colors in which nature does not carry her poppies. But then art, particularly the modern form of it, is so much more elastic than nature.

I think I have mentioned it before. But a style isn't a style until it is oft repeated. Such a very smart combination is obtained today by using both the wrong side and the right of satin. Not of course any old satin—the wrong side must be "treated" before it is eligible to public appearance. But that is a part of the technique of the subject that does not concern us. Buy your satin that can be made up on both sides. Have the dress in one piece, with the dull side out, and need I say again, order it in a straight silhouette. Let it turn back in shiney reveres at collar and cuffs, and exercise your utmost restraint in the matter of further trimming. By this simple recipe you cannot very well avoid having a dress that has some very definite properties of chic.

And herewith I practice my favorite custom of introducing the exception which proves the rule. The laws I was laying down govern the art of afternoon dressing. For the evening leave the shiney surface exclusively. The illustration represents an evening costume and is therefore dimmed by no wrong sides. This one is a very successful white satin evening toilette by Jean Patou, with an extremely full skirt, which has the significance of being as far as prophets can foretell, a harbinger of a style to come.

Have you noticed how often the message of the changing silhouette is borne to us in the lines of the evening frock? We are in an antic mood after 6 in the afternoon and will lend ourselves to strange, bizarre effects that would shock our sense of conservatism by day. Not that the present offering is either bizarre or the reverse of conservative. It is merely a very lovely model, so attractive to American girls that exactly six of them had it on at a dance the other evening. In America this would cause a panic, but here nobody cared. It was a sign that they had possessed the taste to choose a beautiful dress. Above this full circular skirt rises a simple bodice almost classic in its restrained long, straight lines. It blouses slightly in the back, and it is mounted on a belt of crystal embroidery, placed rather low. The French, you know, are wearing their hair shingled. The lady's hair is so cut, and is held in place by a band of crystal beads. In the matter of belts and other garnishments, it would seem as if the uglier the design in the embroidery the better. This one is not as bad as some.

Bad taste color combinations seem to be the order of the day. I saw an extremely well dressed woman the other day wearing a tête de negre costume with a little cluster of red and green roses embroidered on the bodice just below the left shoulder. There are numerous spots in these bad taste colors.

The third offering is by Chanel. The dress is nothing but a series of little volantes or ruffles, weighted along the edges with a row of rhinestones. A rope of rhinestones starts on each shoulder and swings below the waist line. I think it is one rope going from each shoulder and caught up in the back. It is lovely when the wearer dances, because it swings out in lines that make a contrast of real value to the movements of the body. Little diamonds are studded on the edges of things nowadays. There is a black satin dress in town that is dotted with them, and it is one of the acknowledged hits of the day. An American woman wears one of the models, and nobody is better looking than an American woman when she is dressed in Paris. She has such an elegance. This girl is tall and slender and well groomed.

Here is a Doeuillet model that is conspicuously successful. It is composed of one of those doubled tiered skirts decorated every now and then in a pink embroidered rose. There is an effect round the shoulders as if a handkerchief were wrapped across them, but it is in reality merely a piece of the material—which is black satin—so arranged, and it is garnished in pink rose buds, too. The edging of the skirt folds and bodice decoration is in old blue. The shoulder cape gathers in to the bodice at the apex of the V shaped throat line.

Varied Activities of Women.

Miss Eleanor Fitzgibbon of Laurel, Md., a well known suffragist, is probably the first woman to take up the business of importing and breeding Jersey cattle.

Recent government statistics reveal that out of the 687 possible occupations recognized by the census bureau there are only thirty-three without women representatives.

Miss D. C. Moore, captain of the Boxhill Girl Guides, London, has been selected to come to the United States to demonstrate how English girl camps are conducted.

The title "madame" should be applied to all women after they have reached the age of 30, according to Jane Misme, French authoress, who has just launched this campaign.

The first license granted to a woman by the National Aeronautic association has just been received by Miss Amelia M. Earhart of Atchison, Kas. Miss Earhart recently piloted her plane to an altitude of 11,000 feet, believed to be the highest ever flown by a woman.

Since the award to her of the highest bravery medals of both the American Red Cross and the Carnegie institute Miss Mary Buhner is being hailed as the "bravest girl in America."

The birth control movement in Japan is headed by Baroness Ishimoto.

The synopsis of a light opera written by Queen Marie of Roumania has been received in New York so that Otto H. Kahn can read it with the view of producing it in this country.

It is an interesting coincidence that three of the foremost women tennis players in American—Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, Mrs. George W. Wightman, and Mrs. Benjamin E. Cole—are each the mother of three children.

Hair Often Ruined by Careless Washing

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store; it is inexpensive, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure and ask for "Mulsified."

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

AGES SINCE SHE LEFT.

DEAREST GIRL: I was so glad to get your letter last night, for it seems ages since you left, and yet it has only been a month today. But, I have been lonely and you say you are to be gone six months! I am wondering if I can ever wait that long to see you. It seems as if my love for you were only a spark when you left me, and absence has caused it to burst into a flame, which seems impossible for me to control.

I am glad you like the scenery and climate of old California, and if you believe you would rather live there, I'll try to come out there and get a position, for your own dear happiness comes first in my life. Dear, I am trying so hard to save so I can furnish a home you will love, and as you have always had almost any luxury you wanted, I want to do my best to have your surroundings agreeable to you.

Dear, there is one thing I would like to impress upon your mind, if you meet someone else, you feel could make you happier than I, I will give you up even if the pieces of my heart can never be mended. I am sure though that you will find me true unto the end.

Write to me as often as you can, for I watch every mail for a letter.

Your devoted,
JACK.

UTENSILS AND POT ROASTING.

WOMEN are interested in utensils. It is a fundamental instinct to be so. Superfine cooking utensils and even the homely but uniquely practical ware of the peasant have taken their place in interest and charm with expensive bric-à-brac. And utensils are a necessity. If it were not for this fundamental interest and the need we have for them, the making of utensils would not so often be the illogical and even senseless thing it sometimes is, nor would the merchandising of utensils be the confused, mussy and wasteful thing it is.

In general the cook does not know as much about her utensils as she might, because she does not read the directions that go with them. As for me, I never buy a utensil that has any directions accompanying it that I do not put these away as most precious literature, in a folder dedicated to that use. Any number of things like can openers, percolators, fireless cookers, ice cream freezers, and even stoves, are often used in a half inefficient way, or given up entirely, because the directions that go with them are not preserved and minutely followed. I am not speaking from hearsay. I know, and have watched these things, and have been consulted by those who could not give the name of the manufacturer to whom they should write, in case of failures if they can find out where. It is easy to forget names and that is another reason for keeping the literature.

Literature Often Missing.

But one of the maddening things is that in too many cases the literature that the manufacturer planned the user to have, she never gets. Suppose he puts it on the wrapper. In some stores these wrappers are torn off regardless, and thrown away in order that a great pile of the article in question may be put on display, there to get banged, scratched, dropped and dented and in other ways suffer deterioration and prepared for a bargain counter, to be sold, in no end of cases for as small a proportion of the original cost as one-tenth. We buyers in the end pay for that waste. I have seen shocking wastes of this sort, simply because the seller insists on showing a surfeit of things identically alike, when a sample would be enough.

Some utensils have parts that can be lost, like covers or handles. When these are safe in their original wrappings, and better, without the newness worn off by shop handling, this cannot occur. Some manufacturers have done as much as possible to prevent such wastes by wiring tags to a utensil and fastening parts together by wire, etc.

As for me, I shall always believe that the sane and sensible way to sell cooking utensils is after the same manner that screws and keys and all such hardware is sold. The walls of hardware stores are every inch utilized by drawers and shelves, and only samples are displayed. I do not know how many kinds of economy might be served in that way, since there are people who have never been taught that it was bad manners to handle everything they pass. Men and women are rightly enough filled with curiosity, and if not trained to keep hands off they will put them on, and not being trained at all in this way they can often ruin or injure what they touch instead of handling with care, and with the right property sense. I feel very strongly on this subject, for some people who should know better are as primitive with their hands as the first men.

Favors Sellers Walking.

Again, I often dread to go to buy a utensil because of the walking back and forth for half a block or so that I shall have to do, almost as sure as fate, if I go to one of the department stores. The people who sell should do the walking, or there should be directories of the floor here and there, as there are directories of the departments in the large stores. I do not like to ask, over and over again, and often getting the wrong directions, sometimes because the one directing does not know where and dares not say so.

This may seem like a tirade that has gone far enough, but is it not a pity that so many real stumbling blocks are put in our way to drown the natural interest we have in utensils, to prevent our knowing how to use and care for them in the best ways, etc.? As illustrative of how far we may be hindered in all the work done in the home is the following instance. A high grade, fifteen apartment building was going up. On every enameled sink delivered there were generous printed directions addressed to the builders, plasterers, painters, plumbers and housewives, yet long before the place was ready for occupancy not one of these was to be found, and in some cases the enamel had been injured irreparably with paint and coarse plaster, and an utter disregard of those valuable directions. Ignorance is so inconvenient!

Too Little Understanding.

Our natural interest in utensils needs to be fostered, built up in every way. Our lack of knowledge of them—say of our stove, which in a sense is a utensil—reduces us to a state equivalent to having to work with one hand or one eye, which is nerve wracking to say the least. Many women hate kitchens because of just such a strain. They do not know how to use utensils.

Half the skill in cooking a number of things depends on a knowledge of how to handle the utensil, especially such a fundamental and ancient a one as a pot, and the pot cover. A slipshod cover to a pot, whether for boiling or braising, which is pot roasting, is an abomination. Each pot and kettle should have its cover, and these should be as closely covered when not in use as when used.

The low, broad or squat fireless cooker kettles with clamped down cover have been one of the most invaluable aids to the better cooking of vegetables, and in the saving of gas, which turned high under a number of sorts of foods can all but ruin them. I have held one of these in my hands and described its virtues and had women who never cooked take a keen interest in it, and have a man efficiency expert say, "That kettle looks efficient." It is efficient.

But quite as efficient in its own way as this kettle, and a prime utensil for all sorts of summer use, is the iron kettle with its heavy perfectly fitting cover which we call the Dutch oven. We can not only cook small pieces of meat in it with the least fire, but bake potatoes and other vegetables, make stews and bake beans in the ground in it.

For all this cooking we need a kettle which will not rust, and especially one with a cover which will not rust inside just by being wet, even if hot. It is not at all pleasant to lift a cover from a dainty stew and find it dripping drops of rusty water, and that is what it will do if kettle and cover were not well seasoned before using.

Worth While Instructions.

One of the best things done by one of the retail sellers of household utensils, or one of the best things endorsed and distributed by them after being prepared elsewhere, was a leaflet telling how to prepare iron cooking utensils for use. It really is a vital matter. The following were the directions given for the Dutch oven:

Preparing a Pot Roasting Kettle.

"To the housewife with a new Dutch oven must be given this word of warning: Season your oven thoroughly before the first time of using. The 'handed down' iron kettles have been thoroughly seasoned from long usage. Wash your oven carefully and scrub it well, using a good scouring powder and steel wool. Wash again and fill nearly full of cold water. Add two heaping tablespoons of sal soda, place the kettle on the stove, and allow the water to simmer very slowly for at least one-half day. Place the cover on the kettle that it may get the full benefit of the boiling as well. After this, scrub the kettle again with more scouring powder and steel wool. If steel wool is not at hand, a stiff, steel bristled brush proves effective in the scouring process. The steel bristles penetrate the pores of an iron pot, removing the undesirable substance with which the pores are filled. Into the clean kettle cut bits of fat meat or suet, allowing from one to two pounds for each kettle. Try out this fat in the kettle slowly, being careful that it does not burn. Place the cover on over the fat that it may be seasoned. Every few moments rub the sides of the kettle and the inside of the cover with a piece of fat. When the fat is tried out, pour it out of the kettle. This fat should be used for soap making, as it is not suitable for cooking purposes. Next, take some crumpled tissue paper and wipe out both kettle and cover thoroughly until clean and smooth. The kettle is now ready to be used. The same procedure should be followed with all iron kettles, skillets, and pans."

This may seem like a troublesome piece of work, but remember that it is for a lifetime, or several lifetimes, and that smooth iron will always be a joy to wash and, if kept well covered or lightly greased, will not rust.

Pot Roast of Beef.

A piece of chuck beef is better than the heel of the round for pot roasting or braising. Three pounds of chuck is ample for six people and there is a nice one pound bit in the chuck for two people, but some butchers have not been willing to sell less than five pounds of high grade chuck, while others cut it to suit and some butchers, if you ask for a pot roast, will give you a round, since they buy only the hind quarter of beef for their custom.

If you have a piece of chuck with a marrow bone, remove bone, draw the ends of the meat together and tie it up like a rolled roast, drawing the string so that it cuts into the meat and so will not come off when the roast is turned in the pot. Rub flour well into it, drop into kettle containing three tablespoons of fat and sear well on all sides, making the surfaces much like that of a good pan fried chop, so that in the end the meat, which is basted about every ten or fifteen minutes, will have much the same texture as a piece of meat roasted in the oven, while a poor pot roast will be more like boiled meat.

When the meat is well seared take it up, stir around in the fat the seasoning vegetables which have been ready, and as soon as they steam well put the meat on them, rinsing off the plate on which it has stood with a tablespoon of water, so as not to waste the juice, pour into kettle, cover closely, and lower fire under, but not so low that you cannot hear a "singing" in the pot.

Juices Improve Flavor.

This meat is being cooked in its own juices boiling within it, and not being cooked out, because flour covered, crust covered and fat covered. The juices of the vegetables, mingling with the fat which is basted over the meat, make it spicy of flavor, and these must not be dried up in the cooking but be in a condition to serve as an edible garnish.

Two onions, three stalks of celery or dried or green celery leaves, a scraped and sliced carrot, a little green pepper is collection enough but some stem ginger, or soaked prunes or a small lump of brown sugar or some fine herbs all work up into a delicious whole. Add the salt when the roast is three-fourths done.

We may call this stewing a piece of meat in fat and seasonings, and the method is adapted to almost all pieces of meat, including a disjointed chicken, which can be cooked to rival the best fried chicken. A mixture of different fats have much better seasoning power than one only but some tried out suet will do, or the fat from fried pork, or white bacon fat—not fat full of black specks—or some butter and lard will do.

Nice cooking with fats is an art learned by experience and experimenting. It should never be burned, and if too hot in pot roasting it dries up and blackens the vegetables, which fact shows that the meat itself has been overcooked.

A House That Is Really a Home

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

ALMOST any habitation with four walls and a roof may be called a house. It requires a keen appreciation of those details which transform an ordinary house into that which we affectionately term "home" to understand why many so-called homes lack in those intimate touches which attract, and which, because of this deficiency, disappoint their owners.

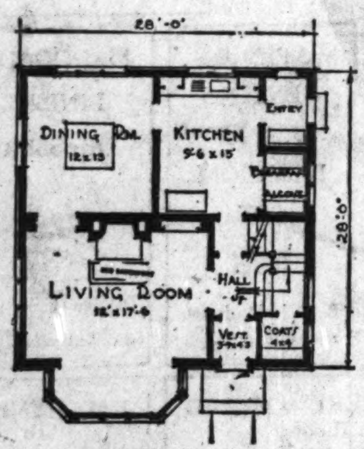
It is to emphasize and bring out the homelike essentials, which are so highly prized, that we show today a delightful small house planned by Architect J. S. Whitman of Buffalo, N. Y. None of the necessary qualities is missing. Its textured rough trowled surface shows every detail of the stucco art and indicates thought and care for appearance. The casement-windowed front bay, admitting a flood of sunlight, betokens a cheerful living room. Then, too, the simple roof lines are carried down to shelter an inviting and welcoming front door only two steps from the walk. Climbing roses fairly smother the curved trellis beside the entrance. The stuccoed chimney, with its attractive pots, suggests a real fuel burning fireplace in the living room.

In planning this home, Mr. Whitman has made use of several well known materials of construction. Poured concrete has been used in the foundation walls which have been carried about nine inches up above grade. This precaution of providing an impervious base course for the stucco wall, insures against frost damage and stucco stains. From thereon up wood framing and back-plastered stucco construction is used for the side walls. The customary wood sheathing is dispensed with, at a considerable saving in expense, and eliminates a prolific source for stucco cracks. The wood studs are firmly braced at the corners, and at door openings, and carried up to the eaves, after which expanded metal lath is nailed directly to the wood studs, and stucco applied on both outer and inner faces of the lath. Such construction has been tested in many ways and found satisfactory. It is favorably recognized in Secretary Hoover's new department of commerce recommended building code.

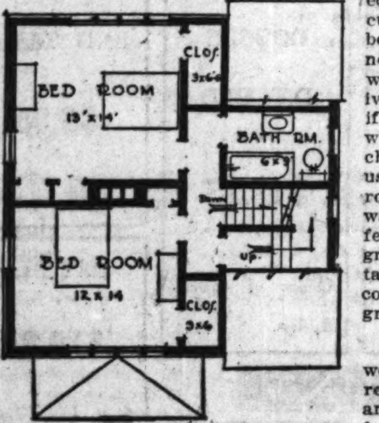
Lumber is used throughout the interior, both for its adaptability and economy. However, those desiring an especially fire resistive floor may, at slight additional expense, obtain it by using formed steel joist for the first floor. This is a new departure, heretofore used most extensively in apartment and similar buildings, but now recognized as equally well suited for residence construction. The steel joist come cut to size, if desired, and are laid on the foundation wall, in much the same manner as wood joist, with which all are familiar. A steel fabric such as is used for back-plastered stucco walls is laced on the joist, and a two inch layer of concrete poured over. The mesh of the lath fabric being close, no concrete forms, such as are ordinarily employed, are necessary, the fabric thus acting both as form and reinforcement. For larger residences, such steel joist are used also for upper floors, in which event metal lath is attached to the under side, insuring a crackless ceiling, and full fire protection.

A small vestibule leads into the stair hall, and at the foot of the steps there is a closet for coats. It has a shelf —and what is more important—its own window!

Well lighted and commodious, the living room, with its casement window bay, serves also as a delightful sun room. The handsome, tapestry brick fireplace has a tiled hearth, and is flanked by convenient bookshelves.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN.



SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

Carefully chosen to harmonize with the other furniture and decorations is a comfortable bed-davenport.

A French door separates the living room from the dining room, which overlooks a well kept lawn, attractively landscaped, and surrounded by a hedge.

Grape arbors, one on either side, in the perspective drawing, the entire basement, excepting the portion set off a sun dial which is the center piece in the garden. Perennials and trees hide the stucco garage and cement drive from view, and form a pleasing contrast against the rear of the stucco house, which, of course, is finished in its roughly troweled surface roundabout.

Clean cut and neat is the well arranged kitchen. Its built-in sink is set under a large double window. There is a separately inclosed entry, with a compartment for a refrigerator, and, last, but by no mans least, a breakfast alcove, with two windows. The popularity of this arrangement, due to its convenience, has grown by leaps and bounds in the space of a few years, so that now a breakfast alcove is considered as practically indispensable, in work saving, as an electric washer and vacuum cleaner. A door leading from the kitchen to the front entry makes it possible for any one to answer the door bell from this room without necessarily passing through all of the others.

A large steel casement window lights the stairs to the upper floor, where there are two good sized bedrooms, with plenty of light, and an abundance of closet space. The closets are made more commodious and convenient by modern garment fixtures, which provide double room for the clothes, in half the space ordinarily required, and preserve the garments in better condition. The bathroom is placed on this floor, just at the head of the staircase.

Although at first sight it would seem that this house has no basement, because windows do not show under the bay window, is excavated, and lighted by a number of windows, set in area ways. Besides a large furnace room and coal storage there are separately inclosed rooms for fruit and vegetable storage, and a laundry.

In completing the color scheme of the exterior, Mr. Whitman has suggested that the roof should be of weather green slate, or variegated shingles, laid rough. The entrance door is of weathered oak, and has strap hinges. To finish the picture, the entry and ceiling, up to the sidewalk, are laid in an attractive red brick pattern.

Answers to Inquiries.

O. K.: In the living room have striped casement silk over draperies, in mulberry, old blue, and ecru, with ecru silk gauze glass curtains. Taupe cushions, piped with mulberry, would be attractive on the davenport. It is not necessary to have glass curtains with pongee window hangings. Old ivory silk gauze would be nice, though, if you wish to have them. A blue and white braided rug, with blue and white checked gingham curtains, could be used in the nursery [rose color, if the room has a north exposure]. With walnut furniture, Du Barry rose taffeta draperies, over changeable sage green and ecru silk gauze glass curtains, would be good looking. The rug could be either rose taupe or deep sage green.

G. B.: For the bed cover in your west bedroom, you could have striped rep, jade pink, with stripes of light amethyst, old ivory, and hairlines of leaf green. Dresser covers could be the same. Have natural colored casement cloth, edged with narrow jade green worsted fringe for the sun room curtains. Black rep cushions, piped with jade green, would be nice. You could use dull green fiber rugs. With French gray woodwork, dulled silver hardware, and electric fixtures would be attractive, or antiqued with old ivory woodwork.

J. I. C.: Burnt orange taffeta under dark brown georgette would be lovely for lamp shades in your living room. Have deep, dark brown silk fringe. Jade green would be a pleasing color for contrast for the radiator cushion. Have natural colored casement cloth for the windows, edged with jade green worsted fringe.

* *

J. K.: Yes, it would be all right to use the dining room set as you suggested, since the room is so long. Add to your other pieces an overstuffed chair and davenport. Have the window frames painted French gray, and use sand colored shades. These would blend well with the curtains you want. The linoleum you describe would be nice in the kitchen. In your living room you might use a smaller supplementary rug with your 9x12.

* *

J. M. S.: Yes, a good looking mirror, placed as you suggest, would brighten your living room considerably.

* *

M. H.: Have natural colored casement cloth, edged with narrow ecru and old blue upholsterer's fringe, for draperies in your living room. Get a pair of end tables, one for the davenport and the other for a large chair. Mulberry silk, under ecru georgette, would be attractive for lamp shades. Linoleum is practical and suitable for the kitchen floor. Either blue and white check, or old blue in a brick pattern, with white mortar lines, would be nice. Let the curtains in the hall match those in the living room.

* *

A. V.: With rose colored draperies, ecru silk gauze curtains and a deep taupe rug would be nice.

"Queerest Boss" Comeback.

To begin with I wrote an article on "My Queerest Boss." I sent it to THE TRIBUNE thinking it would never be seen by any one in the town where I worked. Imagine my horror, therefore, just as I came to work one morning and passed the boss to recognize in his hands the article I had written. Some one had seen it, recognized it, along with my initials, and laid it on his desk. When he had finished reading it and saw my initials at the bottom he didn't say a word. He just turned and looked at me. The look was plenty.

Good Samaritan Gets Joshed

It happened a few months ago, when I was in the city. I was standing in front of one of the downtown stores, waiting for my companion. The streets were crowded. A well dressed woman, who was directly in front of me, suddenly staggered and fell. I thought she had fainted and rushed to her side. I sat down on the street and took her head in my arms. "Call an ambulance, the lady has fainted," I demanded of the crowd, which had quickly gathered. "Don't trouble yourselves," said the unconscious (?) woman as she rose to her feet, "I merely slipped on that banana peeling." Whereupon she stalked away, leaving me to arise, brush off my coat, and depart as hurriedly as possible from the snickers of the delighted crowd.

H. S.

Sitting in the Paint Can.

I was coming home from work one evening, carrying a large open top can of paint. The street car was crowded and I was just up against the step when the street car gave a jerk and I fell in. Everybody laughed.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

SOMETHING IN RETURN.

"I AM writing to ask if any of your readers have furniture to give in exchange for a set of Encyclopedia Britannica, eleventh edition, 29 volumes, and brand new. I wrote to you last winter when my husband was ill. He died in January, Miss Brown. I have taken a large flat and will rent rooms in order to make my living. This is my first venture alone and I am almost frantic at times. Please try to help me to get some furniture and curtains, so that I can fix up the rooms to be rented.

"MRS. R."

Think of it! This pood widow, driven, while still crushed by her loss, to attempt earning a living, and in spite of all so willing to do her part! She will trade her encyclopedia, she says, and probably that is almost all she has, beyond the sheer necessities. But she wants to give something in return for the things she needs, so she offers it.

Now when almost all of us have one or more pieces of furniture in the store-room which we don't really want, can't we give Mrs. R. one turn of good fortune after all her tragedies—and let her keep the encyclopedia, too? As her letter shows, she can use almost anything we have to give, so each give what he can, and by the end of the week have this brave widow facing the world with new courage and able to carry on for herself along the line she so bravely is trying to follow!

Maltese Needs Home.

I have a very pretty Maltese cat that I am very anxious to find a good home for, as our landlord objects to us keeping her. I shall appreciate it very much if you would find a home for her soon.

MRS. S. R.

I am sure there will be an immediate call for Mrs. S. R.'s Maltese cat.

Longs to Be with Loved Ones.

I expect the stork about July 18 and have four little children, ages 8, 5, 3, and 2 years. My husband has been out of work for some time and I have been unable to buy clothing or bedding. The doctors at the hospital do not give me much hope of getting well, and I would like to stay at home with my loved ones, so if anything happens to me their dear faces will be the last for me to look upon, and if any of your dear readers have a spring and a mattress for a full size bed and a rug and a few sheets and pillow cases, will you kindly let me know, and I will be so happy and thankful for your kindness, for, you know, a mother's heart longs to be with her little ones.

A. S.

This plea speaks for itself. Who can help?

Place for Old Chiffonier.

Undoubtedly there is hidden away in somebody's basement an old style chiffonier. I am in need of some drawer space for the kitchen, and a chiffonier would be just what I would require. I have tried second hand stores, but the are either too expensive or will only sell the set. Would you kindly see if your readers have one they no longer have use for?

MRS. P. W.

I have registered your request and will send your address to anyone who writes that she can supply the article asked for.

Gas Irons to Spare.

I have several gas irons, and I would be glad to give one to some needy person. Do you know of any one, through your column, that is in need of same?

MRS. E. S.

I would be glad to hear from any who are interested in this offer.

Starting All Over.

"I am a young woman, the mother of three children, and expect another in a month. My husband has a job now, but was without work for many months and we have had to start all over, and need so many things that it takes every cent he earns. I'd like to have an old kimono that some one more fortunate has discarded, and anything for a new baby will be appreciated. If any one has any old nightgowns that have any wear at all left in them for a woman who takes a 38 or 40, they will certainly make me happy at a time like this.

H. E. B."

You know—we all know—there's no happiness like giving happiness. This mother doesn't ask for a great deal, but, reading between the lines, you can see she's needy and deserving.

Chance for Ambitious.

"This school gives a summer Normal course for piano teachers from June 25 to July 28. We use, to demonstrate teaching to them, a small class of children, 6 or 7 years old. The class meets downtown Mondays and Thursdays from 10 to 11. These children have, therefore, ten music lessons, with no charge. There is, of course, no possible obligation about their further study. All we ask is regularity in attendance during the five weeks. We wonder if, among your readers, there are some who would care to have their children in this little group. They must be beginners and must have a piano at home. Of course, they do merely fundamental and beginning work in ten lessons, but they get an astonishingly good foundation.

"D. P."

What a chance for ambitious little folks! And children are ambitious, you know. There's lots of heart hunger to do something and be something among the youngsters, that we grown-ups never dream of. So, submit this offer to the little fairy in your home, and see if he or she doesn't jump at it.

Come to the Rescue.

"I am badly in need of a kitchen stove, also clothing for myself, crippled son, and three little grandchildren, aged 5 and 3 years and 9 months old. I am a widow and earn livelihood for this family by doing washing. Any kind of help will be greatly appreciated.

"MRS. W. D. D."

Please, Cornerites, come to the rescue! Life is hard enough when one is poor and dependent oneself—but to be poor and have others dependent upon one—well! I am sure many will read the above and make this brave grandmother happy.

Must Get Work Soon.

"It is imperative that I get work soon, and I am badly in need of a light coat for summer wear—size 38 or 40—because my winer coat, which has seen quite a few seasons, is shabby, and will give me a poor appearance when I try to get work.

MRS. P. C."

To have confidence in oneself one must be conscious of making a good appearance. One doesn't need to have the latest thing in clothes, but garments that are whole and clean are a necessity. See that Mrs. P. C. has what she was so earnestly requests, won't you?

Poverty Acute in This Case.

"Could any of your readers help us out? We cannot afford to buy any clothing, as we are a couple of months behind in our rent, and we must try to pay or else we will be put out, so we cannot think of buying any clothes. I sew and can make over most anything. I have one girl 5 years old and one 2½ years. I wear 38 or 40. Anything that you will do for me will be appreciated.

L. H

When so many of us have little ones outgrowing their things, there's no reason, is there, why L. H. should remain in need of clothing another day, when a line to this department and a few of the things you don't need will turn anxiety to happiness.

Faces Trouble Bravely.

"My husband is paralyzed, utterly helpless, and incurable, the doctors say. I am struggling hard to keep a roof over us and buy food. It takes all my salary and I have none left for clothes, to say nothing of any comforts for him. If some generous person has a wheel chair she does not need, it would be a great blessing. My husband has to lie in bed all the time. If he had a chair he might be able to enjoy a little sunlight and fresh air, and maybe get strong enough to help himself a little. He is 80 years old. If the owner would rather not part with the chair, we could use it for awhile and then return it.

MRS. O. K."

Sickness and suffering on the part of the husband! Sweetness and bravery and gameness on the part of the wife. "My husband is paralyzed"; "with the aid of the chair he might be able to enjoy a little sunlight and fresh air and maybe get strong enough to help himself a little." O, that "maybe!" Can you resist it?

Right in Time.

"I have a small refrigerator, capacity forty pounds, to offer to any one who can use it.

MRS. H."

Will Mrs. H. get mail? We'll say she will!

Wonderful Adventures of the Dog Club

CARLO ENTERTAINS THE PUPPIES.

By RAYMOND KELLY.

CARLO was on his way to the club. He was on his way to attend a committee meeting to decide whether they should have a pink rug or a pale green one in front of the fireplace. He was in plenty of time and was strolling along in a very dignified way. Saint Bernards are always dignified, you know, even when they aren't club presidents, and it isn't dignified to hurry except, of course, when you are late for school.

Just as Carlo was passing the elm tree next to the other one where the oriole family have their summer home, Mrs. Fanny Airedale came out to meet him.

"Oh, Mr. Carlo," she exclaimed, "you're just the very person I want to see. There's a perfectly wonderful sale on down at the Woofery, and I don't want to miss it, but I couldn't think of leaving the children alone. They're only 12 weeks old, and they're just as bright as they can be, but pups will be pups, you know. You'll be glad to entertain them for a half hour, I know, and they'll be simply crazy about you. You're so big and handsome. I'll be right straight back, because I'm not going to buy anything except some puppy cakes. They're selling them three boxes for 19 cents. You'll find the little folks out in the garage. There are only the five of them; so I'm sure you won't find them the least bit of trouble," and, grabbing her basket, Mrs. Airedale started for the Woofery, while Carlo strolled toward the garage, feeling rather helpless.

All the puppies ran to meet him, and he saw at once that they were lively little fellows, and full of mischief. They snapped at his heels, and crowded against him so much that he nearly tripped. But he kept good-natured and went over beside the big closed car and lay down with his head on his paws to do some thinking. That showed how little Carlo knew about puppies, for they gave him no chance to think at all.

Little Bingo tried to chew a hole in one of the automobile tires, and when Carlo told him that the tire would explode and hurt him terribly, Bingo didn't believe him, but just laughed, as though that were the greatest joke in the world.

Flossie dragged a robe out of the car door, and she and Prince set right to work to tear it to pieces. They did get one hole torn in it before Carlo got it away from them and laid it up on the car seat out of their reach. That was hard work for Carlo, because he was very heavy and didn't like to climb any too well.

Then Pretty got up on the running board of the automobile, and jumped down onto Carlo's back, barking with excitement when she slid off and rolled on the cement floor. That was great fun for her, and so the other pups all had to try it, too. They liked the sport a great deal, but it was most unpleasant for Carlo.

"See here, little folks," said he. "Unless you can behave yourselves a little better, I shall have to report you to your mother when she comes. I don't want you to get punished, but I simply cannot let you run wild like this."

"Aw, we ain't bein' bad," Butterball answered saucily. "Mother'll just growl a little anyhow, if you do tell her. She likes us, but you're a cross old thing, and just as mean as you can be."

"See here, young man," said Carlo. "I do not intend to let you disobey me, and if you do I shall have to punish you. If there's one thing I cannot stand, it's an impudent puppy."

Butterball was quiet for a minute, but that was all. Then he did a really terrible thing. He went over and fell into a tub that was full of greasy old oil that they were saving to put on the cinder driveway to the garage. Of course, Carlo couldn't let even a naughty pup like Butterball drown; so he fished poor Butterball out of the oil, getting his own ruff and his beautiful white vest all spotted up in doing so. Carlo was very angry then, because he simply couldn't go to the club at all now, but would have to go back home and take a bath all over with dog soap. That's why he spatted Butterball with his paw.

It really didn't hurt Butterball at all, but he howled so loudly that his mother heard him clear down under the lilac bush by the blacksmith shop, where she had stopped for a social bone and a chat with some friends she had met at the Woofery.

You can just know that Mrs. Airedale didn't visit another minute after that. She grabbed her basket and hurried home as fast as she could run. When she got there, she accused Carlo of having abused her children, and got so excited that she even threatened to bite him.

"Now," said Carlo as hs started for home to take his bath, "I know what they mean when they speak of a dog's life."

Bright Sayings of the Children

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

Ruth and Perry both have new tricycles, which they enjoy riding. Perry, however, rides faster and always beats Ruth to the corner, where he bumps into her. After he had done this the other morning three times in succession Ruth called out to her mother: "Make Perry quit getting here both at once." E. L. R.

Allan had learned how to ring the front door bell and after several days of false alarms I scolded him and said that little folks must go to the rear door, the front way being just for company.

The next day the bell rang and peeking through the curtains I say the little culprit, so did not open the door.

He waited a while and then cried out: "Mother, can't you hear your company?" L. V. P.

Lucy is fond of eggs. She spent the day with her aunt, who has chickens. Fresh eggs were served for lunch, and aunt showed Lucy the chickens afterwards.

The child stepped up to a hen that was on a nest, bowed politely, saying: "Thank you, Mrs. Hen, for the nice eggs you laid for my lunch." L. S.

In early spring the children had measles, and the usual red sign was tacked near the door. After the quarantine was lifted a neighbor's child happened to put her hand where the sign had been and our son called out: "Don't touch that place. We had our measles license there." L. V. P.

Dickie was presented with a bicycle, with which he was delighted. He practiced all day. Next morning he could hardly limp down stairs.

When the maid asked him what was the matter he sat on the stair, placing his little hand underneath his leg, and replied: "O, I don't know, but can't come down, my legs hurt so hard right here where the wires are connected." L. P. R.

As I was watching the peacocks in the park one day, a little boy said: "Mother, what are those birds that are so beautifully dressed?" G. J. D.

Our family returned from a long western trip but no mention of it was made in the local column of our village paper.

Our daughter was reading items of the comings and goings of other families and asked, "Mother, why didn't we advertise ourselves when we came back?" L. V. P.

Mary Jane sat quietly for some time. When I asked the reason she replied, "Well, can't you hear my thinker working?" L. F.

I read a story to Bobbie about a grandfather who was beloved by all the children. He was old and bent, had long white whiskers, walked with a cane, and his pockets were always filled with goodies for the children.

When Bobbie's grandfather, a smooth faced, young looking man, came to visit us Bobbie refused to make friends until grandfather produced a box of candy from some unseen pocket.

Bobbie said: "Well, his looks are not grandpa, but his thinks are." L. F.

Mother was getting Frances ready for bed when suddenly she said: "Mamma, when people are in mourning do they wear black nighties, too?"

"Why, no, dear, of course not," said mother.

"Why not? Don't they feel as bad at night as they do in the daytime?" she asked. C. T.

Miriam came in with shining eyes, and dancing across the floor she exclaimed: "What do you think. Mr. Jones lady-ed me. He took off his hat when he spoke to me." M. O.

"Are you an only child?" I asked a tiny boy who was visiting a neighbor.

"O, no," he assured me, "mother's got three more of me at home." E. F. L.

New neighbors moved in next door and the children were anxious to know if they were to have new playmates. They soon found out and little brother came in, exclaiming, "Mother, it's only a two family!" Mrs. L. V. P.

A short time ago I took my nephew, Bobby, on a week-end trip. This being his first time on a train, he became very much excited and on entering the train he made this remark very loud, "Hello everybody! I'm going to Bloomington." M. V. T.

Patterns by Clotilde

1724—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38 and 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards of 44 inch material.

1726—Woman's one piece dress. Sizes 42 to 52 inches bust measure. Size 46 requires 3½ yards of 44 inch material.

1710—Woman's and misses' blouse. Sizes 16 years and 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 1¾ yards of 36 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

THE long trimming bands of pattern No. 1726 will make a full figure look more slender. It is a smart looking design and will make up equally well in one of the lovely crêpes, foulards—ratine or linen—depending largely on just when the dress is to be worn.

This should not be a difficult dress to make, but be sure and apply all the principal measures to the pattern before laying on the material. Many women may have the same bust measure, but all other measures will not correspond to the pattern, and it will be far easier to mark the alterations on the pattern than later on the dress.

The back and side fronts extend from the shoulder to the bottom of the skirt and the middle front is laid on a fold of the goods and is also in one piece.

It wouldn't be a bad idea to finish the neck with a wrong side facing and have the collar detachable. While the dress will look well made entirely of one color, it is one that can be made of two colors, and in that case will need almost no trimming. The front panel and cuffs may be made of a contrasting color to the dress, and about the waist may be worn any sort of a girdle or sash. The dress is marked for a casing at the waist line, through which an elastic is to be run. Take care not to have the elastic too tight.

Two different ways of finishing the sleeves are given with the pattern—one is long and flaring, and the other is short, and finished with turned back cuffs.

Whether the dress is made of a wash material or silk, the collar and cuffs would be very pretty made of some one of the lovely lace and net bandings that are sold in all the stores. Sometimes these bandings consist of rows of narrow Val. lace, ruffled on a foundation, and sometimes there is a combination of net and lace—any of them make up beautifully. These cuffs and collar can be mounted on narrow bands and basted in place. This will allow for the necessary washing without disturbing the dress—for, naturally, they will crush and soil more quickly than the dress.

Pattern No. 1710 is for one of those popular overblouses. It is cut in one piece, there not being any seams on the shoulders even, so nothing could be much easier to cut and make. A sash pattern comes with the blouse, and this sash is sewed to the bottom of the blouse, notches showing exactly how to set it in place. There is no end to the variety of printed crêpes, etc., shown for these blouses, and if one of these is chosen it will be pretty to finish all edges with a plain material, matching the ground color of the material. One of the plain crêpes would make up prettily, and it could be embroidered or beaded, or simply left untrimmed, binding all edges with the same, and maybe embroidering a stunning monogram on the front.

Pattern No. 1724 is a simple but smart design for an afternoon dress and is suitable for a great number of materials. There are the many kinds of crêpes, taffetas, and lovely wash materials, so it is really a matter of individual choice. Dotted organdie would make a lovely cool dress and would always look dressy.

The skirt is in one piece, is straight and gathered to the lower edge of the waist, and closes at the left side. One can have a sash of the dress or other material, although the wide ribbon sashes tied a little to the left of the front are about as pretty as anything. Or, for an organdie, one of the flower girdles would be most attractive.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Old Sweetheart's Letters.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been engaged to a young man four months. Lately he showed me some letters from an old sweetheart, saying he is only keeping them as a memory. Do you think this is fair to me, or to the old sweetheart, who is engaged, too?

"N. D."

I don't think I would raise a question about the letters at all. You cannot rob a man of memories, anyway. The more you try to separate him from them the more poignant they may become. What's the odds? At least, it indicates a tender strain of romance in his soul, doesn't it?

Call That Never Came.

"Dear Miss Blake: Do you think it proper for a girl to acknowledge the greeting of a fellow who promises to call her on the telephone and never does? R. B."

Well, I suppose the girl in such case must have exacted a promise, and that she should not have done. If that is the case, you ought to let his not calling you be just a little lesson in etiquette which you need. In any event, I would not treat the matter seriously.

Shyness on Both Sides.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have a friend four years my senior. He was introduced to me by my sister. I would like to go out with him, but he is shy and I am, too. He comes to my house sometimes and when he comes he acts real manly and nice to me. Would you advise me as to what I should do?

"LILY."

If he is shy and you are, too, that is going to make it a little hard, isn't it? But then you can, with your woman's intuition and sympathy, give a little encouragement when it is needed and perhaps make a suggestion now and then as to where you would like to go.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—The great variety possible in tennis garb has at no time been more clearly borne out to me than when I saw in the rotogravure section of a New York Sunday newspaper a photographic group of six society and moving picture men, all in tennis clothes, and all differently attired. The men were Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Jack Pickford, C. Colton Bingham, and Fairbanks' director, Raoul Walsh, a representative group of men who have much to do with the setting of our styles.

For tennis, as much as golf, riding, hunting, or other sports, has a style all its own; a simple one, it is true, but distinctive. The main idea is, of course, as it is with a costume for any sport, comfort. Some men have the idea that that is all that need be taken into consideration. But as comfort could be achieved in a pair of khaki trousers and an old torn shirt, or a pair of golf knickers, the style element must have its share of attention. For a proper tennis costume should be worn on the courts whether one is competing for the Davis cup or merely at the stage where one is proud if the ball falls somewhere in a radius of thirty yards on the opposite side of the net.

The conventional tennis outfit is an all white affair, except for the sweater or coat which is worn to the court. Also it is permissible to wear light gray flannel trousers in place of the white. White flannel knickers have occasionally been seen on courts, but they are not practical, as they are hotter, and tennis is such a strenuous affair that coolness should be sought.

For the same reason flannel trousers are warmer than the duck or cotton twill that is just as proper for tennis, but not worn as much, perhaps because the flannels are considered dressier. The flannel holds in the heat of the body, whereas the duck allows free ventilation. Also the duck slides more easily over the knees, an advantage which a sprightly tennis player will admit is an advantage. Flannel, on the other hand, is a better absorbent. Duck may be laundered, while flannel must make frequent trips to the dry cleaners. Take your choice. Of course, there is no doubt that flannels are better looking for off the court wear, and so if your tennis is more sitting on the side lines watching the others play you will probably take to the flannels and keep your tie on.

During the game a necktie is discarded, but up to the court it is preferable that one be worn. The shirt is a white sport shirt, with collar attached. Neck bands are, of course, not looked upon approvingly, for, although comfort is primarily sought, neatness also counts. Many players find it desirable to have short sleeves on their shirts. They may either be bought this way or made so by devoted wives, mothers or sisters.

Some men like to wear a white slipover sweater of rather light weight while playing, or at least during the warming up process, or to throw on immediately after finishing their game. Such sweaters were worn by four out of the six in the tennis group mentioned above, but they were all four slightly different in style. Fairbanks was wearing his inside his trousers, with a fancy belt as a finishing touch.

The natural colored camel's hair and cashmere slipover sweaters are also popular tennis accessories. They look well with white and are light in weight enough to be comfortable even while playing. Sleeveless sweaters are seen to some extent, but the popularity of this style garment is gradually dying out.

Heavy sweaters, white or colored, are quite correct. The colorful Prince of Wales sweater will be seen to a great extent, doubtless, wherever rackets are swinging. All varieties of sport coat are used to and from courts and after play. Jersey cloth is especially popular as a tennis coat, although anything in the coat line that is worn with knickers or white flannels in general is appropriate for a tennis costume.

Footwear for tennis is as varied but as characteristic as the rest of the costume. The socks are always white, but the shoes may be the plain white sneakers, white sneakers trimmed with brown leather, the leather oxford with different colored leather, or the smoked elk or horse hide laced shoe that laces down to the toe. This latter is one of the most popular and most comfortable models, as it lends support to the ankles. The professional tennis shoe is often a black kangaroo leather, extremely light in weight, with felt soles. Whatever the style of the tennis shoe is, the most important thing about it is that it have plain, heelless soles. Heels are not permitted on any courts.

Those who find it necessary to wear a hat while playing will find the duck hat with green underbrim about the most satisfactory. If it is merely a question of keeping out the glare of the sun there is a special visor affair which fastens on that will serve the purpose, and is used by tennis players.

Answers to Inquiries.

M. L.: You can wear about any color cap with a blue suit. But, of course, if the suit is a business suit, and not a sport suit, a cap is not the correct headwear to go with it.

P. J.: I advise the white oxford shirt with collar attached but not buttoned down. The smart dressers are saying farewell to the buttoned down collar. The wives will be glad, because the buttons never do stay on.

T. L. F.: White flannels are O. K. for such an event. They can be either plain or with black or colored stripes.

Public Now Prefers Vegetable Laxatives

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin affords prompt relief in a natural way

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate trial. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

THE public is constantly becoming more discriminating in its choice of things. Those subject to constipation try to learn what makes them constipated, and then avoid it. If constipation persists in spite of all their efforts they take the mildest, most easily tolerated laxative obtainable, and not a drastic physic that upsets them for days afterwards. As over 10 million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are sold a year, a large proportion of the people of this country must believe that this mild vegetable compound is the proper remedy for them, and so it is. No need to take salt waters and powders that dry up the blood; coal-tar drugs in candy form that produce skin eruptions, or calomel that salivates. These drugs are "heroic measures", over-effective, weakening and griping.

The best constipation remedy is the one that moves the bowels without shock to your system, and such a one is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, and has been satisfactorily sold for 30 years. Unlike the harsher physics it does not produce a habit, and increased doses are not required; in fact, it so trains the stomach muscles that in time medicines of all kinds can be dispensed with.

Many take a teaspoonful of Syrup Pepsin once a week as a health safeguard. Others use it only when required, as, for example, Mrs. J. W. Borroughs of Little Rock, Ark., who finds it equally valuable for herself and the children, and Mr. Enas S. Costa of Watsonville, Cal., whose family uses it regularly. Try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in constipation, biliousness, piles, headaches, sallow complexion, and to break up fevers and colds. A generous-size bottle can be had at any drug store, and it costs only about a cent a dose!

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD Morning!

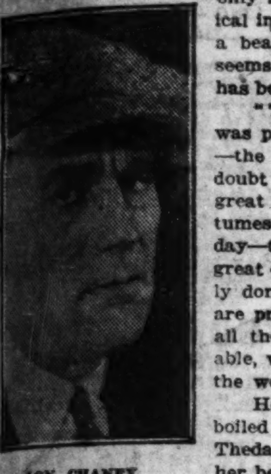
This would be a good little film to show at a revival meeting. Just at the time when evil is not only rampant but getting away with it—zowie!—along comes the San Francisco earthquake! Result: Evildoers reduced to mincemeat. Righteous and those with leanings that way not only saved but cured of all physical infirmities and left gazing over a beautiful, peaceful ocean, that seems to have swallowed all that has been chaos in their world.



LON CHANEY.

"The Shock," which, they say, was produced during the last year—the photography makes you doubt same—has nevertheless a great deal in its favor. The costumes are the costumes of another day—the day of the big fire; the great conflagration is rather warmly done, the Barbary Coast scenes are pretty thrilling and the acting all the way through is commendable, with the possible exception of the work of Christine Mayo.

Her delineation of a hard-boiled queen of the underworld is Theda-Bara-ish. Nobody minds her being tough, but she's too theatrical. She never loses herself in her part for a minute, but is Johanna at the rat hole for the director's voice and the grinding of the camera. O, well, she hasn't a great deal to do, after all.

Chaney Cast as Crook.

Mr. Chaney is the large frog in the puddle. As in "The Miracle Man," he is a sinner at the beginning of the picture, saved by grace in time for the finale. Only, in "The Shock" he is really a cripple, not the large, fraudulent article put up in a pitiful package that he is in the former film.

He is cast as a crook, at the beck and call of "Queen Anne," a lady unbelievably powerful on the Barbary Coast. Why she is, you are left to figure out for yourself. Practically the only information you glean about her from the picture is that when she was young she was sent to prison by a small town banker, whom, when she emerges, she starts out to "GET." (And you know what "GET" means, Mr. Sweeny!)

It being difficult to figure out how this at one time poor, abused girl acquires her snaky scepter, forget it, and concern yourself with Wilse Dillingham, whom she endeavors to use as her catspaw. She plants him in a sweet rural spot as a telegraph operator. Here he breathes fresh air, sees the sunshine, finds a kitten to play with, and falls in love with—the banker's daughter. O, heaven! The daughter is so sweet. Anne is so powerful! And how the birds do sing in one place and play the gat in another.

"Torn between conflicting emotions" is an old phrase, but it is the one thing Wilse IS. He tries a little diplomacy. Anne is "on."

"She greets him with a smile, but everybody who knows

Director-Husbands Outside at New Type Dinner Party

By Mildred Spain.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—The great unscreened were given a rare treat Wednesday evening at the Ambassador hotel when Corinne Griffith gave a dinner party ashine with stars of the first radiance. Miss Griffith launched a new type of dinner party—for the close-up sex only. The director-husbands were somewhere outside of the brilliant constellation.

CORINNE GRIFFITH.
[Bangs Photo.]

The guests of Miss Griffith were Mae Busch, Blanche Sweet, Theda Bara, Carmel Myers, and Eleanor Boardman. The table decorations were wreaths of Cecil Bruner roses and tall, fashionable dolls with Cytherea faces.

Miss Busch wore a dinner gown of rose chiffon trimmed with a large silver rose and bandings of ermine. A white beaded georgette evening gown was worn by Theda Bara. White gardenias were used for her hair. Miss Myers was in vivid strawberry red, and Miss Griffith wore black lace and a head piece of scarlet taffeta. Stunning Blanche Sweet chose an effective gown of orchid chiffon with undulating lines.

Quite different from the formal parties at the Ambassador are the "location" parties. It is the thing to do just now since De Mille has taken his company to Guadalupe and Harold Bell Wright is filming "When a Man's a Man" in Prescott, Ariz.

Cecil De Mille, Julia Faye, and Estelle Taylor make for hospitality at Guadalupe, a beach town with dunes of sand to give biblical atmosphere for the filming of the "Ten Commandments."

Every night there is dancing, clever vaudeville acts, and even boxing bouts in the huge mess hall. There is no formality on location, and the stars eat in the mess hall with the extras, in this instance 2,500 of them.

If you are further interested in statistics here are some gleaned at Camp De Mille. There were 500 gallons of glycerin used for tears since the beginning of the filming of the feature and 200 pounds of safety pins to hold torn clothing together.

A special train took guests to Prescott for the week-end. The locale is the exact scene of the book, which may or may not mean anything to you. We have it on the word of Harold Bell Wright that this is so.

John Bowers ordered a midnight supper from a caterer on Hollywood boulevard to be shipped to location in a compartment refrigerator. Marguerite de La Motte acted as hostess.

In Love with the Sun.

There is little else to stir the sluggish summer arteries of social life unless it is the wedding of Miss Juanita Miller, the daughter of Joaquin Miller, late Californian and poet. The ceremony was a bit unusual as the bride was perched some 200 feet above ground atop a palace set at the Goldwyn studio. The groom was the sun. Like Paphnutius, Miss Miller crouched atop a column waiting for her mating. She has been in love with the sun for some time, she said, and did not descend until the nuptials were completed.

But the queer wedding of Miss Miller is not the only thing that causes Hollywood much concern these days. Pauline Frederick has announced she will leave for London for an indefinite stay. She plans to make pictures there. Her Beverly Hills home will be closed and later sold.

Maude Fulton and her husband, Robert Ober, have bought a home in Laurel canyon and intend never—never

Ravinia Enters a New and Promising Season

By Edward Moore.

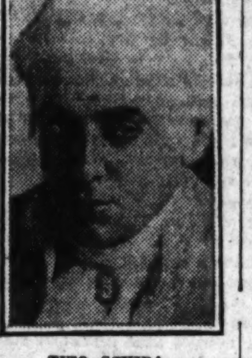
ASSUMING that nothing went amiss between the time this page was sent to press and the twilight hour of 8 on Saturday, June 23, Ravinia Opera is now in de facto existence for what Togo, the Japanese schoolboy, would probably call its dozenth season. And, still assuming that all was per schedule with the plans for opening, the report on what should have been an interesting and well sung revival of "La Traviata" will be found in one of the news pages of this issue of THE TRIBUNE.



TITO SCHIPA
as Comte des Grieux in "Manon" at Ravinia.
[Lumiere Photo.]

All of the singers involved last night will be heard again in other operas within the week ending next Saturday. Later in the season, Mr. Eckstein hints, there will be more of "La Traviata," with other assignments to principal rôles. He tried that plan of changing casts last season, and found, as this column suspected he would find, that it worked well with the public, for the excellent reason that the oldest and most familiar of the operas are ever new when the singers are placed so that they may be subjected to easy, facile comparison.

Ravinia Opera goes tonight into what Mr. Eckstein fancifully calls its "fourth linguistic dimension," with the revival of "Lohengrin"; for the opera will be sung in German—the first use of the language in the north shore's al fresco theater. When given in 1921 and again in 1922 English text was employed. Incidentally, "Lohengrin" in those seasons proved to be one of the three or four most popular works ever put on in Ravinia.

The interest of novelty tonight will center in the two feminine rôles, Elsa and Ortrud. Florence Easton, who sang many rôles in her 1919 engagement here, will be Elsa for the first time in this vicinity, although it is one of her popular parts with the Metropolitan; and Marion Telva will make her début hereabouts as Ortrud. Morgan Kingston's Lohengrin is well known here; so also is Louis d'Angelo's Henry the Fowler; Desiré Defrere's herald was heard in the Chicago Opera's experiments with the opera; and the other important part, Telramund, will be sung by Mark Oster. And no mention of previous performances of "Lohengrin" at Ravinia were fair if reference to Louis Hasselmans' conducting were omitted, especially as he is to conduct tonight's.

Another of Mr. Eckstein's 1922 experiments, that of dropping the reserved seat fee for the Monday concerts, is become usage because of its success. The experiment of last year was two-edged: not only was the fee abolished, but the "draw" of the program was enhanced by the use of the big names in the opera roster as soloists. From an average Monday audience of three hundred Mr. Eckstein was able to pack the pavilion with the combination of the Chicago Symphony orchestra in standard programs from the Orchestra hall répertoire with the principal singers and instrumentalists in special offerings.

The first of the 1923 series will be tomorrow night, with Hasselmans conducting, and with Miss Telva, Armand Tokatyan, and Jacques Gordon as soloists. Mr. Tokatyan, another of the Metropolitan's tenors, will make his Ravinia début on this occasion.

New Diva from Athens with Lauri-Volpi.

What many regard as Puccini's masterpiece, "La Bohême," will be sung on Tuesday night to bring forward two more strangers—Thalia Sabanieva, a young soprano from Greece, who is credited with a Metropolitan hit last season,

"Passing Show" Rushes In Before "Scandals"

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—They squeeze hands and speak each other fair in the meetings of the Producing Managers' association, but once the door is closed back of them and the meeting is well over business is business. George White was preparing his fifth production of "Scandals." He had, the gossip ran, adapted several novelties from foreign sources—pictures of animated bric-a-brac in which powdered ladies might be posed effectively, and the like of that.

HELEN SHIPMAN
The Soubrette of "The Passing Show of 1923."
[White Photo.]

At the same time the Messrs. Shubert were getting "The Passing Show of 1923" set for its summer run at the Winter Garden. They, too, had taken an idea here and there from foreign revues—one showing clusters of ladies hung from chandeliers, like so many draped and smiling caryatids cradled in crystal, for instance—and they were eager to be the first in New York to exhibit these novelties.

Mr. White's "Scandals" was scheduled to open the 18th, which was Monday, and "The Passing Show" was to be taken out of town to begin its regular two weeks' tryout the same week. But what happened? Suddenly and, as all good tornado stories read, without warning, the Messrs. Shubert decided to open "The Passing Show" "cold," which is to say without a preliminary warming-up in the dog towns, four days before the "Scandals" could get here. Thereby protecting its caryatids from the charge of being copies of something Mr. White had thought up.

Of course, posed females are posed females, and nothing more. The public is not, I feel sure, particular as to where it sees them. There has not been any noticeable change in ladies' shapes since first I began going to the theater, though, I believe, I just escaped the interesting period when it was the custom to compare those of the ensemble with a stable of Percheron draft animals. And some years before this they were declared to resemble the rear elevations of those quaint old carry-alls, the livery stable hacks. But by getting its summer nudes upon exhibition first the Shubert forces feel they should be credited with a beat, and, unless there is general objection, we shall so credit them.

The chandelier draperies in "The Passing Show" are at least nifty. The girls are swung out of the crystal strands like the figureheads of clipper ships. Their arms are raised, their hands grasp a silver bar above their heads, and their feet are planted on miniature platforms at the base of the decoration. Evidently their waists are encircled by steel bands from which their weight is suspended, and I trust they are strong steel bands. If ever one of them snaps, there is going to be girl spilled all over the Winter Garden stage.

The scene is modestly described as "A Souper Dansant During the Second Empire in Paris," and I suspect the tables beneath the chandeliers were set for souper and the floor arranged for dancing. I must look and see next time I go to the Garden.

And So They Are Married.

Another striking scene in this new "Passing Show," which is as huge and as handsome as any the Shuberts have staged, is that of a royal wedding at Westminster abbey. Just at the entrance Lord and Lady Bottle a' Bass, Lady Stout Guinness, and Lord Crabtree comment comically upon the arriving nobility.

"There," remarks his lordship, "is Perrin of Lea &

By Request: Some More "Best Plays"

By Sheppard Butler.

N. C. writes: "How about publishing your answers? I mean your own personal 'best plays of the season'? I'm sure we'd all enjoy it."

Strange and insatiable avidity! Haven't you had enough of lists? I should think, what with last Sunday's compilation, and Mr. Mantle with his ten best plays, and Miss Mae Tinée deftly skimming the cream from the silver sheet for your instruction once a month, the subject might be supposed to have been adequately treated.

Still, if you insist. . . . For Mr. Mantle's forthcoming book on the theatrical year (to be published in the fall by Small, Maynard & Co.—advt.) I have been required to name the ten most meritorious dramatic offerings of 1922-'23 in Chicago. Setting them down, not in any order of merit, but merely in the chronological procession of their arrival, I nominated them thus: the grand old lady of "Steve," which runs on and on at the Princess.

MRS. THOMAS WHIFFEN,

"The Circle."
"The Green Goddess."
"Six-Cylinder Love."
"A Bill of Divorcement."
"The First Year."
"Kempy."
"Captain Applejack."
"Peter Weston."
"Loyalties."
"Peter and Paula."

These, I can only say, were the ones I liked best. Shrieks of agony and bursts of ribald laughter, I know, will greet some of the selections. I shall be asked why I did not include "The Dover Road," "The Hairy Ape," and "He Who Gets Slapped." Partisans of "For All of Us" and "Two Fellows and a Girl" will make known their discontent. "Thank-U" had its votaries who will enter a protest or two. And to leave out the Moscow Art theater—there's lèse majesté.

Well, all right. I shall offer no defense. I simply do not agree with my betters about "For All of Us" and "Two Fellows and a Girl." "The Hairy Ape" and "He Who Gets Slapped," vivid experiences though they were, seemed to me oddities, something apart, amazing, fantastic monologues rather than well balanced plays. "The Dover Road," I thought, had no such sparkle as Molnar's "Peter and Paula." "Thank-U" was a matter of taste—I found "The First Year" vastly more penetrating—and, as for the Muscovites, their alien tongue, I should think, would bar them from any representative roster of superlatives.

It might make me a little uncomfortable to be questioned closely about "Six-Cylinder Love," "Captain Applejack," and "Peter Weston." None of these was a play of the first order.

But each had something to recommend it as entertainment. The McGuire comedy, for all its cheap hokum, breezed along most happily in a vein of topical humor. "Captain Applejack's" piratical second act was a perfect thing of its kind, and "Peter Weston" was made to order for the lusty histrionism bestowed upon it by Mr. Keenan and his associates.

The rest speak for themselves—capital inventions every one, I submit. Anyway, that's my list, and I am going to stick to it.

OLD RELIABLE ASSISTS AT A SCIENTIFIC OPERATION

By Harris Dickson

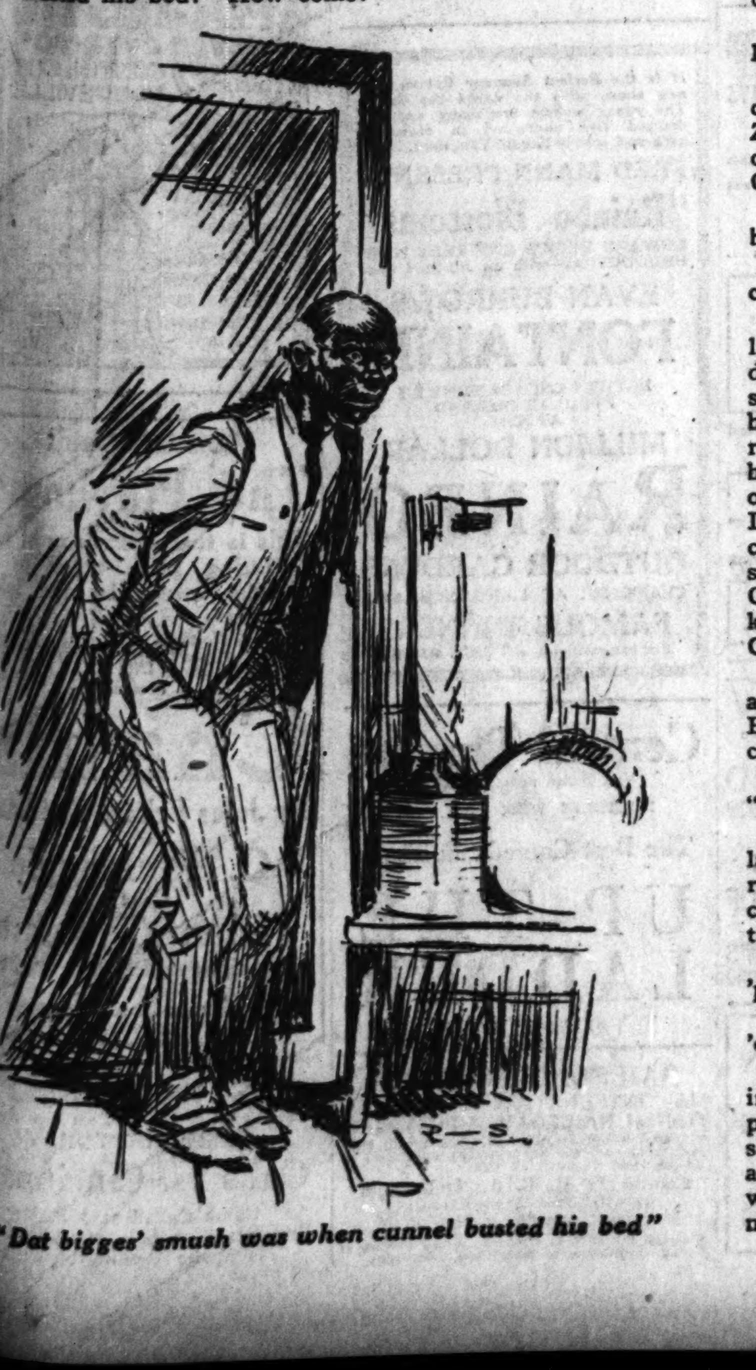
"COME here, Zack. Who's raisin' all dat hullabaloo befo' breakfast in Cunnel's room?"

The bulky black Selina reached out from her kitchen doorway and collared Old Reliable, who came sneaking down the service stair. For some time she had been wondering at the rollick of jazzy music upstairs where a strange man's voice was calling out, "One— Two— Three— Four."

"Zack," she demanded, "what sort o' devilment is you an' Cunnel carryin' on? Is you holdin' a peerade? Or splittin' stovewood?"

"Neither one." Zack kept grinning. "Sh, Seliny! Dat bigges' smash which you heared, dat was when Cunnel busted his bed."

"Busted his bed? How come?"



"Dat bigges' smush was when cunnel busted his bed"

"Broke it, turnin' summersets."

"Summersets? Is Cunnel gone plum crazy?"

"Co'se he ain't." Zack's knowledgy air pestered Selina as he expounded, "We's doin' dis sineytific."

"Siney who?"

"Sineytific. Wimmens ain't cotch on to sech words, which signify behavin' yo'self 'cordin' to de book—leastwise dat's how Cunnel 'spress hisself to me. 'Zack,' he say; 'Zack, yo' gizzard's de main thing, an' dese here muscles aroun' yo' baywindow is what operates it.' Y'onderstan', Seliny, one o' dem gizzard doctors is 'vised Cunnel to turn seben summersets in bed ev'ry mornin', jes to keep spry. Huh! Cunnel's still got six mo' summersets to turn, cause dem long legs o' his'n flopped down wid sech a wallop de fust time dat he busted de slats out o' his bed."

"Shet up, Zack. You's tellin' a pack o' lies. Den what's dat music for?"

"Dat's a tune to put pep in de Cunnel, an' make him limber."

Selina listened again to the bumping and puffing that came from Colonel Spottiswoode's bedroom, then shook old Zack like a rat. "Zack, de longer you travels wid Cunnel de bigger fool you gits, an' liar with it. Who's dat man in Cunnel's room, countin' 'One— Two— Three— Fo'?'"

"Sh! Dat's de phonygraph feller which is tellin' Cunnel how to squeeze his stummick into dem same ole pants."

"Hush yo' lyin'." Selina rattled him until his back teeth chattered, and Zack begged.

"Leggo, Seliny. Lemme 'splain. Dis tomfoolery riz up last week at de time us went bear huntin', an' Cunnel rid dat frolicsome young mule. Co'se when Cunnel was huntin' steady, he could lope a mustang for nine years widout blinkin' nary eye. But dat colt stove him up, teetotally ruinated de Cunnel. Atter me an' him limped back to Vicksburg he say, 'Now, Zack, you wait outside this drug store ontil I buys a toof brush.' An' Cunnel never 'spicioned dat I seen him hidin' a pot o' salve onderneath his coat when he came out. Den us 'rived home, an' I cotch him 'plyin' dat salve whar de saddle done galded him. Lordee, Seliny, de Cunnel cussed at me scan'alous for buttin' in on him unbeknownst. He sho did go democratic, 'Git out o' here, Zack. Can't you see I'm busy readin' in a book?'

"Nacherly I got out sudden, 'cause he was raw an' I didn't aim to rile him no mo'; an' never let on concernin' de salve. But dat's how come he ack so fretful all dis week—Cunnel can't set easy, no kinder way he tries."

"Is dat what ail him?" Selina's fat sides shook like jelly. "Is dat it?"

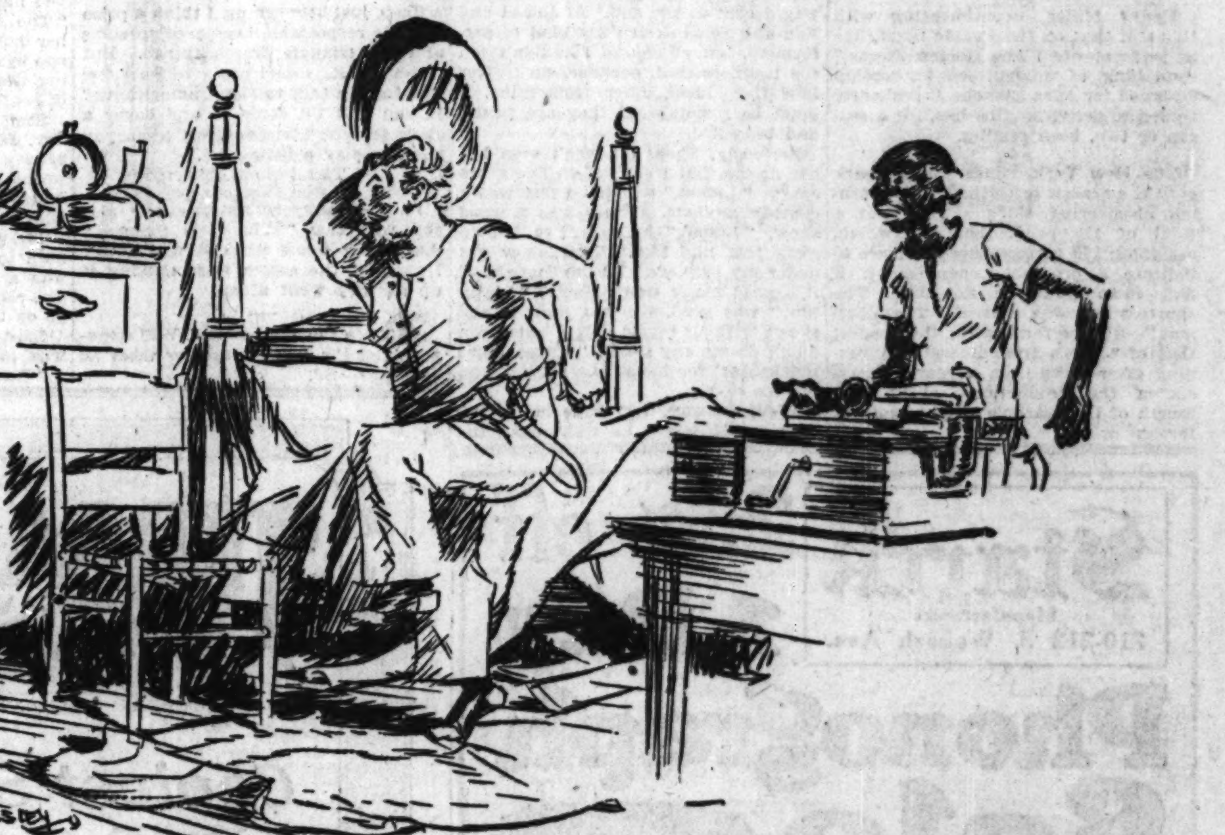
"Taint nothin' else," Zack whispered confidentially. "An' last night Cunnel remarks to me, jesso, 'Zack, I used to ride anything that had fo' legs. Now I done got so soft I can't ride dis rockin' chair. Don't you think it's time for me to take some regular exercise?'

"'It'd do you a heap o' good to push dat lawn mower,' I 'plies back, 'cause I sho craves help in cuttin' his big yard.

"'No, Zack, I aims to do dis sineytific'—which means 'cordin' to de book, as I forestated.

"Dat's how come when I slips in Cunnel's room dis mornin' I finds him settin' on de edge of his bed, studyin' some pictures of mens bendin' back'ards, an' makin' all kinds o' sineytific motions. 'Look at dese, Zack,' he p'ints his finger an' say, 'dis 'pears sensible to me. An' de music which goes wid it makes you cornduck yo' self lively.' Den I took notice dat Cunnel had done sot de phonygraph on his table,



"Do like this, Zack, it'll give you a fine appetite."

an' tries not to grin whilst he walks kinder spraddle-legged on 'count o' dat galded place. 'Zack,' he says; 'fetch de tape line. Now measure my girth. *Forty-five! Gee*rusalem! Dat ain't measurin' a white man; dat's surveyin' a plantation, I got to sweat off three or fo' feet.' 'Hope you does, suh,' I 'grees; ''cause I can't wear yo' ole pants no mo.'

"'Never mind, Zack,' he smiles; 'dey'll fit you agin. Atter I takes six doses o' dis exercise, I'll be slim enough to set down on a dime, an' have a nickel left. You better foller dis music wid me; it'll put some meat on dem skinny bones o' yourn.'

"'Cunnel,' I 'quires, 'what kinder tune is dis which makes white folks git slim an' makes niggers git fat?' ''Taint no question o' color,' he snickers back. 'Me an' you is bofe abnummal. Exercise evens us up. 'Sides dat, it'll give you a fine appetite.'

"'But, Cunnel, I don't need no mo' appetite. What I 'zires is plenty of rations.' 'Oh, be a spote,' he say. 'Shuck yo' clo'es!'

"De Cunnel laughed a heap whilst he stuck his legs through dem foolish little B. V. D.'s. An', Seliny, I'm speakin' gospel troof, nothin' couldn't pacify dat white man ontil I stripped plum down to my drawers, me black as I is, an' him pinker'n a spanked baby. 'Now start de music,' he say; 'an' do jest like me. Dis fust exercise teaches you to draw yo' breff. Ready?'

"Wid dat he teched off the phonygraph, an' dere was a feller inside which called out 'One-Two-Three-Fo'.'

"Fust de Cunnel doubled his fists an' stuck 'em onder each arm; den he rared back his head an' 'peared to ketch sight o' sump'n on de ceilin'; but I couldn't see nothin' 'cept dat broke place where de sleet busted through. I kept lookin' at dat ontil de Cunnel say, 'Here Zack; you done fell behine.' 'But, Cunnel,' I say, 'you oughter have dat hole patched up. I'll go right now an' fetch de plasterer.' Wid dat I grabs my breeches, but Cunnel stops me, 'Zack, put down dem pants, an' play de string out.'

"At dat time Cunnel kept jumpin' up on his toes an' squattin' down so brief dat he tore his B. V. D.'s 'Here, Zack,' he hollers, 'stop dat music. It's too frisky.' 'Glad to do so, suh.' I was plum out o' breff.

"But no sooner did Cunnel git on some mo' clo'es dan he sot in agin, wuss'n ever, reached down wid one hand to scratch his knee, like de man in de book, den wroppin' his left hand way roun' his head to scratch his right ear. 'One-Two-Three-Fo', he say. 'Do like dis, Zack, it'll give you a fine appetite.'

"Seliny, in all you' born days, you never seed nothin' did so sineytific, sech puffin' an' a snortin' an' a sweatin', ontil I snatches my pants an' 'scapes outer de door. 'Hold on, Zack,' Cunnel say. 'Less do dis all over agin.'

"Not me,' says I. 'I'll jest go out in de front yard an' push dat lawn mower whilst I'm restin'.' Seliny, ain't it comercal how niggers is always hustlin' for grub, an' white folks is hustlin' for appetite?"

Seeing the Critics as Others See 'Em; News of the Stage

Hecht and Maxwell Bodenheim preside to the edification of all and sundry. Kindly and informative persons, Messrs. Hecht and Bodenheim essay to rend the veil from about certain persons of mystery—among them those who sit and wait in the theaters. Have a sample:

ASHTON STEVENS.

He dresses like a Plot. He talks like a Plot. A continual air of excitement, suspense, and intrigue hovers about him. One feels instinctively on eying Stevens that here is a man perfectly attired to commit a fashionable afternoon murder, avenge a wronged woman, or step forward and announce himself as Tommy O'Connor. Stevens is an honest Plot. No one but an honest man would dare to wear wing collars and spats.

CHARLES COLLINS.

The sort of person a clever policeman usually arrests on suspicion. He has a disdainful and insidious face. He is, as a matter of fact, a rather fair and honest gentleman. But . . . he suffers from a nostalgia for his handsome youth and seems to have arrived at the conclusion that since he can no longer with any degree of conviction play the ukulele of a sub-deb's moonlit front porch, nothing is really worth while.

SHEPPARD BUTLER.

He seems always, regardless of what he is wearing, to be dressed in an old-fashioned Tuxedo. When he leaves the theater auditorium between acts he reminds one of a chief mourner slipping out of the parlor after the quartet has rendered the second verse of "Nearer My God to Thee" for a quiet nip in the hallway. To a casual acquaintance Mr. Butler looks like a critic invented by the Drama League.

O. L. HALL.

The first man I ever saw with a pair of horn-rimmed spectacles. And the first man I ever heard mention snails as things to be eaten. Doc Hall looks like one of those amiable but extinct pedagogues who used to invent perpetual motion machines. Curiously, I can only recall the good doctor's face as having two dimensions. I never remember having seen the back of his head.

Or, seeking knowledge of these esoteric matters, you may care to be guided to an article in the current Theatre Magazine entitled "Outside the Vicious Circle." "I do not know," it will tell you, "how vicious or how virtuous are the reviewers who just now adorn our theaters. This I do know, though: that, despite their fluency, they fret us very often by their flightiness. The pity is they are much too self-satisfied, too eager to show off their own agility, too plainly cocksure of themselves." And more of the same.

It's pretty hard to keep things secret.

Gossip of Plays and Players.

The indefatigable Owen Davis announces the completion of another play, called, at present, "Fires of Home," and having to do with the affairs of a well-to-do family living in the suburbs of New York. This, he says, fulfills his plan for a trilogy of dramas dealing with American life and character, the first two of the series being "The Detour" and "Icebound." "The Detour" has been seen, though not by many, in Chicago. "Icebound," winner of this year's Pulitzer prize, will come next season.

Somerset Maugham will invite attention in the fall to a new play of his devising entitled "The Camel's Back." Kenneth Douglas, according to present plans, will have the leading rôle.

Henry Miller, experimenting with this and that on the Pacific coast, has in performance "The Golden Fleece," something of unidentified authorship designed for Miss Blanche Bates' early return to activity. She has, for a season or two, been resting.

The New York Times glances back over the season in Gotham the morning, discovering, since a year ago, a total of 198 productions, of which, assuming 100 performances or more to indicate a profitable engagement, it finds 43 to have been successful. The shortest run was that of "The Doormat"—five performances; the longest that of "Abie's Irish Rose," still running after more than a year. Forty-six of the productions, about one-fourth of the season's output, were of foreign origin.

HELP! HELP!

HAMMOND, Ind., June 21.—[To the Dramatic Editor.]—Out in this industrial district, where we make pickles and pianos for the hungry and musical, a drama league has sprung up. Contrary to the popular belief that we are a hard boiled outfit and play tiddlywinks with manhole covers, the league is a thriving organization. At first I was sort of indifferent to the new society, but after I covered a meeting for the paper and saw how young and beautiful the leaguers were they couldn't keep me out.

It pained me to learn that "Lightnin'" was hoakum and "Thank U" a bag of theatrical tricks. Folks aren't supposed to leave a show house happy and contented. Well, anyway, at each meeting of the league one of the young and beautiful members reads a play and I enjoy it immensely. Not so much the play, y'understand, but watching them read it.

Fact is, Shep, I'm not very strong for the drama, but if I must watch a bunch of actors who can't sing or dance I want things to turn out half way decent at the end. Al Jolson and Van and Schenck are my kind of performers, but of course I couldn't tell the leaguers that, because, no matter how their ideas differ from mine, it must be remembered they are young and beautiful.

Seriously, Shep, I haven't seen but one drama that I enjoyed in five years except "Liliom," which I guess was a comedy anyhow. There was a good show, "Liliom," because I've known guys just like him. That show got under my skin, and I have thought of it a good many times since. "Lightnin'" was good, too, but most of the shows without music that I have seen didn't do me any good. "Under False Pretenses," for instance. Funny, yes, but too sexy.

Well, anyway, I've gone in for the drama and might as well make the most of it. Went over to the public library and told the librarian I wanted a book of plays. She looked at me kinda funny and said I'd find them in the last case in the fifth tier, and I picked out a book by Bernard Shaw. Now, there's a fellow with a kick to his stuff. But he don't take the drama serious worth a cent. If I get him right, he's kidding it all the time. Seems as though he writes a play and says to himself, "Now, act that if you can." Next book of plays I tried to read put me to sleep. So there you are.

Shep, I'm in a fine fix. I'm supposed to make a talk to the drama league about plays I've seen. What'll I tell 'em? I won't dare say that Joe Cook gives me a bigger run for my money than a three-act drama on divorce. I can't say that most of the drammer I've seen gave me the fidgets because some woman went wrong and they talked about it for three acts. When a lady goes wrong I think it should be her own business. Why set there like a lot of morons in a divorce court to hear all the lurid details and find out what the husband is going to do about it?

Shep, just between us, I think a prize fight is respectable compared to some of these triangle drama things. But I'm in for it. Could you give me a few tips for my talk to the drama league? If you will I'll come in and cover a show for you some evening when you want to play a little stud.

THE POLICE REPORTER,
Care Hammond, Ind., Times.

P. S.—I suppose I'm the only person who saw "Who Gets Slapped" that didn't know what it was about. I thought the actors were making it up as they went along.

This is a touching appeal. Will somebody tell the Police Reporter what he can say?—Ed.

"Passing Show" Crowds Itself in Before 'Scandals'

Perrin. Isn't he getting fat? I saw him the other day breaking ground for his fifth chin."

"And there," observes her ladyship, "is the dear queen. I always know her by her hats."

"And I do believe," chips in Lord Crabtree, "that she has forgotten her umbrella. She so seldom forgets her umbrella."

I think it is during this scene, too, that one of the social commenters remarks that "All marriages are happy; it is the living together afterward that raises hell." And, a moment later, "It's divorce that keeps women in circulation."

Past this preliminary jocularity the scene shifts to the interior of the abbey, and here is the annual fashion show staged with a different setting, all the stately and slightly bulging show girls arriving singly, silhouetted against a black velvet drop and displaying the usual quarter million in the newer spring creations.

There are dozens of other scenes—one impressive picture of a gathering of French revolutionists in, it may be, the Place Vendôme, which serves as a background for a stirring number entitled "Aux Armes"—and the specialists are active and good.

The newest and the most likable of the new faces is that of Joan Hay, strawberry blonde as to type, most gracious as to presence, and possessed of a good singing voice. She has a number, called "The Ball Begins," which is a pleasant melody. Joan hails from London.

Walter Woolf is the tenor. George Hassell, George Jessel, Barnett Parker, and Roy Cummings the comics, Miss Hay, Louise Dose, and Vera Ross the prima donnas, Helen Shipman the soubrette, and Josephine Drake the stylish stout of the company.

"Living Curtain" Chief Novelty.

This week young Mr. White's "Scandals" arrived and revealed the cause of his rivals' anxiety to be first on the scene. There are, in the two shows, probably half a dozen continental music hall features that are duplicates. But Mr. White, having had his in action longer, has the better of the argument, in that, of the two productions, his is the more finished.

The principal scenic novelty is a so-called "living curtain." On this a half dozen naked ladies, filling in the picture spaces left by an artist who substituted models to save paint, ride up and down between the fly galleries and the stage floor, filling the eyes of the wearied merchants and their curious wives with startled looks. They are discreetly screened in the various grasses of the fields and the countryside, these undraped ladies, and the grasses will probably save them from arrest, however little protection they may be from the stage drafts.

Otherwise the "Scandals" is easily the most expensive of the White series, a gorgeous burlesque that is common enough as to tone, goodness knows, and rough in humor, but still a striking and frequently an amusing show.

It is also studded with those richly costumed incidents, in one of which a singing couple, purchasing jewels for the lady's trousseau, observe the chorus as it emerges from a huge jewel case representing rings and bracelets, coronets, lavalliers, and strings of pearls. A handsome copy of a similar scene in the first Music Box revue and, though smaller, almost as handsome.

Arrival of Joan.

I will tell you the story as it was told to me, and you may make what you like of it. Ina Claire was playing "The Awful Truth" in Seattle. Near her hotel was a coöperative tea shop run by a group of girls who were working their way through the University of Seattle.

Stopping in the shop for tea one day, Miss Claire was struck by the beauty of the young woman who waited upon her. Being struck, Miss Claire also became inquisitive. And what she found out was this:

The girl was Joan Gardner. She was born in Oklahoma twenty years ago, was a junior at the university, and, like all pretty girls, was just dying to go on the stage.

That night Miss Claire sent this wire to Florenz Ziegfeld:

"Have discovered new beauty stop, looks like Julia Lydig Hoyt probably looked at age 18 stop, simply stunning stop, will you put her in Follies if I bring her to New York?"

To which Mr. Ziegfeld replied, also by wire, that he had perfect faith in Miss Claire's judgment stop, and would she please bring Joan to see him stop.

Better Than College.

Last week Miss Claire, having closed her tour in "The Awful Truth" at Buffalo the Saturday before, arrived in town, and with her was Joan Gardner. The next day, having powdered Joan's nose and just brushed her lips with rouge, Miss Claire took her protegé to the Ziegfeld offices and two hours later Joan had her name attached to a contract and had been flashlighted by an admiring photographer. Which is the way it happens now and then.

Miss Gardner declares that she thinks such an opportunity is not one she could afford to overlook, even if she does lose the university degree she would have earned next year. Anyway, she's here, and happy. And she goes into the summer edition of the Ziegfeld show next week.

The New Play

OPENING NEXT SUNDAY.

"Dangerous People" [Cort]—William Courtenay in a new crook comedy by Oliver White, having to do with a bank, stolen money, a noble and misunderstood hero, and various romantic adventures in town and country. The piece has been in rehearsal here for several weeks and aspires to stay out the summer. Mr. Courtenay's assistants in the cast will be George Parsons, Miss Virginia Hammond, and Pierre Watkin, lately of "The Voice," and Miss Frances Howard, last seen here as the energetic flapper in Booth Tarkington's "The Intimate Strangers."

He finds the secret panel and endea- to steal the papers. Anne is on!

He does his best to induce the bank-'s smug fiancée, who is taller, to ch them for him. Anne is on!

How prison walls ever held Anne, with her remarkable gifts of divina-, her Clara Phillipsian prowess, her devastating eye, strikes one as remarkable while the reels roll on.

Things get so bad they couldn't possibly be any worse without a national calamity of some sort—so right then the director, being on to his job, rings in the Big Fire. The collapse of the Barbary den where Anne is at that moment holding forth disposes of her finally, and apparently completely. At least, she is not seen again during the picture.

If you want to be fussy—and the day is hot—"The Shock" will probably fill the Kick Korner to overflowing. But, if the temperature pleaseth, and you are in an equable state of mind, you will no doubt generously overlook a number of flaws and admit that, at least, the work of Mr. Chaney and Miss Valli is beyond reproach.

Speaking of shocks makes me thing to inquire—how's your sweet corn coming on?

No—don't know any other jokes like that. After that there AREN'T any more.

ASK ME! ASK ME! ASK ME!

MILDRED S.: You're one, too, quoth she, shyly. Eugene O'Brien is not married. The rumor you say you have heard I should immediately classify in my bunk files, if I were you. Reckon "Rudy" will come back to you some time. Nothing to feel guilty about. It's nice to have time taken up by you.

VIC: In "The Bright Shawl" the "exquisite creature who tried to vamp the hero's best friend" was La Pilar, played by Jetta Gondal. Yes, Leatrice Joy's mouth is a delight the way it turns up at the corners. You're a fan, all right, aren't you! See, I called you by the name you requested which you said would be a sure sign I liked you. Come again.

ELEANORE: Thanks for your pleasant words to Mrs. Cunningham and myself. Regarding "Belladonna," it didn't seem to me that sin was made attractive. I don't think the heroine had—or seemed to have—a really happy moment during the entire picture. Moments of abandonment, perhaps—but certainly never one of real contentment—at least, while she was sinning. I wouldn't worry about how it will affect the children. They'll probably only be moved to ask: "Is the tiger going to eat the lady, mamma?"

INQUIRING CAMERAMAN: Unless you have a whiz of a reputation or references from some big producing company the chances of your obtaining a position as a cameraman in California, especially during the summer months, are slim. The lowest salary paid is about $45 a week. Sometimes the highest is not over $200. Sometimes, however, a genius of the lens has been known to command $1,000, but he doesn't for long, as they put him in a glass case after the first week or so and show him to visitors from Main street.

Husbands Outside at This Party of Movie Stars

to leave Hollywood. Andree Lafayette would not leave it, she says, even for that so-dear Paris, were her mother and sisters not there. Miss Lafayette will return some time in August.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Dowling have left for Catalina island to celebrate their twenty-ninth wedding anniversary. They were in vaudeville together before coming to Hollywood. Mr. Dowling is best remembered as the "Miracle Man."

Word has come from New York that Elinor Glyn is on her way to Culver City and the Goldwyn studios, where she is to continue writing originals for the screen. In London recently Mme. Glyn expressed delight at the way they filmed her story of Hollywood life.

"Excellent," she cried. "Where else could one see gorgeous living rooms opening on to the very streets? And where but in Hollywood would a colored cook walk among the guests and announce that dinner had been cooking long enough and could now be served." And where, Mme. Glyn said, but in Hollywood, would they read, "One Hour."

Rosemary Theby had her 500th film characterization celebrated by a dinner given at the Metro studio. Miss Theby has finished the part of an adventuress, the Countess Olga Loschek, in "Long Live the King," a Jackie Coogan feature. Members of the cast were present. Jackie gave Miss Theby a big birthday kiss.

Marie Prevost and her mother have left for Del Monte, where Miss Prevost can revert to her bathing beach days on the sands.

KICK KORNER FOR MOVIE FANS

Its Object—Objection Speaks Up for Harold.

Dear Miss Cunningham: I notice your criticism of Harold Lloyd. You speak of his vulgarities. You are the first person I ever heard say that Harold Lloyd is vulgar. Everyone speaks of him as a clean-cut fellow with good clean comedies. I think you must be letting your imagination work when looking at his pictures as anyone with a clean mind could certainly see nothing but clean comedy in his pictures. Some are not interesting—but vulgar, never. A great many comedians are vulgar—Charlie Chaplin, for example. Possibly you admire Fatty Arbuckle's slapstick comedy. K. F. T.

Limit to Patience.

Dear Miss Tinée: I never thought I would bother you with any of my ravings, but when some poor little brainless flapper comes along and says Tom Meighan is a stick, has no personality, etc., I can contain myself no longer—I have to put my feelings on paper. And she says Douglas Fairbanks is only a jumping jack. My two favorites! Ye gods!

If Tom Meighan has no personality, then who has? He's wonderful. I never miss one of his pictures, and no matter how poor the story, Tom always turns the trick. My husband and most of the men I know, as well as the women, all love Tom, and Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood" and "The Three Musketeers." And she raves about Rodolf Valentino! O, well, she's probably too young or too giddy to recognize good acting or personality when she sees them.

I love your column—turn to it first thing every morning, and on Sunday I have to have it before breakfast as an appetizer. G. H. N.

[Editor's note: And some people say it takes their appetite away.]

Ravinia Enters New Season of Great Promise

and Lauri-Volpi, another tenor from that institution. As has been explained in THE TRIBUNE, Miss Sabanieva's status at Ravinia is that of "guest"; for she was stopped at the waterfront and engaged to come long enough to preserve the general outline of Mr. Eckstein's plans intact until Elizabeth Rethberg arrives.

"Luck was with me," explains the impresario, "although I prefer to run opera on a basis of forethought and preparation. An error in the transcription of a cablegram sent me high in the air, and when I again reached earth it was to prevent Miss Sabanieva from reaching the open sea." Margery Maxwell—"of Ours," as our forefathers would have said—will be the Musetta of this revival, and Rothier, Vincente Ballester (making his first appearance of the season with a fine 1922 record to his credit), D'Angelo, and Defrere will also take part.

Wednesday night will again find Miss Pareto and Schipa together, she as Lucia and he as Edgardo, in the most popular of Donizetti's sixty-seven operas; and, by the way of doing something else for the debutants, Mr. Eckstein will send the well beloved Virgilio Lazzari forward as Raymondo. Papi will conduct both "La Bohême" and "Lucia," needless to add.

Return of Bourskaya.

Doubtless more opera-goers recall the night of Ina Bourskaya's Ravinia debut, last July, than any other single occasion in the history of Ravinia opera; for not only was the pavilion packed to the last inch of standing room, but as many persons as would have filled it twice again were turned away. She was a "guest" then, limited in her number of appearances to the two rôles she knew in languages other than Russian—Carmen and Amneris. She returns on Thursday night as an all-season member of the company, and with no nonsense to the effect that she should be singing rôles written for high soprano. Carmen will be her first rôle; and she comes to sing it with the added certitude of having made one of last winter's outstanding successes in the part when she effected her debut in the Metropolitan.

The gifted Russian will have with her Mr. Kingston, Mr. Ballester, Mr. Rothier, and another debutante, Josephine Lucchese; and, for the sake of a mild variety, we state categorically that she is not from the Metropolitan. She is described as young, as the possessor of a considerable répertoire, and as a soprano who turned last season's American trip of the San Carlo company into a tourney of triumph for Miss Lucchese. She will be Micaela on Thursday.

Whether "La Bohême" be Puccini's masterpiece is, perhaps, academic; but it is certain that, so far as the U. S. A. is concerned, "Madama Butterfly" is his most popular work; and this will be given on Friday night, with Miss Easton returning to the rôle in which she made her American debut under Col. Savage. Lauri-Volpi will take his second part at Ravinia in Pinkerton; the trying, tricky rôle of Suzuki will go to Miss Telva; and there will be a new Sharpless, also, in Mr. Ballester, "with Papi up," as they say where there's horse racing.

Massenet's "Manon," for the last night of the week, will have Miss Sabanieva as the latest of a long line of young women who have been in the name part since the long ago days when Sybil Sanderson captured Paris and New York as the singer of the fecund Frenchman's good music. Schipa will be Des Grieux—a rôle he sings so well that his own Italy adores him in it, although partial to the other Manon opera—that by Puccini. Rothier, as the elder Des Grieux, will repeat one of his admired impersonations. Mr. Hasselmans will conduct "Carmen" and "Manon."

The series of ten concerts for the children will be started Thursday afternoon, with Jacques Gordon conducting. The "popular" series will start Saturday afternoon and the "favorites" series today.

Concerning a Hadley Opera.

Consideration of American opera took on a new bit of interest by the receipt the other day of Henry Hadley's "Cleopatra's Night," a work that would seem to have more of the elements of what an opera score ought to have than any American piece that has turned up yet. It was sung for two seasons at the Metropolitan, and it looks on paper as though it deserves considerably more seasons.

Those who attended the Diaghileff Ballet Russe performances a few years ago will remember a colorful Cleopatra episode done in terms of the dance. It is precisely this episode that Alice L. Pollock, the present librettist, has put into words and to which Mr. Hadley has written music. Both have done well. The story is real drama, swiftly moving, logical, exciting, and climactic; the music has color and force. There is a first class ballet and some love music for tenor and soprano that blends melody and drama excellently.

The piece is short, with such economy of material that it extends through two acts. Another work would have to be coupled with it. In this connection, why not Gustav Holst's "A Perfect Fool"? This is a one act opera whose performances in London indicate that it has not only a high rating as satire, which may or may not be important for performing considerations, but as music, which is always important. It would seem to be a good deal of a hit.

There is only one trouble with the Hadley work as at present published: Its libretto has been translated into French, which raises great temptations to those that give opera. For a foreign language is inevitably more poetic and more charming than English—if you are inclined to believe the opera people.

Here and There in Music.

Twenty performances of opera by the Wagnerian Opera company is scheduled for Chicago before the musical season fairly gets under way next fall. This is the organization that played the east last season but did not get as far as Chicago. It will have the addition when it comes here of Josef Stransky's new State Symphony orchestra. Eduard Moericke and Ernest Knoch will be the directors for the "Ring," "The Flying Dutchman," "Lohengrin," and "Tannhäuser," with Mr. Stransky as guest conductor in "Die Meistersinger" and Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro." Oct. 28 is the time of the first performance, and the Studebaker theater the place. The company will be here two weeks. Rachel Busey Kinsolving will have charge of the Chicago season.

While recital events generally are taking a layoff during the heated term the University of Chicago continues. Paul Althouse and Arthur Middleton are announced at Mandel hall for next Friday night. Later in the summer there will be joint appearances by Joseph Bobrovitch, tenor, and Bogumil Sykora, cellist; Dicie Howell, soprano, and Jacques Gordon, violinist, and, as a final event, Mina Hager, contralto, and Themy Georgi, tenor.

The English Grand Opera Choral will sing selections from "Aida," "Pagliacci," and "Samson and Delilah" in the lounge of the Woman's City club, 1741 Stevens building, this afternoon. Mrs. George M. Shedron, soprano, will be the soloist.

Germany keeps the operatic fires burning by announcing that the sketch of an opera by Tschaikowsky has been found in Berlin. It is called "Peter," and will be completed by Wilhelm Kleefeld. Eugen D'Albert's new "Mareike von Rymweken," founded on a Flemish legend, will have its first staging at Hamburg in October.

Australia must be the ideal land of the press agent. Jean Gerardy, the French cellist, has been playing there, and one reads that "the listener was in a sunlit, walled garden, murmurous with bees, fragrant of honeyful flowers. There were peaches ripening against the wall, and in the shadowy distance there was the tinkle of a playing fountain." It is also said that his Stradivarius cello is worth $50,000, that Kubelik's violin cost $70,000, and that Arnold Foldesy paid $400,000 for his cello.

Gustav Holst, who came over from England this spring to hear some of his own music at the Ann Arbor music festival, can have, so they say, either of two positions if he desires. One is the directorship of the music school at Ann Arbor, left vacant a year ago by the retirement of Dr. A. A. Stanley; the other is a connection with the Eastman school at Rochester, N. Y. But they also say that he desires neither one nor the other.

Giovanni Gennaro, tenor, will give a song recital at Kimball hall this afternoon. He will be assisted by Ethel Ewert, coloratura soprano; Beatrice Anderson, dramatic soprano, and the Campanini Musical club.

AN ALLURING CARMEN

INA BOURSKAYA.

When she appeared as Carmen at Ravinia last summer people said that she was the most fascinating gypsy of many years. The verdict was repeated at the Auditorium, and still later at the New York Metropolitan. She will sing the rôle again Thursday night, her first appearance of the new Ravinia season.

What you should know about Refrigeration

That the multiplication of germ life may be entirely eliminated at a temperature of 48 degrees.

The Bohn Syphon produces a temperature of 42 degrees—10 degrees above freezing.

The entire elimination of moisture as effected by the use of the Bohn Syphon will keep foods indefinitely; berries and fruit may be kept perfectly for days.

It is a known fact that crevices and unrounded corners are insanitary and difficult to clean. Our food compartment linings are of porcelain with rounded corners—free from joints or crevices.

The better insulation is the material producing and maintaining the greatest number of non-circulating air cells—so constructed as to eliminate sagging or settling.

Flaxlinum—our insulation—is used the country over for house insulation, floor deadening, refrigerator car insulation, and is one of the features that made the name Bohn a synonym for economical refrigeration.

Birds

He rises splashing.

SIR BLACK CAP WHITE WINGS.

WITH measured beat of wings he flies, his white feathers gleaming bronze-like in the golden light of sunset. The air over the water is clear and raw and the waves are purple and ultramarine. He heads into the wind. His eyes search the heaving waves this way and that. See his jet black crown, as black as though his white feathers had been daubed with soot. He is a tern. Look! He sees something. Down he dives into the water after it, and rises, splashing, with a bite.

CHEMISTRY

ICE A COMPOUND OF WATER.

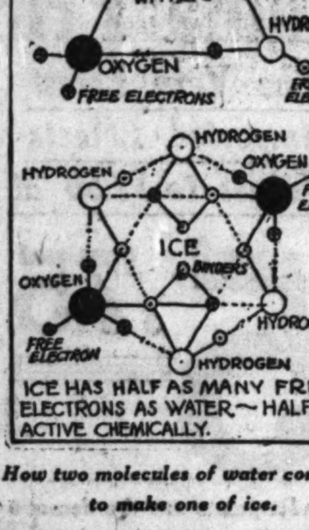
CHEMISTS think that whenever a substance changes its physical state it also changes its chemical nature. They point out that the most violent poisons become instantly harmless if they can be rendered insoluble. They say that where a molecular state is altered, the chemical state is radically changed, too. For proof of this they point to ice and water.

Water is a compound of oxygen and hydrogen. Its formula is H2O, which means that each atom of oxygen holds two atoms of hydrogen. Moreover, the hydrogens have an affinity for each other and stick together. This gives the water molecule the shape of a triangle, with electrons on the corners, and explains its unusual stability and solvent power.

Ice crystallizes in six sided plates, as every one knows who has looked at snowflakes. This gives the clew. X-Rays show that ice molecules are hexagons. Each of them is made of two triangular water molecules twined together into a six pointed star. The free electrons in water are here bound tightly to each other. Ice, then, has a formula H4O2, and it is a species of soft rock.

The sizes of these star shaped molecules are known. They are measured in angstroms, the unit for exceedingly minute objects. An angstrom is one ten-millionth of a millimeter, or one 25-millionth of an inch long. An ice molecule is 4.52 angstroms high and 7.32 angstroms across.



How two molecules of water combine to make one of ice.

When two molecules of water combine to make one molecule of ice, half of their free electrons enter into the new molecule to hold it together.

Their grip is not strong, which accounts for the ease with which ice melts. The other half of the electrons remain in the external field, and give ice the power to combine directly with a few strong chemicals.

Kick Korner for the Movie Fans

Its Object—Objection Frank and Fearless.

Dear Miss Cunningham: Miss Tinée was queen of kickers, Miss Cunningham, but you surely ran her a close third. Take it from me!

Mae Murray has the same effect on me as mommer scraping a granite pan after dinner. Ouch!

Katherine Macdonald is a beautiful model—as an actress. Jack Holt, Leatrice Joy, Cullen Landis, Buddy Messenger, Agnes Ayres, and Theodore Roberts make any picture they're in.

Dorothy Gish and Richard Barthelmess are both artists in every sense of the word. Their performances in "Fury" and "The Bright Shawl" prove it.
M. B.

Quite a Shock.

Editor of The Tribune: I have read the so-called "review" of Ines Cunningham on Harold Lloyd's "Safety Last" in which she dismisses the picture by admitting her phobia of high places and saying that she closed her eyes. I am not even interested in Harold Lloyd, but that the W. G. N. should so lightly dismiss what is undoubtedly the funniest picture ever screened is quite a shock. I saw this film weeks ago in Detroit and waxed enthusiastic over it to my friends. I looked forward to a real review by THE TRIBUNE, and now, to find it dismissed with a wave of the hand, arouses a sense of injustice.
A. L. M.

Naughty, Naughty—Leggo That Ear!

My dear Miss Tinée: Once upon a time there was a young lady writing the movie news for THE TRIBUNE and she was very clever, a trifle cynical now and then, but the good ones were given a good turn and the bad ones let down easy.

But now, this lady has become, oh, so cynical that a hard working picture had as much chance as our last mayor. Your writeup on Charles Chaplin's picture struck me as a personal prejudice, so to convince myself I went down to see it, and the conclusion to your writeup was . . . You probably have seen a comic strip entitled, "Aw, Give a Guy a Chance." That's what I thought of your write-up.
G. A. R.

Editor's Note: G-r-r-r!

Register for Thomas Meighan.

Dear Miss Tinée: In response to the razor tongued "Deadly Dragoons," I would like to say, isn't it a blessing that we do not all think alike? But we can be fair, can't we? Where did they ever form such an opinion? They must frequent the 50 per cent movie houses.

Simply because Thomas Meighan does not cavort like an unbroken colt, he is called a "stick." Refined acting requires decorum and an acute sense of propriety.

As to Rodolph Valentino, he is not as abused as he would like to have the poor public think he is. Any man who can obtain from $5,000 to $6,000 a week for a few minutes of dancing is favored by the gods.

Any one who can term an expression of Thomas Meighan's as "bored," certainly cannot analyze anything.
RAVENSWOOD.

Poinard for the Sheik!

My Dearest Mae: You must excuse me for being so familiar, but I do despise writing to anyone that I feel as though I never knew or heard of. This explanation being over, I will tell you a little about myself. To begin with, I am in second year at one of our large north side academies; am 16 years of age, and a real, true advocate of your column. And my object in writing is because I just have to get this kick off my mind before it drives me to insanity.

I am by no means a Valentino admirer, or disliker. In some of his parts he is wonderful, but in some he is not so good.

Now, what I want to know, Mae, dear, is why in the name of common sense don't some of the other male stars get notoriety and admiration from the general public like Rodolf does?

Take, for instance, Ralph Graves [my favorite]. I think he has it all over Valentino. Ralph doesn't make his name cheap by falling all over every girl he plays opposite to. I saw him in "The Jilt" and the "Ghost Patrol," and think he is simply marvelous. Hope you will soon have a very large picture of him in the magazine section. I suppose you hope and pray that I will never write again, but I am quite sure you agree with me and forgive me for all I have said.
MARGUERITE.

I don't hope this will be your last letter, and I am sure Miss Tinée does not, either. You are free to write to this corner whenever you wish, and we shall be delighted to hear from you. The answer to your question is far to seek—it may be in the power of advertising, or it may be that Rodolf is all he is supposed to be. I don't know. I must be the "general" in the quotation, for he is certainly Caviar to me.

GEOLOGY

The ancestor of the horse.

EVOLUTION OF HORSES.

The gang is digging a hole in the vacant lot. They mean to erect a shack there if they can find enough boards. But evidently they do not expect a great superfluity of lumber, because they are planning a hut after the style of the stone [illegible] in Europe, mostly cellar. All of them work like ants, loosening and throwing out sand.

All at once they come upon a bone. Bones and more bones! Soon there is nothing but bones! Big bones, little bones, short bones, long bones. "Maybe it's an elephant," suggests [illegible]. "Or perhaps a dinosaur," says Wilbur. "They were pretty big." "Or maybe a hippopotamus."

All agree that it used to be some sort of prehistoric creature. They dig harder than they ever could be forced to work, to get all the bones out. Soon a formidable looking pile is strewn about the pit, yellow and gritty, with fibers of tendons still adhering like black [illegible]. And then a man comes along and gives the gang the laugh. "Haw, haw, haw!" he says; "that's the carcass of a dead horse."

The boys look ruefully at each other. "And just when we thought we were making a discovery!"

Never mind, boys. You still have something of first rate geological importance. Fish out a lower leg bone. Turn it over. There, do you see those two little ridges, tapering to a wedge half way down? Sure you do. Well, those used to be the extra toes of prehistoric horses.

The earliest horse whose bones have been found was a little animal about the size of a dog. He had three toes in front and four behind. Horses seem to have appeared quite early in America, and many no doubt walked the very ground you are standing on, many feet below the present surface.

Horses found life easy, and as the years passed their race grew larger. They became more adapted to running on open prairie lands, where hard, firm feet served best.

Now, it is a principle of animal nature that the less surface of the body there is on the ground the better. Horses have reduced their feet to only four hard, hoof tipped tones, but the remains of other toes still show under the skin.

ART AND ARTISTS

This painting in the Art Students' league exhibition is by Miss Graziella Jacoby.

Lots of Promise In Work at Art Students' Exhibit

By Inez Cunningham.

THERE is always something more than usually enjoyable to me in an exhibition of works of art students. I don't know whether it is that I love to look for promise (promise sadly enough often goes unfulfilled—as summer does never fulfill spring) or whether it is the spirit of the thing—the spirit of uncritical enthusiasm that prevails in the galleries at such time.

Perhaps it is partly due to the negative rather than positive factors that make it so pleasant. There are none of those queer persons walking about on their toes in odd hand-dyed costumes and trying to make sighs and grunts in articulate language of appreciation—nor any of the lorgnetted, frock-coated, mob that has swallowed the jargon of the studios whole, and disgorges it in broken sentences every time professional art is hung.

No there are none of these. There are just nice parents and tolerant friends and other enthusiastic students and relatives from the home town who exclaim that Sarah IS getting on and "John always done fine even in grammar school" and that Grace's work must be good because she got a prize—even if they can't just see why she used purple to paint in the cow's horns. It is these things that make the art student's exhibitions so pleasant for me. And this year the galleries are even more interesting than usual because there seems to be a good bit of promise hiding about in corners or peeking an eerie nose out at you from unexpected corners.

I know that it is a habit—a sort of sacred prerogative of every art (I was going to say "critic," but I think chronicler a more seemly word) to disagree with juries of awards, and so I try my best not to do so—but somehow I just must this time, to the extent at least of the order in which the prizes for the competition piece "Worship" were awarded. It seems to me that if the jury were right in the awards, then the first prize of the three for painting should have gone to Henrietta B. Frishkin—at least, it was the most original in treatment. One gram of originality is certainly worth two pounds of technique. The last remark forces me to include in my personal awarding of prizes the students who did the American Indian piece which hangs on the right of the corridor as one goes in.

Promise is not quite the word to use for the work of Miss Graziella Jacoby that hangs in the exhibition. Any one who has accomplished what Miss Jacoby has deserves a more definite adjective. She is skillful in imparting a lifelike quality to every portrait she does. Her picture seems to move away from the wall and stand out to be looked at when one enters the room. She is not without honor, considerable honor, in other cities, but it seems hard for her to obtain the credit to which her virtuosity entitles her here in her own city. In the first few steps of her career she has outstridden many who are older and more famous.

There are a great number of things in the exhibition that will bear your consideration. Do have a walk about the galleries, even if you don't stay long—it will make you think as most of us so seldom do of that swarming multitude of young hearts and minds come from all over this land and bent daily to the service of beauty in the bowels of that drab building that we are so apt to think of as containing only the dead relics of a dead past. Some day, perhaps, one of those young minds will dream a dream that will flower in beauty as rare as any that blooms immortally in that great conservatory of art, the Uffizi gallery. How thrilling to have then in one's dining room an early vision of such a mind. Yes, the art students' exhibition is always a pleasant thing—as pleasant, as promising, as unstable as spring.

Art Notes.

Have you seen the new picture by our former Chicagoan, Victor Higgins, recently acquired for the institute by the Friends of American Art? It is called "Melon Girl," a fine strong picture clean in color and design, full of virility and imagination—American imagination.

Through the door of the gallery where the new picture by the young Higgins hangs, one can see Sorolla's lovely painting, "The Two Sisters," and it makes one think of the master over whose bed the angel of death has been hovering these many days. Perhaps as I write this he is victorious and Sorolla, who brought the sunshine of Spain here to us in his exhibition of paintings a few years ago, is already dead. If he is, in thanksgiving for the beauty he brought let us say, "requiescat in pace."

The prizes awarded for painting, drawing, and modeling awarded to members of the Art Students' league are as follows:

The William O. Goodman prizes for the best picture or group of pictures: Todros Geller, $50; M. Topcheosky, $25; Louis G. Ferstadt, $15; Alice Hotz, $10.

Following are the special prizes and awards: The William M. R. French memorial scholarship of $1,000, awarded to Ida McClelland Stout for sculptured bas-relief; the Bryan Lathrop scholarship of $800, awarded to Barbara Maynard for painting; John Quincy Adams scholarship of $750, awarded to John Jacobsen for painting; the American Traveling scholarship of $125, awarded to Henrietta B. Fischkin for painting; the George Alexander McKinlock memorial prizes awarded to Johns Hopkins, $300; Errol W. Proctor, $200; Peter Lundquist, honorable mention; Jes W. Schlaiker, honorable mention; the Frederick Magnus Brand memorial prizes for composition awarded to Jerome Rozen and Elizabeth Dickinson.

The Municipal Art league prizes were awarded as follows: Best water color, M. Topcheosky, $25; best piece of craft work, Anne Hackner, $10; best pen and ink, Harry R. Wyrick, $10; best piece of sculpture, Harry Gibson, $10; best poster, Roland J. McKinney, $10; best group showing the greatest knowledge and use of composition, Helena Stevens, $15.

Nuxated Iron

No remedy can cure all ailments of the human body, but an immense number of people suffer from aches, pains and disease symptoms when their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food. Without iron your food merely passes through you without doing you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. There is one universally known tonic that has helped thousands because it contains iron like the iron in fresh vegetables and like the iron in your blood.

NUXATED IRON

is an eminent physician's best blood prescription, standardized. It is recommended for all anaemic and run-down conditions. It has helped thousands of others. It should help you. Ask for it at any drug store.

The HOLLENDEN

Cleveland's Best Known Hotel

Now under the Personal management of Mr. Roscoe J. Tompkins for 13 years one of the managers of The Blackstone, Chicago

IN nearly every large city there is one hotel with a character that raises it to national eminence. In the beautiful City of Cleveland that hotel is THE HOLLENDEN.

In the evolution of the Inn into the modern Hotel of today, the relation of guests to the management is often mechanical, but at THE HOLLENDEN there is a "new order of things," the chief of which is that its corps of more than a thousand assistants uniformly understand that service is but another word for kindness.

Mr. Roscoe J. Tompkins, for thirteen years one of the active managers of The Blackstone, Chicago, is now resident manager of THE HOLLENDEN, and the readiness with which guests' needs are foreseen and supplied, the automatic smoothness and clock-like regularity with which each department functions; indeed, every feature of THE HOLLENDEN'S administration, reveals the master hand of one eminently qualified to direct Cleveland's premier hotel.

THE HOLLENDEN sits majestically in the center of Cleveland's activities. It's in the midst of the financial district, with the principal buildings, theaters, and railroad terminals almost at its doors. It is the headquarters of the Cleveland Automobile Club, The City Club, and the Tippecanoe Club, and is the favorite rendezvous of public groups and associations representing Cleveland's social and civic activities.

In the courtesy and willing helpfulness of all employees working together as a unit, guests of THE HOLLENDEN will recognize the spirit upon which superlative excellence in hotel service depends.

We greatly appreciate the generous and loyal support that we have ever received from our many good friends in and about Chicago. They may always depend upon us in being helpful concerning their personal or traveling necessities. Immediate attention will be cheerfully given to letters or telegrams, and the best that we can offer is heartily at their disposal at THE HOLLENDEN, in the beautiful city of Cleveland.

Do Some Touring HERE

Drive into these new highways at any point, Toronto to Chicago, and you'll find new beauties and summer pleasures to attract you.

2000 Miles of New Paved Roads

Not till this summer have fine roads been available through this delightful region, north of the older east and west highways. Whether you plan your main route here or elsewhere, include some part, at least, of this charming summer playground.

The Lake Erie-Niagara Falls Trail: From Toronto to Niagara and Buffalo—each of the three cities a center of a great vacation territory—is but the beginning. Through the lakes and resorts of Western New York and of Northern Ohio are hundreds of attractions on both main routes and by-paths. Cleveland is another inviting point; many famous beaches and lake resorts are in easy reach as you drive on to Toledo and the north. At Detroit are innumerable playgrounds, and here is the door to the wonderland of Michigan resorts on The Michigan Trail. Any of these places will easily provide a week's—or a fortnight's—delightful vacationing.

The Tour-Book, with Good Maps, is Free

Write for it today—before you do any further planning for your vacation. A post card will do—to The Great Lakes Tours Association, at Detroit, or at Buffalo, or at Petoskey, Mich.—whichever is nearest.

MAGIC in a scrap of paper

About the size of a dollar bill—bearing the words "American Express Company" across its face—two identifying signatures of its owner, and the amount of its American money value in one corner—

American Express Travelers Cheques

are the most magical "scraps of paper" in the world

The recognized money of all nations—they are spendable anywhere—dependable always. Never is one of these cheques tendered anywhere or at any time—at a Ritz Hotel or to a camel boy in the Valley of the Kings—without a smile of instant appreciation and a "get it" response.

The Real Magic of American Express Travelers Cheques, however, is the world-wide Service with which the American Express chain of international offices has endowed them—a Service so varied, so complete, so personal, so American, that 90% of American travelers in foreign lands always use it.

These offices are the American Travelers' Headquarters everywhere—his mail and banking center, his Travel, Business and Social bureaus of information and service; his authentic touch with local conditions; and his direct wire home.

As an additional safeguard, and for greater convenience, use the $250 and $500 American Express Travelers Cheque Exchange Orders. These Orders are convertible into regular Travelers Cheques of smaller denominations without extra cost at American Express offices.

Cruising 'Round the World

Make the Dream Come True

GOING Around the World is more or less of a dream to most people. Everybody has it. Everybody expects it to come true some day. But the idea is so full of the unknown, so imaginary, so adventurous, so wonderful, that to most people it remains a dream.

Make the dream come true.

Under the experienced management of the American Express Travel Department a cruise around the world is a very practical possibility—easily arranged, easily financed. It is the most real, the most stimulating, the most luxurious experience of a lifetime.

It is so easy to make the dream come true.

Consider the coming Cruise of the Cunarder FRANCONIA. Built especially for long distance cruising, and just launched, the FRANCONIA is the last word in modern ship construction. Safe and speedy—a floating palace of luxurious recreation—a fine and comfortable club with every convenience and refinement suggested by 80 years of Cunard experience—and with perfect management and ship discipline at sea.

Under charter of the American Express Travel Department, the FRANCONIA sails from New York November 15th—returning March 27th. 30,000 wonder miles leisurely covered in 133 never-to-be-forgotten days. Carefully planned shore excursions from all ports of call included in initial cost. Special inland trips optional. Itinerary includes—Havana, Panama Canal, San Francisco, Hilo, Honolulu, Japan (13 days—Yokohama, Kamakura, Tokyo, Kobe, Kyoto, Nikko, Inland Sea, Miyajima), Shanghai, Hongkong, Manila, Batavia, Singapore, Rangoon, Calcutta, Colombo, Bombay, Port Tewfik, Cairo, Naples, Monaco, Gibraltar—and home.

The Franconia Party will be limited. Reservations should be made now. Interest in World Cruising has been so stimulated by the success of last year's American Express' World Cruise that an early closing of bookings is indicated.

Make the Dream come true. Write for full details—deck plans and illustrated book of the Cruise. Experienced travel representatives of the American Express will give you every assistance in perfecting your plans. Call, phone or write.

She made woman's supreme sacrifice

She sold her soul

for the sake of the man she loved

FROM THE BEGINNING OF TIME, Society has scorned the woman who sins and is found out. Thus Lizzie Hazeldean knew the price she must ultimately pay. She knew that in her society dwelt scores of stone-throwers waiting with ready slings for her to lift her head.

Yet knowing this she sinned and paid

But today—this moment—we are living in a different world—a reckless world of hip flasks and blaring jazz. Has our judgment of human frailty undergone a similar change? Surrounded by looseness in general, are we any more charitable of the looseness of individuals? Would a woman, doing today what Lizzie Hazeldean did yesterday, be subjected to the same scorn and social ostracism, as was her cheerfully accepted lot, IF WE KNEW WHY SHE DID IT?

That is one question that her amazing story propounds. And another is:

How many women would do what this woman did—for Love?

There's a question that only women can answer, and where is the one brave enough to stand forth before Society and declare:

"I would!"

Read—today—the story of Lizzie Hazeldean. Look about you and discover, if you can, how many Lizzie Hazeldeans there possibly are in your own circle; and then ask yourself these same questions.

No greater story of a great love and a greater sacrifice of soul has ever been told in our literature than this
—It is all the more magnificent for being told by the greatest American novelist of our day:

She it was who wrote the famous prize-winning novel, "The Age of Innocence," and whose name is on every list of America's greatest women. The title Mrs. Wharton has given her story of Lizzie Hazeldean is "New Year's Day," and you will find it in the July issue of The Red Book Magazine, now on sale everywhere.

Women and men alike should read it*—for it is bound to be the one subject of literary discussion this summer*

Nor does the July issue of America's favorite magazine rest upon the laurels it will receive for giving to the world this one superlative piece of work. L. George, famous student of femininity; Wallace Irwin, master of social satire; Thomas Beer, most distinguished of the younger American fictionists; George Weston, charming story teller of youthful romance; Courtney Ryley Cooper, authority on the lives of animals—and others. ## Gardens Burst Into Glory as Mercury Mounts

By Mme. X

ONE of the things which give Chicago people that "pep" for which they are famous is the fact that they not only exist but absolutely thrive under a thermometer which ranges from below zero in winter to above 100 degrees in summer. It's ranging all right these days, though in the upper register of the thermometer. It's a state of things that has recently made all the thousands of gardens which flourish in or near Chicago burst into an efflorescence almost tropical in effect.

A garden is nature corsetted, carefully dressed, hair coiffed, hat on, veil adjusted, and shoes polished. It takes a great deal of care and planning to achieve a really beautiful and correct garden. There are many owners of inclosures where flowers and shrubs are planted who think that they have admirable gardens, when, as a matter of fact, they have nothing of the kind. Order, balance, harmony, are as necessary in a garden as in planning a house, or presenting a mathematical problem, or composing a symphony. Such order, balance, and harmony can be arrived at only by much study and experimenting. Once understood, a small garden correctly designed and carried out gives infinitely more pleasure than a larger, more costly one which has not been evolved under the same artistic and scientific direction.

The English have for generations—one might almost say centuries—made a special study of gardens, and today probably are the most expert gardeners in the world. Certainly there is nothing more delightful and enchanting than a typical English garden. But this supremacy of the English is likely to be threatened in time by the American enthusiast in the gentle art of planting flowers and shrubs in such a way and after such designs as shall give the best effects. American women are more and more turning their attention to the study of this art.

Aroused North Shore.

In Chicago the impetus to this movement was given some eleven years ago by Mrs. Tiffany Blake, one of the best amateur gardeners in this region, who aroused some of the best known women on the north shore to an interest in the subject sufficient to bring about the formation of what was first known as the Illinois Garden club and now is called the Lake Forest Garden club. Mrs. George Higginson was its first president. Other president of this organization were the late Mrs. Frederick Greeley, G. Hibbard, and Mrs. Horace Mar- Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. William tin. Its present chief is Mrs. Walter Brewster of Lake Forest, who was for many years the able editor of the Garden Magazine, the chief guide and authority for amateur gardeners.

What was probably the earliest club of its kind was the Philadelphia Garden club, which was founded in 1904. The organization which gathered in one bond most of the important clubs of the country, the Garden Clubs of America, was started in 1913, a year later than the Lake Forest organization. This association of clubs has annual meetings when delegates from the subsidiary associations meet and exchange views, experiences, and knowledge of all kinds pertaining to garden lore.

This year this general get-together festival will be held in Newport June 27 and 28. To it as delegates from the Lake Forest club are going the president, Mrs. Walter Brewster, Mrs. Charles Schweppe, and Mrs. Francis C. Farwell. The latter is at the head of the wild flower preservation movement, and goes especially to promote that campaign. Mrs. George A. McKinlock is also probably going as an onlooker and will take with her Miss Muriel McCormick. Mrs. Brewster will be the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtis James of Newport and New York.

Impressed by Hospitality.

Besides many conferences and "experience meetings," there are also entertainments for the delegates and opportunities for seeing the countryside under especially attractive auspices. It was in 1919 that the Lake Forest club entertained the National Garden Club association, and right royally did the local hostesses extend hospitality to the visitors from east, west, north, and south. Houses were thrown open; gardens were set in apple pie order; the visitors were treated to the best that was to be had, most of them being given bed and board and much friendly attention. One hostess even provided an expert in hairdressing and manicuring, and a social secretary who were at the service of this woman's house guests each day during their stay here. The eastern women professed themselves as being much impressed by the completeness of the hospitality offered them on every hand, and said it would not be possible in an eastern establishment.

That was the time the famous thunderstorm came up one evening in the Howard Shaws' garden where, in the lovely Ragdale Ring, an open air entertainment designed and arranged by Mrs. Shaw was being given. The guests were all admiring a marvelous cloud which rolled up from the sunset afterglow. It looked like an ancient painting of a cloud, being just such a solid piece of vapor as that in Correggio's famous painting of Apollo in Rome. That it could let down real water seemed the last thing that was expected of it by that fashionably dressed company who stared skyward in absorbed attention, when suddenly the beautiful cloud opened and deluged the land with as smart a summer shower as could any ocean waterspout. The house, being too far away, the guests scurried to the neighboring shrubbery for shelter which consisted largely of thorn trees. The next morning the gardener picked off these thorny spikes a remarkable crop of hair nets of all colors and sizes, an unusual fruit for the average garden tree. One of the guests was overheard saying to her companion after the shower was over and every one back on the rather damp seats in the ring:

"They say this entertainment cost the people here a lot of money, but I bet it will cost my husband more." Her swell Paris frock was probably not rainproof.

Lovely Examples of the Best.

One of the most celebrated authorities in matters connected with gardening, and possibly the original force in the organization of the National Garden clubs of America was a former Chicagoan, Mrs. Francis King. She has written books and given lectures on the subject and her gardens first in Elmhurst, near Chicago, and later in Alma, Mich., are lovely examples of the best in the art of garden making. Her husband belongs to one of the old Chicago families, his father, the late Henry W. King, having been a well known personality in his time, a prominent member of the Fourth Presbyterian church, and long an active force in the old Chicago Relief and Aid society, the parent of our United Charities.

Before leaving the subject of gardens—the writer was much struck by the immensity of the task of running even a not extra large place when Mrs. Hathaway Watson remarked quite casually that in their place in Winnetka she and Mr. Watson annually planted some 80,000 things, flowers, shrubs, trees, vines, etc. Of these 40,000 went in in the spring and the rest in the course of the summer and autumn. This seems a huge figure in which to deal. The Watson place used to belong to the George Higginsons Jr., who sold it to them about three years ago. It is situated on the western boundaries of that classic suburb, and has a delicious view over the Skokie. Sometimes there rolls in from this famous tract of former marsh land a soft white vapor which gives the effect of being a sea fog creeping silently up over fields and woodlands, silencing sounds and muffling everything in its clinging folds. I speak of it as if it were in the present, though perhaps the draining of the Skokie has deprived that district of this wayward expression of the head waters of the Chicago river.

There will be a gathering of the clans tomorrow afternoon and evening at Thorn Hill, the lovely estate of Mr. and Mrs. Joy Morton, near Lisle, the occasion being a benefit for the building fund of St. Albans school. The Morton place is famous all over the country for its arboretum which includes every tree and shrub that will grow in Illinois.

The chief attractions for those seeking amusement will be a bridge tournament from 3 to 5 o'clock, after which there will be a mixed program of music and recitations, followed by a buffet supper and later in the evening swimming in the pool. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. Morton or from Miss Lucie Cady of Wheaton. St. Albans is an Episcopal school for boys and its present quarters at Sycamore are in need of repairs. Mr. Morton promises to give to the fund half as much again as is made by this entertainment, so all interested are

Out of the Commonplace

Some men lead "standardized lives"—as standard as a rubber stamp. And they buy cars accordingly.

A much more rare type of men lead individual lives—as individual as their own autographed signatures. And they naturally buy a much more individual car.

The Velie purchaser is decidedly of the individual type. He does not blindly follow the herd. He needs no bellwether to lead him. He would no more intentionally purchase a car "like everybody's else" than he would purchase a home "like everybody's else" in some industrial housing settlement. He exercises his own initiative and individuality.

Oddly enough it costs him no more to own a Velie. And he not only gets from twenty to twenty-five miles to the gallon of gas but he gets style and distinction as well.

See this present line of Velie models, seven beautiful bodies designed to meet your individual taste—all powered with the famous, automatically lubricated, vibrationless Velie-built motor.

Month of Weddings.

June is usually considered the month of weddings, and this one is keeping up the reputation of the month. Yesterday the marriage of Miss Hollis Letts and George F. McLaughlin brought out the fashionable world of the north shore. The young couple are going to live in Lake Forest, where they have taken an attractive little bungalow on the west side of the track, not far from the country places of the parents of both.

There is a growing colony of young married folk who spend winters and summers in that smart suburb, and who have a good time among themselves. Among them are Mr. and Mrs. Farwell Winston, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. William Burry, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William E. Clow, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hamill, Mr. and Mrs. Morse Ely, Mr. and Mrs. Aime Millet, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, and Mr. and Mrs. John Meacham.

The young "Joe" Bowens are departing in a few days for a three weeks' camping trip in the Rockies. They are going with pack train from a remote station in Arizona to a place 100 miles in the interior. They expect to get mountain lions, lynx, quail, and other wild creatures who have retreated to the wilderness to get away from man. It is the closed season for deer, so the Bowens can only watch them gambolling in the forest primeval.

Hunters have observed in deer an extraordinary acquaintance with the laws that preserve them. In the closed season they appear to be quite fearless, and are often to be seen browsing in the fields and woods, but the minute the season becomes open their wireless informs them of the fact and they become as scarce as hens' teeth. It was much the same in British East Africa, where the game laws protect the wild animals six miles back on either side of the Uganda railway. The zebras, gnus, hartebeets, Thompson gazelles, and even the giraffes wander and graze fearlessly on both sides of the tracks as the trains rumble along. It is an amazing spectacle to the traveler from America who finds him or herself behind barriers while many of the animals he or she has been accustomed to view in captivity are disporting themselves in freedom and not even bothering to look at the visitors from remote lands.

It seems that in my last week's lucubrations I made an error in referring to the amiable though sardonic goat that daily nibbles the Walter Brewster's velvet lawn as a possible modern replica of the great god Pan. He is a she, a nanny goat, in every sense of the word a "milk Pan," as she provides sustenance for four husky youngsters whose parents live and work on the place. Probably Pan lurks near by. "Pan and Milk Pan"—it might be the title of a rustic and romantic tale. Rightly and carefully handled, goat's milk is said to be as palatable as cow's milk. Even the cream is reported pleasant to taste, provided it is used quickly and under the most scientific conditions.

Those Who Stay in Town.

Not all the "beau monde" is rusticating in the country or at the seaside. Some of Chicago's social leaders are enjoying the quiet and privacy and also the coolness that are all to be found in a city home in the warm season. Mr. and Mrs. Honoré Palmer are in their house on North Michigan avenue. Nor are they making any plans to leave it at present. Mrs. Palmer returned lately from a trip to France.

MRS. WALTER SWANSON.
[Hansen Photo.]

Miss Ethel L. Pegler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pegler of 2920 Pine Grove avenue, was married to Walter Swanson last evening at the residence of her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Swanson will live at 750 Brompton avenue.

Others who are also enjoying the cool comfort to be found in shut-up city houses in hot weather are Mr. and Mrs. James Keeley on Ritchie court. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson are likewise still in town in the Edward L. Ryerson house on Banks street. The young Ryersons are superintending the moving of their household possessions into their new home on Astor street, a house which David Adler remodeled for them and turned from a highly ornamental Chicago dwelling of the vintage of twenty years ago into a charming translation of an extremely chic Paris residence. Both without and within it is a delicious architectural creation and will be when completed and furnished, one of the most attractive houses in Chicago. Its owners are moving to Lake Forest in the latter part of the month, having taken there the Leslie Wheelers' house.

The latter with their two children are sailing for Europe on July 4, to join Mrs. Wheeler's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Patten, in France at Dinard, the fashionable seaside resort. Mr. and Mrs. Patten spent the winter traveling in central Africa, India, and Indo-China. Mr. Patten is not only a prominent member of the Chicago Geographical society, but also a member of the Royal Geographic society of London, a rather unusual honor among American travelers. He is devoting much time this summer to motoring in France and Germany with his nephew, "Jack" Patten, son of James A. Patten of Evanston. Mr. Henry Patten has taken his sailing for Sept. 13, when his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler, will return with him.

Enlarging Their Horizons.

Other Chicagoites who are wandering in foreign lands and who only recently left us are Mrs. Parmelee McFadden and her two daughters, the Misses Eleanor and Frances McFadden; Mrs. Mitchell Follansbee and her four children, who sailed on the same ship as the popular young curator of prints at the Art institute, William McC. McKie; Frank Cramer, who is now in France, having gone there in search of less inclement weather, England having showed her worst lately in the way of cold and wet. Another Chicagoan, Miss Harriet Monroe, is in London, and is being much entertained by the literary world. One paper writing of her presence in England says:

"Her 'Poetry' office in Chicago, with its walls plastered with the photographs of English and American bards, is the first resort of all sorts and conditions of singers. Chicago in a special way was attached to Rupert Brooke, took cognizance of W. B. Yeats, awarded him even a poetry prize; discovered Vachel Lindsay, made Carl Sandburg and many others. The movement which Miss Munroe shepherded is one of the greatest freedom. She has been the encourager and the hostess of many."

MRS. ALBERT H. FALK.
[Stafford Photo.]

The wedding of Miss Edythe Marguerite Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Phillips of 3225 Dickens avenue, and Albert H. Falk, son of Alexander F. Falk, took place on June 9 at St. Sylvester's church. Mr. and Mrs. Falk will be at home after July 1 at 3751 Grace street.

Miss Monroe is one of that valiant band who hold high torches to illumine a dark world. Her work in the encouragement and promotion of poetry as the finest of the fine arts is more appreciated and applauded in the east and in England than it is in the city of her birth where she has established her distinguished little magazine, Poetry. Are prophets never recognized as such in their own countries?

Others of our fellow citizens who are seeking surcease from care and enlarging their horizons in older communities are Mrs. Alfred Baker and Miss Mary Baker. They are occupying Lord Wellesly's house at 43 Portland place, London. Their landlord is the son of the Duke of Wellington. Whether this is the house once occupied by the first and greatest to bear this name and title I don't know, but I hope it is so. It is only the utterly unimaginative who do not feel the subtle, intangible, and indescribable atmosphere that emanates from the walls, ceilings, and floors of houses that have sheltered the great men and women of history.

MISS HILDEGARDE BROSNIHAN.

Dr. and Mrs. Fred Hugh Brosnihan of 6123 Kimbark avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Hildegarde, to John Emerson Smyth, son of Mrs. Nettie E. Smyth of 6139 Greenwood avenue.

Uniting Old Families.

The marriage of Miss Cordelia Carpenter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter, and Dr. Nathan Smith Davis, grandson of the original N. S. Davis, which will take place on July 6, will unite two of Chicago's really old families. Dr. Davis' grandfather came from New York in 1849 and was the first president of the Chicago Medical college. On his mother's side young Dr. Davis is descended from Judge James Campbell Hopkins, who came to Madison, Wis., in 1856, and was United States commissioner of the western district.

Miss Carpenter is a great grand daughter of Benjamin Carpenter who, in 1850, brought his wife and children from Conneaut, O., by schooner to Chicago, the party landing at the foot of Rush street. Her grandfather was George B. Carpenter, founder of the well known firm of that name with "and sons" added to it now that his sons, Benjamin, Hubbard, and John Carpenter, run it. Her maternal grandfather, N. K. Fairbank, was one of the prominent men of his time, and a striking figure in a group of remarkable men which included John Crerar, Huntington Jackson, Marshall Field, Arthur Caton, Norman Williams, John M. Clark, and George M. Pullman. Perhaps the men of today will loom as large in the memories of those who come after them as the Chicago pioneers do in the thoughts of those who immediately followed them, but it does not seem probable at this time. The first trees in any forest always are of a bigger, more impressive growth than any that succeed them.

Honeymoons are the particular affair of the couple interested, but that of the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Scott, Miss Betty Scott, and Edward Kenneth Welles of Evanston (who are to be married late in September) sounds so especially poetic and attractive, that this column ventures to comment on it. They are sailing for Italy immediately after the ceremony, and will go almost directly to Horace Oakley's villa on the slopes of Fiesole above Florence. To start on the uncharted waters of matrimony (for no other mariner's compass ever seems much of a guide in such a voyage) in such environments must be a wonderful experience. Any bridal couple making such a beginning should return to the practical in life "trailing clouds of glory."

Born to Excitement.

In search of adventure, Mrs. Samuel T. Chase and her two daughters, Miss Elizabeth and Miss Janet Chase (yes, the latter is the famous rider of spirited horses in all the neighboring horse shows) start forth today to motor to Hyannisport, where they are going to spend the next two months. They take the first step of their trip by going by boat across to somewhere in Michigan. Their car goes on the same steamer. When they disembark they will set forth through the wilds of Ohio, central New York state, southern Massachusetts, and possibly northern Connecticut.

If there are hairbreadth escapes and thrilling experiences to be had on the way, the Chases will have them. There are people like the writer who, though they traverse darkest Africa or explore remote places in the Scandinavian peninsular, yet never have any real adventures, while others are born to excitement and interesting experiences. Of this latter class is the family whose names I take so often in this column that each time I offer them a silent apology. It is their own fault; they are so lively, so original, and so interesting that a conscientious chronicler of passing events cannot leave them out.

A large section of Chicago's gay world seems to have moved in a body to Hyannisport. The Chases will find there the Thornhill Broomes, William Cunninghams, George S. Paysons, Edward L. Ryersons Jr., Howard Eltings, France Andersons of Hinsdale, and the Seymour Wheelers of Lake Forest.

Hyannisport used to be a tranquil little Cape Cod place far off the beaten line of travel. Its excellent yacht harbor attracted sea going people, and its utter simplicity lured others. Now it is one of the fashionable resorts of that part of the cape, and especially do bridge players seem to flock there, I don't know why. From sheltered porches the passerby can hear the magic phrases that betray the devotees of this the best game in the world. "I bid a without," "I double," "I go back," and other similar cryptic words are cast out on to the sea breezes from secluded nooks.

The sea breezes are an almost inevitable accompaniment to life on this wind swept cape, making days cool and nights cooler. Lucky the mortal who can escape for a few weeks the fervid breath of western wheat fields, and get the lungs full of that salt air!

INDIANS ARE ONE RACE.

THE American Indian, from Alaska to Patagonia, appears to be of essentially the same race. This is interesting, for in America are two continents with a single underlying stratum of man.

It seems that the Americas were uninhabited until the middle of pleistocene times. Europe in that time saw the rise and extinction of the Neanderthals and their kin, or the ape men, as we would call them. Africa witnessed the extinction of Rhodesian men, and saw Negroid peoples spread over the lower two-thirds of the dark continent. White men spread from some place in central Asia to Europe.

The evidence indicates that the original Indians who reached America were few in number. Their faces and their builds reveal it.

Left to itself, the human head evolves into three distinct forms. One is long skulled with a narrow, convex face, another is long skulled with a broad face, while the third is round skulled with a short face. The Indian started with a broad face, so all his broad faced forms are unusually pronounced. All these forms of evolution are found in America.

A long headed Indian.

The human body splits into two general builds by the same process of evolution; one growing ever taller and lankier, while the other goes toward squat and stout. Both these types of Indians occur.

Three sorts of minds appear—the builders, the scavengers and the predators. All students of Indian history know of these. The mighty ruins of America, from farthest Patagonia to Canada, and embracing all degrees of building from marvelous palaces of carved stone to huge rudely heaped mounds of earth, were the work of the builders. Early American history is filled with accounts of fights with predatory Indians, culminating in the taming of the savage Sioux, Utes and Apaches of the west.

Long head but wide face.

The scavenger Indians were the peaceful ones. They raised no buildings, nor went on the warpath to any extent, but lived in a low state of culture in the fashion of their ancestors. Most of these Indians are still alive.

In the United States and southern Canada the Indians have been mostly displaced to reservations, and the main record for their existence lies in their extensive place names. Most of the geographical features of this country, the names of rivers, mountains, hills, town sites, and many counties and states are of Indian origin. In the other parts of the Americas the natives are near, if not actually in, the very centers of civilization.

The only instance of a prehistoric intrusive people into America known is in Mexico. Here a second wave of Mongols entered. They appear to have been more yellow and less copper colored than the Indians. Their descendants are still to be seen in Mexico and people who know them well say that Chinese traders habitually converse with them in their liquid-sounding language rather than in the official Spanish, because the Indian tongue is so much nearer Chinese.

There is reason to believe that a profound racial change has come over Asia since the Indians emigrated. The remains of proto-Indian populations are still found in odd corners of that continent, but swamped by the ever rising tide of yellow. The eruption of Mongols into Mexico some 10,000 years or more ago indicates that the pressure at home was great then. Today the Esquimos, another Mongol people, are pushing into America from the north, via Bering strait, following the route of the Indians. Mongols are more powerful than Indians. They crowd them back or supplant them everywhere.

A round headed Indian.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published $1 will be paid. Address Best Joke Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Occupied.

Mrs. Newlywed: O, dearie, don't forget to bring some mouse traps home with you this evening.

Mr. Newlywed: But, honey, I bought you half a dozen last week.

Mrs. Newlywed: Yes, dear, but they all have mice in them now. L. C.

Doing His Best.

During final examinations a precocious youngster raised his hand and asked, "What's the date?"

"Never mind the date, answer the questions," admonished the teacher, to which the youth replied:

"I wanted to get one thing right."
E. R.

Suited Him Perfectly.

Landlord—You didn't pay the rent for last month.

Tenant—No? I suppose you'll hold to your agreement.

Landlord—Agreement? What agreement?

Tenant—Why, when I took this place you said I must pay in advance or not at all. C. T.

Knew All About It.

William had become the proud owner of a pig, and insisted upon having all the care of it. After a few weeks, as the pig did not seem to thrive, his father said to him:

"William, I'm afraid you are not feeding your pig enough. It doesn't seem to be fattening at all."

"I don't want to fatten him yet," answered the young stockman. "I'm waiting until he gets as long as I want him, then I'll begin to widen him out."
A. B.

Et Tu, Brute.

Crossing the parade ground, after guard mount, the second lieutenant happened to meet the colonel, who was evidently not in the best of humor.

"Is that the proper way to salute?" snapped the colonel.

The second lieutenant apologized and went on. A little farther on he met the major.

"Lieutenant, your uniform is a disgrace. Don't appear before me in that condition again," shouted the major.

Shortly afterwards he met his captain.

"Brace up," roared the captain, "and try to maintain a soldierly appearance."

A dirty little fox terrier came trotting down the street. When he saw the lieutenant he stopped, showed his teeth, and growled.

The lieutenant, turning around slowly, drawled out: "Well, how did YOU know I was a second lieutenant?"

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE DAILY PUZZLE.

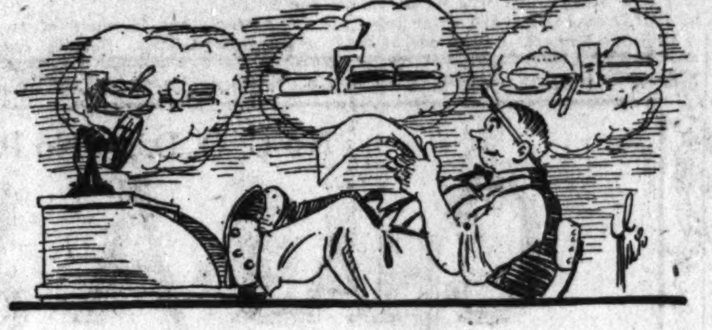
IT seems when in the morning
I take my simple fare
That nothing could be neater,
Or tastier or sweeter,
More soothing or completer
Than breakfast waiting there.

And then the hours wheel along
And noon comes on apace,
And, O, how lunch induces
The motivating-uses
Of all my gastric juices—
The while I feed my face.



And dusk comes bringing darkness,
And darkness bringing dinner;
And with each course a new desire,
A thrilling gastronomic fire
That never seems to cloy or tire
This gourmandizing sinner.

Now which do I enjoy the most
Of these delightful three?
Is breakfast then more sating?
Or lunch exhilarating?
Or dinner more elating?
I cannot answer me.

WHAT MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN?

Fleorcilla.

By Selby Maxwell.

BEST IN ADVERSITY.

AMONG the types of Nordic beauty found in England and in the neighboring parts of Friesland and Schleswig-Holstein, there is none more delicate that Fleorcilla. Her beauty is the embodiment of the Anglo-Saxon soul.

Fleorcilla is blonde, with clear pink skin, and golden sandy hair. Her eyes are light blue, almost green. She draws her brows down until her orbs seem like the green waters in some seaside cavern, where sunlight from beyond comes filtering through profound depths.

There is strength written in those eyes, not strength of brawn, for that is of the animals, but steadfastness of will, the quality in which Nordics exceed all other men. Call it self-centeredness if you wish, or blindness to all other interests, but still the fact will remain Fleorcilla has an uncommonly unyielding nature.

She thinks with great rapidity. Her sloping cheeks and her sharp nose indicate it. Her lips are tiny and so delicate that the faintest play of muscles in them is at once revealed in her expression. They show her every mood. She can conceal little of her thoughts.

How does Fleorcilla regard humanity? Does she comprehend people in the mass or as individuals, or not at all? Her face answers the question.

She does not gauge human emotion aright. She is ideal, and to her everything looks ideal. She has no sordidness. She does not understand the quality, even if her eyes are forced to gaze upon it. Do not expect her to see guile. She cannot do it.

Neither does she analyze the thoughts of others nor seeks to find the nature of the words that they keep concealed. The minds of people are almost closed to her.

She analyzes her own thoughts better, but as she does it only under the stress of thwarted emotions, her whole introspective self is dyed with a phantasmal pattern. She is impulsive and is carried away by sentiment.

But when she is placed among conditions, and particularly adverse ones, her spirit comes to its full bloom. She understands things better than most of us. Women of her race are fit companions for the men who have gained the overlordship of the entire world in government, politics, commerce, art, and science.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

'Forward Together' Theme of Sunday School Convention

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE sixty-fifth annual convention of the Illinois Sunday School association will begin on Tuesday morning at Aurora, continuing Wednesday and Thursday. Registration will begin at 7:30 Tuesday morning, and the opening general session will be at 9:30. The general sessions will be held in the First Presbyterian church. Divisional conferences will be held in the First Congregational, Park Place Baptist, the parish house of the Trinity Episcopal church, and Zion Evangelical church. The exhibits will be in the gymnasium of the First Presbyterian church, and the comradeship meeting of county, district, township and state officers will be in the First Congregational church.

The convention theme will be "Forward Together." Seventy-five speakers are on the program. Dr. Hugh Magill, Chicago, general secretary of the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education, will speak on Wednesday at 3:05 in the First Presbyterian church on "The Place of Religion in Education," and at 7:40 at the same place and date on "The Coöperative Program in Religious Education."

Some others who will have a prominent part in the program are Mrs. Mary Foster Bryner, Dr. Charles Darsie, and Prof. M. A. Honline. There will be a public Sunday School parade, pageant and dinners.

The state officers are: President, Frank M. Campbell, Alton; first vice president, E. J. Tupper, Galesburg; second vice president, Claude E. Tilton, Fairmount; recording secretary, C. W. Rohr, West Chicago; treasurer, Dr. S. A. Wilson, Chicago.

The first national conference of Catholics to discuss the problems of American industry will be held at the Hotel Pfister, Milwaukee, Wis., on Wednesday and Thursday. The meeting is called by the Catholic conference on industrial problems with headquarters in Washington, D. C. Wage justice, collective bargaining, and unemployment will be some of the questions discussed. The program will follow Pope Leo's encyclical on the condition of labor, considered by Catholics their most authoritative statement on labor and capital.

Among the speakers from Chicago will be Miss Mary McEnerney, John Fitzpatrick, Matthew J. Woll, William J. Lynch, and the Rev. Frederick J. Siedenburg, S. J. The Rt. Rev. Peter J. Muldoon, bishop of Rockford, will be chairman of the closing session on Thursday evening. Speakers will be present from Washington, D. C.; Princeton university, N. J., Kansas City, Mo.; New York, and Louisville.

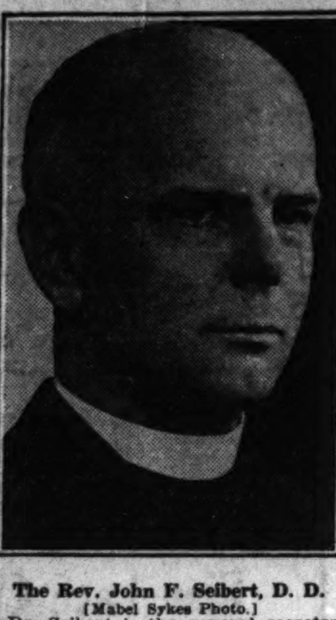
Beginning next Tuesday and continuing to July 6, rural problems will be considered at the summer school of religion at the University of Wisconsin at Madison. It will be conducted under the auspices of the social service department of the Episcopal church.



The Rev. John F. Seibert, D. D.
[Mabel Sykes Photo.]

Dr. Seibert is the general secretary of the board of home missions and church extension of the United Lutheran church in America, the first to hold the office since the headquarters of the board have been moved from York, Pa., to Chicago. Next Friday from 2 to 10 p. m. Dr. Seibert and other general officials of the United Lutheran church will welcome the public at a formal opening of the new headquarters at the new building, Cass and Chestnut streets. The new building is a three story structure. It contains a book store, offices of the Lutheran Brotherhood, Dr. S. S. Waltz, general secretary, and of the synodical president, Dr. J. M. Bramkamp. The entire second floor is devoted to Dr. Seibert's office and board rooms.

Dr. Seibert since his arrival in Chicago in 1909 has been missionary superintendent of the Illinois synod and for a year the paid president of the Illinois synod and superintendent of the central division. He was educated in literature and theology at the Gettysburg, Pa., college and seminary.

The Rev. Charles N. Lathrop, executive secretary of the department, declares that the automobile and the lack of properly trained clergy are both factors militating against the rural parishes. The Rev. S. M. Cleveland, Madison, Wis., is in charge of the arrangements for the conference.

A pageant, "Lady Catechism and the Child," will be given today by the children of Christ Episcopal church, Woodlawn avenue and 65th street, the Rev. H. J. Buckingham, rector. The occasion is Church School day. Diplomas and prizes will be given and the work of the children exhibited.

The Rev. William Brewster Stoskopf, rector, and the Rev. E. A. Larrabee, assistant rector of the Church of the Ascension, Episcopal, have sailed for Europe, where they will attend the various conferences of the Angelican church.

The Park Ridge Methodist Episcopal church, which was founded in 1857 and regarded as a landmark, will be remodeled into a modern structure. In comparing prices in 1857 and now, the fact is noted that the nails in the present structure cost $55.97 and the plastering $62.13, the amount that some expert plasterers now earn in three days. The total cost of the lumber, including one of the tallest steeples in northern Illinois, was $1,500. The Rev. T. P. Brannum is pastor.

During July and August the meetings of the Bahai assembly which will be held today as usual at the Brownleigh club, 153 North Michigan avenue, will be held at the temple site at Wilmette, at 3:30 p. m. The temple is still in building, but the accommodations are ample for services.

A community meeting in the interest of the world court as advocated by President Harding will be held this evening in the First Presbyterian church, 41st street and Grand boulevard. Dr. William Chalmers Covert, the pastor, will preside. Addresses will be made by Elliott J. Neal, Richard E. Evans, and Fred E. Busbey. Capt. Donald S. McWilliams will present a memorial to be voted on and, if adopted, it will be sent to President Harding. The First church is preparing for the celebration of its ninetieth anniversary. The exact date of the anniversary is June 26, but the celebration will be held in the fall. On next Wednesday evening a dinner will be held at the parish house to arrange for the celebration. The gavel used was made from the last surviving log of old Fort Dearborn and wood from the tree near which the massacre of 1812 took place. Personations of those who figured in early Chicago will feature the dinner.

The Rev. Philaretos Johannides, consecrated the first bishop of the Greek Orthodox diocese of Chicago last Thursday, will celebrate today his first high mass at St. Constantine's church, 6105 South Michigan avenue. The Most Rev. Germanos, metropolitan of the Greek Catholic churches in Europe, and the Most Rev. Alexander, archbishop of the Greek church in America, will participate in the service.

Chicago will have its third church publicity conference. The date is Oct. 29 and the place the new Chicago temple, which, it is expected, will be dedicated before that time. The Chicago Church federation and the advertising section of the Chicago Association of Commerce will unite in promoting the program and exhibit, and will also invite the coöperation of other interested church bodies.

The tenth anniversary of the reorganization of the St. Albans' school at Sycamore, Ill., will be celebrated today. The exercises began yesterday. The Rev. Norman Hutton, D. D., rector of St. Chrysostom's church, Chicago, presented the diplomas, and Angus S. Hibbard, a prominent lay member of the Episcopal church, made the address. Today the Rt. Rev. S. M. Griswold, suffragan bishop, will celebrate the holy communion, assisted by the Rev. Frank St. Clair. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Charles H. Young, former rector of Christ's church, Chicago.

EDUCATIONAL EDUCATIONAL

GREGG SCHOOL
a National Institution

In its student body practically every State of the Union is represented. Students come from Canada, China, Japan, and from many European countries to Gregg School, Shorthand Headquarters.

The character of Gregg training is mirrored in the achievements of Gregg Students. Three times in four years Gregg Students have won first and second places in the Illinois Novice Typewriting Contest, and last year students of Gregg School won seven out of the first ten places. All twelve Gregg School entrants, in competition with a field of 100, finished within the first twenty-one places.

It does not necessarily follow that, having finished a stenographic or secretarial course at Gregg School, you will ultimately become a Bank President. But it does follow indubitably that you will step into a preferred position paying far better salary than the average income of young people, because our appointment bureau always receives more requests for our graduates than we have graduates to fill the positions.

If you are interested in shorthand, bookkeeping, accounting or secretarial duties, we want you to feel that you can investigate Gregg School or ask for our free catalogue without obligating yourself in any way. We do not employ solicitors.

Short Course—Good Pay for Every Graduate

We offer you a highly skilled training in the remarkably short time of 5 to 7 weeks with a position immediately thereafter—a position where you begin at an average of $20 per week, where the work is ideal, where you are permanently independent and where there are many unusual avenues of advancement.

Become a Specialist in 5 to 7 Weeks

So many new COMPTOMETERS are installed every day, and so many operators are promoted that we receive an average of over 225 requests per month for operators. These positions are permanent, because operators are always in demand. That means steady employment and steady advancement for you—the reward of the specialist.

Business experience is not necessary but girls with some High School education are preferred. The work is easily learned, the course is short, the tuition fee is very small, and we make no charge for assisting our graduates to positions. Call at the school or phone principal and ask for particulars.

The SLAYER of SOULS

By Elizabeth Dejeans

A short daily serial of action, love and mystery

Blue Ribbon Fiction

START IT NOW!

BOOTLEGGING seems to be a quiet and honorable occupation compared to the sinister activities of the dope peddlers. This new daily serial takes the reader through the desperate and dangerous pathways of the dope ring to a climax that is thrilling and unexpected. Mystery, crime, love, intrigue and adventure are charmingly combined.

ELIZABETH DEJEANS wrote "The Romance of a Million Dollars," another Tribune Blue Ribbon serial of mystery and romance. THE SLAYER OF SOULS is complete in 13 daily installments, and action follows swiftly upon the introduction of the characters. Don't miss this fascinating daily serial. START IT NOW!

INSTALLMENT I.

HIGH HOPES.

IT was a mocking bird that had lifted out of the court below and came to rest on the stone sill of the office window. It held something in its beak. The bird and Letetia looked at each other for the briefest moment, the bird's small eyes fixed on Letetia's squirrel bright and squirrel colored orbs, which peered over her typewriter at the unexpected visitor. Then Letetia smiled, showing her jutting teeth; every human face bears a resemblance to some animal, and Letetia's features had the darting brightness of a squirrel. The bird spread wings and dropped like a sinking airplane half way down into the court between the two buildings, then shot upward and off over the roof of the apartment building opposite. It trilled as it went, a sort of agitated medley.

Letetia reached out and took the bit of brightness which the bird had dropped on the sill—a twist of woman's hair. It was a long hair combed from a woman's head, Letetia decided; it had been twisted around a finger; then tossed out of a window; possibly the wind had blown it off some dressing table. Beyond the Angel's Flight against which the office building and the apartment house backed, up over the ridge, were trees and shrubbery. The bird must have adventured over the Angel's Flight in quest of nesting bits and, flying into the court from the rear, had found itself in a pocket. But where had it found the hair? And such hair!

Letetia unwound it. It measured nearly a yard, vividly red hair, wonderful hair! She twisted it about her finger, looked at the bright band, and visioned the woman to whom it should belong: a fairly tall woman—she ought to be, with hair of that length—white skin and lovely features. And beautiful teeth, even and white—the sort of mouth men love. Letetia's lips tightened over her own unfortunate teeth. She had decided long ago that her other features were more than passable, but her teeth she hated. She hid them as much as possible, which constant lip control gave her an extraordinarily bright eyed, squirrelly expression, particularly as it was impossible to hide her teeth altogether.

With mouth covered, Letetia was pretty—dark hair perpetually awave, eyes a squirrel gray and large and bright, and dark brows and lashes aplenty. But her teeth should never have been; the teeth of a neglected child, white enough, but overlapping and projecting. She was a wisp of a girl; she looked delicate, but in reality she was wiry. A desert town, not the slums, had produced her, and the urge to make something of herself had brought her to the city. Besides, in the city her mouth could be made beautiful. Letetia had several ambitions, and one of them was to possess a set of even teeth. But that took money.

Then she brushed the twist of hair from her finger, flung it aside: what did that sort of a woman know about a Texas oil town, the wind and the dust, the heat and the cold and the mud! About life in a shack on the desert, before ever the desert began to spout oil. That woman had never had a lawless father, the kind that took to crookedness naturally and hadn't sense enough to own even a strip of back yard in Trixer in which a derrick might be erected when Trixer struck oil. She was the kind of woman Gorman would love; he was in love with some such woman, Letetia was convinced, the society kind who dressed wonderfully and intrigued men and did not have to eat at cafeterias.

Gorman was the secretive kind; there was a door opening from his private office into the hall, and often he let people in through that door, and while they were there with him their conversation was in murmurs. Gorman was not in the office much, out most of the day; but frequently he stayed in the office until late at night, for long after she went home there were lights in his office windows. From her room in the cheap rooming house up on the Angel's Flight she looked down on the office building and could see that the windows of his private room were lighted. More than once she had seen Gorman draw down those shades; his figure was distinctly outlined by the bright light behind him. She had wondered and wondered who was with him. Did a woman come to see him there?

It gave Letetia an angry heartache: all the romance came to other people. Night after night she had sat alone in her small room, except when she ventured down into the city to a picture show. Occasionally she had journeyed out to Huntington Park to see a girl she had known in Trixer who was married now to a man who was doing some oil well work near Los Angeles. There were two girls in the house where Letetia roomed, but she avoided them—there was something queer about those girls, and Letetia knew what it was.

She had come to Los Angeles with such high hopes: a few months and the utmost economy, and she would have her hateful teeth out. Some bright day Gorman would come into the office and she would smile and show a row of even white teeth; she would be altogether pretty. It had been her fixed idea that Gorman would not have brought her to Los Angeles unless he had liked her, but it was evident now that he had no interest in her whatever. He treated her like a bit of office furniture. Why had he brought her to Los Angeles, she'd like to know?

A PERSONAL MESSAGE OF GREAT IMPORTANCE TO ALL AMBITIOUS SALESMEN NOW EMPLOYED.

Ambitious men—to you I direct this advertisement. When I say ambitious men I don't mean "wishers." I mean real men—men fired with real ambition, who want real success in a big way—men who realize real success does not come like a whirlwind over night, but by steadily going forward in the right direction. The really ambitious man worships the Goddess Success. To her he will sell himself body and soul. To gain her favor he will work day and night, if necessary; suffer privations, and offer many self-sacrifices. To this type of man [may we hope there are many of them in Chicago] real success is awaiting them.

If you are one of the real ambitious type, you are now employed. Ambitious men are never idle. That your present occupation does not offer the possibilities that your definite aim in life demands is certain, or you would not be reading this advertisement. Many an ambitious man is marking time in a position offering scant possibilities for the future, but hesitates to make a change because of the uncertainty of any new business.

To you I have an unusual proposition to offer.

For 12 years I have watched the material progress of this business and the remarkable advancement made by many men in this business.

I therefore write you from the viewpoint of a man who from intimate contact knows exactly what the conditions are.

I know the business opportunity in this company from three definite angles.

In the first place, I understand it from the company's point of view. I know what the inside picture is and can vouch for the sincerity and fairness of the organization.

In the second place, I know what the men themselves think of it, which, to you, is more important.

And, finally, I know the opportunity from my own personal experience, which is best of all.

Now, let me tell you seriously about this proposition. We are constantly attracting real salesmen to our organization. We believe that the best way to break into this business is to devote a few hours a night, two or three nights a week, in your spare time, until you have convinced yourself that the opportunity would warrant your making a permanent connection. We will give you the same personal co-operation that is given our permanent salesmen. You will not be required to canvass. You will be required to call upon three or four prospects a week who have written us in response to our advertisements. If you sell one a week, your earnings for your spare time will be over $25 a week. Several of our part time men are now earning in excess of $50 per week.

In addition to having real ambition, you must have real selling instinct—ability to sense constructive selling points and express them effectively—in the way that is possible only for a man of character and integrity.

You should have vision and believe in the wonderful growth of Chicago.

I have seen many men who possess these qualifications join this organization in making it possible for the thousands of Chicagoans to own their own homes and advance to important and lucrative positions. I have seen them make that progress in short periods of time.

These men are here in this organization now. You can meet them personally. They will tell you themselves what their experience has been. They will tell you of the substantial incomes which their commissions have brought them in their spare time. Their success should challenge your interest.

You are primarily interested, and rightly so, in your own business success. There is no question about the bigness and genuineness of this opportunity. It reaches out to every person in Chicago—every one must have a home to live in. It is wholly a question of the valuation you place upon yourself. This I want to say very earnestly to you: If you have not found your niche, and if you have backbone enough, after working all day, to tackle this proposition in your spare time, make it your business to come to our office Monday evening, at 7:30 promptly, where our entire plan and proposition will be outlined in full at a special lecture. Put yourself to that trouble, and I will take the responsibility of promising you that our meeting will be worth the trouble.

FRANK A. VANNERSTROM
DEPARTMENT,
ARTHUR T. McINTOSH & CO.,

A SALARY OF $100 PER WEEK.

would not be accepted by many of our salesmen in exchange for the proposition they now have.

We offer the same proposition to 5 more men of the type we want, these men must be interested in getting in the most active, profitable business in Chicago, namely real estate.

Although property is rapidly being sold in various sections of Chicago the POPULAR demand is for the NORTH SHORE.

We are opening a beautiful NORTH SHORE property surrounded by beautiful homes, 4 blocks from the lake, 28 minutes from the loop. Although we are not permitting any one to buy until our formal opening, we are receiving many inquiries and offers to buy.

A big advertising campaign will be started and NO MORE men put on, it being the desire to enable a FEW to make BIG money and keep our organization SELECT.

In my proposition two things are eliminated; the LOCATION resistance and the PRICE resistance.

The men we employ will have high grade permanent positions with earnings which can reasonably be in excess of $100 PER WEEK.

If interested in obtaining a position of this character, ask for a personal interview with

Skokie Heights
In Glencoe on the North Shore—35 Minutes from Madison-st.

These sites are situated in one of the North Shore's finest residence districts and in an environment of unusual natural beauty.

The land is very high and partially wooded, with fine old forest trees—it is perhaps the most unique artistic development of the North Shore.

The lots average in width 100 feet; in depth, 200 feet.

The prices range from $65 to $100 per front foot—from five to ten thousand dollars per lot, which is less than prices obtained for property almost immediately adjacent.

Skokie Heights is situated in Glencoe, between Skokie and Green Bay-rds., just north of the corner of Skokie-rd. and Bluff-st.

Motor directly to the office on the property or to our office on Park-av., opposite the Northwestern station, or come via North Shore Electric or Northwestern railroad, or to make appointment phone

REAL ESTATE—SUBURBAN—WEST.

I HAVE SEARCHED A YEAR

for the ideal location; that is, a spot where I could build my home and rest assured my family and I would be protected against any undesirable element.

I realized that to find this environment I must go to the suburbs. But I found that in most suburbs the transportation was so bad during certain times of the day that I would have to wait sometimes as long as two hours for a train, so my ideal place must have transportation. I wanted a place where I had improvements, where I could be protected against a foreign element; where no shacks, flats, or apartments could be built; where every lot was nicely restricted as to cost of home; where a building line had been established; where all my neighbors would be of the type with whom I would be proud to have my family associate.

In short, the summing up of my "ideal location" means: First, flawless transportation; second, real environment, and, last but not least, the location and price must be such that if at any time I should want to sell I would realize a substantial profit.

After searching for more than a year covering every section of Chicago and suburbs, I have found my ideal location. Of course, it is in the suburbs. It is west of Chicago; it has transportation that is unsurpassed. The longest wait any time during the day is less than 15 minutes, ofttimes only 6 or 7 minutes.

This ideal location was formerly owned by Judge Elbert H. Gary. This most beautiful estate has been divided into several choice restricted homesites. These are the finest residential lots ever offered to the public. They have improvements, are not in the middle of a prairie, have beautiful homes all around them, and are to be offered to Americans only, who appreciate these ideal locations. You may never have the opportunity again to find a spot so desirable. If you will answer this ad I will be glad to send you further particulars without obligation on your part. "I must confess that I was not oversold on the used car idea, but if they are all like this, I would never buy anything else. I am getting between 20 and 25 miles on a gallon of gasoline, and that is about the only expense I have had up to date."

WEEKLY AVERAGE PRICES

LIVE STOCK.

Average prices for native beef cattle, hogs, sheep and lambs at Chicago for week:

| | Cattle. | Hogs. | Sheep. | Lambs. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Last week | $10.20 | $ 7.15 | $6.25 | $15.85 |
| Previous week | 10.00 | 6.65 | 5.65 | 15.65 |
| Cor. wk., 1922 | 8.90 | 10.35 | 6.60 | 12.25 |
| Cor. wk., 1921 | 8.05 | 8.45 | 4.85 | 11.85 |
| Cor. wk., 1920 | 15.35 | 15.15 | 7.85 | 14.05 |
| Cor. wk., 1915 | 9.25 | 7.60 | 6.10 | 8.50 |
| Av. 1913-'22 | $10.95 | $12.10 | $7.25 | $11.45 |

With hog receipts below general expectations and outside demand good, better grades ruled steady to strong and in spots slightly higher, while others sold slowly at steady to 10c lower prices. Top equaled previous day at $7.45, a number of loads bringing that price, against only one load Friday. Light hogs and weighty butchers reflected most strength, selling largely 10@15c above a week ago. However, owing to the larger proportion of cheaper grades on sale, which sold on local account, the average price figured 25c below Friday at $6.90, standing 5c above previous Saturday.

Last week's receipts of hogs, at 185,600, stand third largest since March, being 4,300 larger than previous week, 11,500 larger than a year ago, and 46,600 above the ten year average. Estimated average weight of hogs at 230 lbs dropped 10 lbs below previous week and 6 lbs under the ten year average. General average price last week at $7.15 advanced 50c over a week ago, but stands $3.20 below a year ago and $4.95 under the ten year average.

Desirable corn fed beef cattle closed 10@25c higher than a week ago, while other kinds finished the week generally lower, some grassy offerings being fully 50c lower, with undesirable butcher stock off most. Average price of good beef advanced 20c to $10.20, the highest since last November. Top steers reached $11.50, averaging 1,300@1,460 lbs.

Lamb Prices Widen.

Although all grades of lambs last week experienced the sharpest declines of the season, prices widened, with culls and inbetween kinds showing the most discount. Uneven declines ranged from $1.00@2.50, with "sorts" at the close heavier than usual. Nearly half of the 61,700 receipts were forwarded direct to local packers from the south, largely from Nashville and Louisville. Unfavorable reports from the dressed meat trade in the east, especially on weighty mutton and cull lambs, served as a weakening factor after mid-week. Aged sheep were comparatively scarce and showed little change in value.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 55,000 hogs and 18,000 sheep, against 19,368 cattle, 51,919 hogs and 9,952 sheep a week ago and 21,451 cattle, 58,113 hogs, and 12,265 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 52,000 cattle, 170,000 hogs and 63,000 sheep, against 57,185 cattle, 177,493 hogs, and 60,388 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs for Monday range from 43,000 to 67,000. F. R. Burrows marked 43,000, R. C. Griffith 45,000, F. Gehrmann and W. H. Overmann 50,000, W. S. Nicholson and H. H. Moore 52,000, E. R. Gentry 53,000, F. W. Waddell 54,000, G. M. Nicoll 55,000, J. M. Waters 57,000, E. S. Waterbury 59,000, William Trotter 65,000, and H. Williams 67,000.

In the butter and egg markets a fair business was under way, with no change in prices. Live hens were ½c lower.

Richardson Builds Big Business Bigger with Tribune Advertising

THIS letter tells a story that should make many a business man check his advertising expenditures with advertising results. Richardson started using The Chicago Tribune in 1913. Since then, the following lineage has been used each year:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1913 | 2,482 | 1918 | 25,829 |
| 1914 | 15,081 | 1919 | 46,006 |
| 1915 | 24,358 | 1920 | 74,538 |
| 1916 | 20,925 | 1921 | 90,463 |
| 1917 | 22,299 | 1922 | 90,232 |

During 1922 Richardson's advertising in Chicago newspapers—reduced to the common denominator of Millines—was as follows:

|---|---|
| Tribune | 44,372 Millines |
| American | 6,812 Millines |
| Herald-Ex. | 2,433 Millines |
| News | 1,189 Millines |

In short, the spectacular growth of this big rug and furniture house during the past decade has been due (from the advertising standpoint) to concentration in one productive medium.

Mr. Wm. Donahue,
c/o The Chicago Tribune,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Donahue:-

Just this morning we compiled some figures which we thought might be of interest to you. We have had such a steady increase in sales since the first of the year that we were led to analyze the reasons:

We have compared the first five months of 1923 with the corresponding period of 1922 and we find that we have given the Chicago Tribune 27% more copy in 1923 than in 1922.

For this same period, the total sales in all departments of our retail store have increased 46% in 1923 over 1922.

Since 80% of our newspaper advertising, which of course, is practically all the retail advertising we do, has been carried by the Chicago Tribune, we feel that the Tribune has been the dominating factor in this unusual increase which we have enjoyed.

Persistent advertising, week in and week out, is certainly having its logical effect in the progress of our store.

Yours very truly,

O. W. RICHARDSON & CO.

TOURING CAR

Consider for a moment its low first cost, its exceptionally modest maintenance requirements, its almost negligible repair and replacement needs, and, finally, the long years of hard service it is built to render.

Then it becomes clear at once why the purchase of a Dodge Brothers Touring Car is universally thought of as an exercise of sound business judgment.

Where maids are scarce

It isn't that you mind housework so much—there's a good deal of it that you like. But how you wish you had someone to wash the dishes. It makes your hands so hard, so rough and red.

Why often you're almost ashamed of them. They seem fairly to cry out that you do your own work.

Today, with Lux for washing dishes, you don't have to worry about your hands. It was harsh kitchen soap that played such havoc with them, drying the oils they depend on for their good looks. Nature secreted these oils just underneath the chiffon-thin outer skin to keep the hands soft and satiny smooth. They make the skin the loveliest of all things to touch.

When these oils are drained dry by harsh kitchen soap the skin becomes rough and scratchy.

Lux won't dry these important oils. It won't roughen or redden your hands even gradually. It is as easy on them as fine toilet soap.

54 DISHWASHINGS IN A SINGLE PACKAGE

54 dishwashings—that's all the dishes morning, noon and night for nearly three weeks! It seems incredible that a single package of Lux will go so far, but just try it out.

All you need to a dishpan is one teaspoonful. One teaspoonful for the breakfast and lunch dishes; for the dinner dishes, perhaps you will need two teaspoonfuls. Even so, a single package will do at least 54 dishwashings.

Don't let your hands tell of dishwashing any longer. Try Lux today for your dishes. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

Just one teaspoonful to a dishpan!

The Girl Who Was Afraid of Mice

Blue Ribbon Fiction

But When the Half-Breed Pirate, a Pretty Fellow, Chained Her and Her Lover on Deserted Islands Adjoining Each Other in the Desolate South Seas—Then She Proved a Heroine.

"The lady must be my lady anyways!"

RALPHSON accorded me the hospitality of an Englishman to another met abroad when we encountered at Santabella, asked me to dinner just before I left, and did me well. That would probably be the size of my knowledge of him, and his charming but rather childish little wife, but for a trifling accident after dinner. We were in their drawing room and she was singing to us—quite nicely—when a mouse ran in from the patio and across the drawing room floor. She stopped her singing and screamed instead, sat upon the keyboard with her feet on the music stool, shivered and even whimpered a little. Ralphson held her in his Herculean arm and soothed her and stroked her hair. It was pleasant to me to see the gentleness of the huge, rather roughish man with his fragile little wife. I like good lovers, even if they are married.

I made some fatuous remark about the cowardice of women when he was seeing me home to my hotel and he laughed.

"Cowards?" he said. "O, no! Women aren't cowards because they funk little things. They don't funk big ones. Take the little missus, and she's all a woman. She is the best man in Santabella really. If the mouse had been a lion and had attacked me she would have stood up to it. Women are like that. I could tell you a story of a girl who was afraid of mice for herself and fought the very devil for a man, and a man who wasn't specially worth it."

"Come in and have a whisky and soda and tell me," I suggested.

"Lime juice and soda," he corrected. "I don't touch spirits nowadays. She won't let me. I shall catch it for being so long when I go back. However, it's a story that I like to tell, and, as you're a writing man in search of copy, you might make something of it."

He told me this story:

FOUR years ago a young Englishman, who gave the name of Smith, came to Salvado. It's one of the smaller islands where they do a bit in coral; rather out of the way of the ordinary traffic. Probably that was why he went there. He owned he'd been in a few scrapes, and he was certainly too fond of drink. He was a big young chap and as strong as an ox, otherwise a very ordinary chap; "even as you and me!" as Kipling has it.

There was a girl staying there who'd scream at a mouse and did. In fact it was the first thing he knew her to do. It introduced them. She had come to visit her uncle, old Plum Dacre, for a month. Smith was passing Plum's bungalow and heard her screech; thought that a woman was being murdered; rushed in—the young ass!—nearly assaulted old Plum, who was rushing about with a walking stick. He was only after the mouse, but Smith fancied at first that he was after the girl.

"Don't be a donkey. It's a mouse." That was her introductory salutation. Old Plum laughed very much. So did the others afterwards.

It ended by big Smith making friends with them and becoming engaged on probation. He was to satisfy the girl's people that he had reformed and given up drink before it was a pukka engagement. Old Plum says that he made the arrangement, but I fancy it was the girl herself. She was a determined little beggar—like my missus—if she was frightened of mice. She declared—quite correctly—that she could manage big Smith all right. "You do it by kindness," she explained. "Look at elephants. They're even bigger; and the little elephant boys do just what they like with them." She had been born in India. That was how she knew the way to deal with elephants—and big Smith.

The great youth was very gone on the little girl, and very honestly determined to reform. So they were gloriously happy at Salvado. There was a half breed called Basto, who lived there on and off, and between whiles was rumored to something like a pirate, with a lair on one of the islands. There are hundreds of them, you know, and many uninhabited. He was a regular desperado and was believed to have earned hanging a dozen times, if it could be brought home to him. Anyhoy, he had made plenty of money somehow and some of the white women wouldn't have been above marrying him for it. One at least had touched his coin without marrying him. Plum always said that, if it had been a free country and he'd been ruler, he'd have hanged her! So would I. However, most people believed that she didn't want Basto merely for his money. He had a curious attraction for many women—including some who had been born white by mistake!—and was proud of it; was reported to have boasted in his cups (that was how they heard of his piracy) that if he captured a white woman she'd be safe from him but she wouldn't be safe from herself. There's a kind of woman that isn't; that a hefty colored man has some damned lure for.

Well, Basto took it into his half colored head—blackish putty was his ground tone—that he wanted Mabel Dacre, tried to frighten big Smith off by threats. Big Smith wasn't that sort of boy. He was quick as well as strong, managed to get hold of Basto's knife and revolver, and then wiped the floor with him, and Basto thought it wise to leave the place. He wasn't so much afraid of Smith as of old Plum Dacre. Plum's idea wasn't to scrap with him but to lynch him. Not a bad idea either! Smith was against it then, but he wouldn't be now.

Well, the little girl extended her month at Salvado to two, and then she had to go home to her parents in Bonturna. Smith went with her to be introduced and prove his reformation under the paternal eye. They went in a schooner called the Alan Hope.

Nobody had any suspicion of the vessel. It had been running for fifteen years, doing a respectable coasting trade, and belonged to the Filmer Brothers, whose depot here I look after; three of the straightest old propositions who ever traded. The crew were the usual Dagoes, but old Captain Hardy was a decent man and much respected and knew how to handle Dagoes. Sivers, the first (and only) officer, was a gentleman down on his luck with nothing but drink against him—an English gentleman, drunk or sober. However, he had a bout, or fever, or something—drugged he always said afterwards—and had to be left behind. A man named Hackle was taken on in his place. He was hanged at Bonturna a while afterwards for the murder of poor old Hardy. A bookful of crimes came out at his trial, and that he was a pal of Basto, but nothing was known against him then.

THE third day out he said that Hardy was ill (he was dead, in fact—poisoned) and that he must call at Clarkson's Bay, because old Clarkson was as good as a doctor and might be able to do something for the old chap. They went in just after dusk. Big Smith and little Mabel were leaning on the ship's rail (arms touching), and she gripped him suddenly.

"Bob!" she whispered. "This isn't Clarkson's Bay!"

"Why!" he said. "You can't see, my dear, not having cat's eyes!"

"It's what I can't see that tells me!" she whispered. "At Clarkson's Bay the anchorage is quite close in. You can always see some lights and the outline of the shore. Besides, there's a long spit runs out—just over there—on the left. We've passed three or four little islands or reefs; and I don't remember them. . . . Over there! Look! Those two pointed rocks close together . . . Bob! It isn't Clarkson's Bay!"

"Well," he said, "what about it? It's somewhere else."

"Yes," she agreed. "I know I'm a nervous little cat. I am frightened, boy. . . . Bob, go and ask Captain Hardy about it, if he's well enough to talk."

Big Smith went down to ask for the captain. Hackle and Co. got him in the alley-way; cloth over his head; chloroform on it. A similar trick was played on his little girl. They didn't know much more till they found themselves ashore in the morning; ashore somewhere; they had no idea where. It was, as a matter of fact, No. 7 of the group called the V Islands, from their arrangement. They were supposed to be uninhabited, but Basto had his hiding place there and was head of quite a little colony. All this they learned afterwards. What they knew then was that they were hauled along (apart) to a big tent on an open beach with stumpy cliffs behind it and found Basto seated in a deck chair (with a canopy) outside it, dressed in a sort of naval drill uniform and smoking a big cigar.

"You are in my power," he stated; "but I behave to you as a gentleman. Oh, yes! On condition!"

"That," big Smith remarked, "doesn't sound quite the gentleman."

Basto waved his hands and puffed at the big cigar.

"If I was not," he answered, "I just take the lady; and the gentleman I hang or shoot, as he prefer. You are in my power, see. In my power."

"If you'd tell them to unbind my arms——" big Smith spluttered.

"On condition," Basto offered. "The lady must be my lady anyways, if I choose. She cannot help. But I want a wife of her own accord. So I say to her come to me willing, and go to Clarkson's Bay and marry me there. The old Clarkson man has the right to do it. Consul, he call himself. When she married to me then you shall go. For it is not my way to force. No, no! Plenties come to me of her own accord, and I will wait for that."

"Then," said the girl who was afraid of a mouse, "you will wait forever."

"And he will be killed forever," Basto said. "Perhaps you will be willing to save his life."

"Don't you, Mab," big Smith cried. "Let him kill me. I don't care."

That was a figure of speech, of course. He meant that he cared more for the girl than for his life.

The girl buried her face in her hands.

"There's one thing, you pretty devil," big Smith shouted. "If you kill me your chance of her coming willing is gone."

Basto took the cigar out of his mouth and considered.

"Damn!" he said presently. "That is point. . . . Yes! . . . . Well, I say not willing; but of her own offer and accord . . . And you—you shall live to see her come. I take a gentleman's revenge." He spat toward big Smith. "See! I could spit on you. I could have you beat. I could have you starve. But I do none of these things. You shall just learn that she must. Just that! . . . Now you go where you go; and know this. There you stay until you die; until she ask to come herself to me and set you free; and you shall beg of her to ask. . . ., You smile at one another; because you will be there together, you think, eh? Ah! You will see!"

He laughed, spoke to the guards in a language which they did not understand, and the guards took them away.

They took them down to the edge of the beach; carried the girl through the surf and lifted her into a rowboat; made big Smith walk through it into another.

"Here!" he shouted. "You said we were to go together. Basto, if there's anything of the gentleman in you—anything of the man—— Damn it! Tell them to untie me and fight it out for her."

Basto sauntered down to the edge of the water, swaggering and puffing at his cigar.

"Suppose," he asked the girl, "we have a fair fight and I kill him; fight before you that you shall see fair? Will you come to me then willing? Of your own accord?"

"Say 'yes,' Mab," big Smith begged.

The girl who was afraid of a mouse spat in the water toward Basto.

"You wouldn't fight fair," she said.

That was probably unjust. Anyhow, Basto's black putty face turned to white putty with rage. He stepped into the water beside the boat.

"Hold her!" he commanded.

THE boatmen held her. Big Smith struggled with his bonds. He felt as if he would burst a blood vessel. Basto put his lips to within a fraction of an inch of hers, then pushed her head away.

She sank upon her stone seat—

"See!" he said. "I could and do not! . . . Now you know that I am a gentleman of my word."

"Let us fight, Mab," big Smith cried. "You'd see that it was all fair."

"Bob!" she cried. "If you won his men would kill you. Don't you see that?"

"It is a lie," Basto cried. "Now I will not fight. . . . And you shall beg to come to me. And he shall hear you. . . . Shall hear you. . . . Take them away."

The boatmen rowed off with them, keeping the boats a few yards apart.

"Even if they had killed me afterwards," big Smith called, "I should have killed him."

"I want you alive, my dear," called back the girl who was afraid of a mouse. "As for killing him, if he'd killed you, I'd have found a chance to kill him all right!"

"I don't understand you," said big Smith.

"You haven't got to," said she. "Only love me!"

"Now I do understand you," cried big Smith.

He didn't—and doesn't—of course!

THEY rowed them over to two rocks, shaped like two bulky, irregular pyramids, which stood up in the water—the two that they had seen the night before. They were something over half a mile from the shore and something under half a mile from a bar of discontinuous reefs, islets, rocks, and shallows; just opposite the largest break in these, which looked like a channel for moderate sized vessels. The pyramid rocks stood about a hundred feet high, were perhaps a hundred feet through their bases, or rather the areas on which they stood were about this diameter, including a surround of boulders and small patches of beach and stones. They were separated by a channel which was rather less than a hundred feet in width; eighty, perhaps. This ran more or less parallel with the shore, so that the nearer 'pyramid'—'cone' would describe it almost as well—hid the channel from the mainland.

The boatmen rowed round into the channel. Then the boats separated. The boat carrying big Smith went to the inner rock and the one with Mabel to the outer rock. They made them climb up boulders and along ledges until they reached two large caves in the respective rocks, almost opposite to each other, but his a trifle higher. Some way inside each cave there was a large stone, shaped rather like a table, with a stone ledge at the side which would serve for a seat. There was a ring fixed in each table with an iron chain to it; a very heavy, strong chain in his case, a much lighter chain—but strong enough!—in hers.

Their escorts put food—bread, water, fruit, and some salted meat—upon the tables. Then they fastened great anklets upon each of them, and these to the chains attached with S-shaped hooks, which they hammered close upon big stones. Then they cut the ropes which bound him—the girl had not been bound—and left them.

Big Smith's arms were too badly cramped for him to make an attack upon his guards even when he was free. He sank upon his stone seat and the girl upon hers. They said nothing until the boats had rowed so far away that the splash of their oars and even their thud in the rowlocks were inaudible. Then he staggered as far toward the mouth of his cave—and her—as his chain would allow.

"My God, Mab!" he cried. "You should have let me fight him." She did not speak. "Mab! Answer me! . . . Mab!"

She did not answer for a long time. He struggled madly against his chain—though he knew the struggle to be quite useless—until he was too short of breath to do more than call 'Mab!' at intervals. Presently she answered faintly.

"All—right. . . . Fainted . . . I expect. . . . All right, dear." She got on her feet presently and came as near as she could to the mouth of her cave and him. "Bob! Can't you cut it—break it—somehow—and come to me?" . . . Bob!"

"Look at it, Mab," he said, and held up his massive chain for her to see. "Look at it. It's impossible, my dear."

"Then," she said, "I must break mine. I shall in time. It's quite thin compared with yours. And come to you."

"No . . . No . . . You can't swim."

"If I can get free from the chain I shall practice and learn to swim. Don't despair, dear. If there's any way of doing it I shall do it for you."

"Mab!" he called. "God bless you. You're a better man than I, and braver."

"I am only brave for you!" she said. "Bob! I've a man's knife. It has a saw in it and a file. I took it without his noticing when they lifted me from the boat. I only thought then of stabbing myself if the need came—or Basto. But now I think it might cut through one of these links in time. . . . And then yours. Would it, do you think?"

"Not mine," he thought. "Yours, perhaps, in time."

"I shall keep it for yours then," she decided. "They will be the difficulty. I shall try to wear mine away some other way."

"You never will," he declared.

"I shall always try," she asserted. She sounded as though she wanted to sob, but wouldn't.

"Mabbie," he cried, "you're wonderful. Wonderful!"

"Only to you," she told him, "and for you, perhaps. I shall try to open this S thing that fastens the ring round my ankle to the chain, because then I should be free from the whole chain. You try yours; rub it against the stones; anything."

She sat down near the edge of the cave and began twisting the S fastening backwards and forwards to try to wear the edges.

"It may take a year," she called; "but I shall do it. If only he'll leave us alone for a year! I'm so afraid that he'll change his mind. They'll come again in a week to bring more food. They told me it had to last for a week. Let's see what we can do before then."

AT the end of the week she did not think she had done anything except "rub one end of the S shiny; but that must mean something has rubbed off, though we can't see."

He reckoned that a hundred years would be required to open his fastening.

The men came at the end of a week. They brought more food and drink, and a pencil and block of paper for Mabel to write to Basto when she wished to be fetched to him.

"That will be never," she told big Smith after the men had gone. "And I should think I'd wear away the edge of the fastening in a year. It is very shiny, Bob. Every little wear must tell, though we can't see it."

"I should think there was more hope of forcing it apart, bit by bit," he said. "Mine's too thick. I've tried. By Jove! Haven't I tried! Can you get the handle of the knife in and keep forcing and forcing it?"

"I am keeping the knife for you," she answered. "Your chain will be the difficulty. I'll try to get the end of my S on a ring and hang with all my weight upon it; and keep on doing that."

She could only get just the edge of the S caught to pull against at first; but she tried and tried a hundred times a day. (So did he; but he never saw any result.) Just after their sixth supply of food had come (and another blanket apiece, as the weather was less warm) she cried out to him across the channel in the middle of the night.

"Bob! Bob! I can't see; but I've been fiddling about in the dark; and I think I've got the end of the S hooked into a ring. Now I shall be able to pull on it till it opens."

Day by day after that she "thought it was giving just a little." The day before the seventh supply arrived she "felt sure it was opening." The day after the supply came she announced hysterically that she was free.

"And now," she said, "I've got to learn to swim."

"You can't, girlie," he warned her, "unless you can find a shallow place. There's a current through here. You'll drown."

She got down to the foot of the rock without much difficulty, his rock hiding her from view from the shore; but she could find no shallow. She proposed desperately to go in holding to the seaweed and to try to swim a stroke or two, and then catch on again—if she could. He protested wildly.

"You'd drown yourself, little girl! Drown yourself! . . . And I should hear you calling out. And me chained here. Anything but that!"

"Then," she said, "I'll tear my blanket in strips and make a rope of that."

"No, no!" he protested. "They'd miss the blanket when they come. I can't get free in a week, you know; not even with the knife . . . I know, Mab. They've left the ropes I was bound with lying here; the pieces of them. I'll fasten them together and make them into a ball and throw it over. You can tie on to the rope while you learn."

"Can you throw it so far, Bob?"

"Well, I'll make three or four smaller balls. I can throw them into your cave all right; but mind you fasten them together strongly. Tie the knots like I do—weaver's knots. Those won't slip."

He threw over his cut bonds in three portions. Two "balls" went into her cave. One fell outside on the rock, on a place which she could not reach by climbing; but by swinging the rest of the rope she was able to hit it, after many attempts, and knock it within her reach.

There was a knob of rock, she assured him, to which she could fasten one end of the rope; and she would have the other end fast round one arm (to tie it round her body would not leave length enough). He instructed her across the gulf how she was to swim; laid down on the ground, and on his table, and illustrated the motions as well as his chain would allow. He could not kick out much with the heavily manacled leg (the right). He urged her and urged her to make sure of her fastenings. "Be sure it can't slip off the knob, Mab. Be sure!"

SO long as he lives, he has often said, he will never forget the harrowing suspense when she went down to make her first attempt at swimming. His chain would not allow him to approach near enough to the ledge outside his cave to see the channel.

"Now, don't you worry," she told him before she went down. "I shan't be a bit frightened. If you hear me gasping it will only be the cold water; and swallowing some, I expect."

"Mab!" he said. "God bless you, Mab! My brave Mab!"

"I'm not brave really," she denied, "only for you!"

She made no cry to distress him all the while she was floundering in the water; but he could hear her splutter and gasp. She cried when she came back to the cave. She wasn't frightened, she declared, or very tired; "but the water will get in my mouth, Bob! And I didn't seem to swim a bit!"

For several days her report was the same. Then she noticed that the dry seaweed floated easily. She made a great cushion of that and tied it under her chin, and "swallowed less water, anyway. So I didn't mind so much."

After the boat which brought the eighth week's supplies had come and gone she had her bath for that day and reported distinct progress. She could keep up for about half a minute, she said, and get along a little. She had only to learn to swim well enough to get across before the current carried her out of the channel.

By the end of that week she declared that she could swim alongside her rock for quite a long time, even without the seaweed cushion; "better without it, now," she thought. "In a week or two I shall be over to you."

As a matter of fact, she came the afternoon after the ninth lot of supplies had arrived. She did not tell him of her intention, wishing to surprise him. He thought that she seemed a long while in the water and began to call "Mab! . . . Mab! . . . Mabbie! . . . Has anything happened? . . . Mab!"

"Ssh!" cried her voice from what seemed an unfamiliar direction. "It's all right. All right! . . . I'm only winded. . . . I'm over here!"

—and he upon his.

"Mabbie! . . . Mabbie! Is that you coming? You're outside, aren't you? . . . Why don't you come?"

"Well—! Throw your blanket to me." A wet hand showed round the corner of the opening. . . . Caught the blanket . . . He will never forget the little blanketed figure with the little wet face above it. The little wet face against his!

"I was just a wee bit nervous, Bob. But I thought you'd like to have me. . . . Say you do! . . ."

"Do!" . . . O! My dear! . . . You brave girl!"

"You know I'm not really brave, Bob, except when I do things for you. . . . I've brought the knife; tied round my neck. See! Now we've got to unfasten you!"

Forcing his heavy chain, however, was a very different task from forcing hers. They attacked the S which fastened it to his anklet in many ways, filed at the edges, tried to force it open by using the closed knife as a lever. The file made little impression before the roughness wore off it. (It wasn't much stouter than a fingernail file!) The handle of the knife cracked. They tried to wedge in sharp stones by hammering them with large stones. The only certain effect was to break the stones. They tried to fancy that there was some infinitesimal effect upon the iron, but they were afraid that their fancy was only fancy. They scraped at the edge with the blade of the knife.

"We have certainly blunted the edge," she declared. "So we must have scraped something off the S. Besides, it's marked. Keep rubbing that same place against the anklet ring, Bob; always the same part of the ring. Then it will wear that, too, and make an easier place to get it off. I feel sure it's worn a little."

He thought that, too, but the little was very little.

"It may take a year," he lamented, "and before then Basto will change his mind about being a gentleman."

"I don't know," she said. "He prides himself on being a gentleman, calls himself English; a white man. Nobody prides himself on his whiteness so much as a man who's three-quarters black!"

However, the black three-quarters of Basto was in evidence when the tenth supply boat came. He was in it; went without the boatmen to take the supplies to Mabel—who, as usual, had slipped the S into her anklet ring again for the occasion. Of course she had swum back to her own cave. She swam the channel daily now, and told Bob that she was quite a good swimmer and rather enjoyed the swimming. (This was an exaggeration. She always funked the journeys, but she wouldn't worry him.)

"If you do not make up your mind," Basto threatened her, "I shall have to help you to do it, or help him to help you. He is in my power, you know."

"You can easily make up my mind to hate you for ever," she said. "If you hurt him I shall just wait my chance to kill you some day. Now I excuse you a little because you have a little white in you. I don't think it is much. If I knew it were twice as much——"

"Yes," he cried eagerly. "Yes?"

"You are making me think it is only half as much as you say," she told him. "Perhaps none at all."

"Bah!" he cried. "You only try to get over me. I wait a week or two, but . . I will be a gentleman to you, but I will be black devil to him. I warn him today; warn him fair!"

"If you are not gentleman enough to advise her for her good," he told big Smith, "I will not be gentleman to you. Next week I will send you only three-quarters as much as now to eat and drink; the next week half; then a quarter; then none, till she send for me. She will send before she see you die before her eyes. If I were not gentleman I would beat you."

"Come within my reach!" big Smith roared.

Basto laughed and turned on his heel. "It's no use, dear," big Smith said when Baston had gone and she had swum across. "No manner of use! Not troubling over me. You can't save me. So save yourself. I'll tell you what you can do. Hide behind a boulder near the place where they land. When they have gone up to your cave jump into the boat and make off. Of course they'll send a boat off after you from the shore, but you'll have a good start before they can make them understand, and you may see a ship. It's the only chance."

"I shall never leave you," said the girl who was afraid of a mouse. "Never! . . . When you are free we'll get the boat like that and go together."

"I'd die easier if you had escaped," he assured her.

"You needn't be afraid about me," she told him. "If they kill you I can always drown myself. I can't swim very long. So that's all right. Now I'll go and look for another pointed stone. They're so hard to find, Bob."

"Knock corners off the rock, or bash one big stone on another," he told her. "You'll get pointed bits like that."

She obtained plenty of sharp pieces of stone in that way. They hammered them into the end of the S which they were assaulting; believed at the end of each day that the opening was microscopically larger; felt sure at the end of the week, as they had measured with a portion of the knife.

His eleventh week's supplies were reduced as Basto had threatened, but there were some extra dainties for the girl. She carried a share across on top of her head, tied in her long hair.

During that week they found that they could get rather stouter wedges into the opening of the S and that by striking these violently sideways they moved the iron a trifle. This broke a wedge each time, and the procuring of suitable wedges was difficult. So the progress was still slow, but now it was obvious.

His twelfth week's supplies were halved—they thought halved ungenerously; and Basto sent a note to say that the next week, if she did not send for him, he should send for big Smith, "because I am genlman, and wil give him a quiker deth than starv. So thinnk well."

That week they worked by night, as well as day, at driving the wedges in and breaking them so as to jolt one end of the S sideways. Each trifling bend made further bending easier. They could almost get the S off before the supply boat came; almost, but not quite.

There were no provisions for big Smith that time. There was no need, the message said. For unless Mabel went to Basto at her own request the boat would come back for "the man" at dusk.

"Tell him," she said, "he is no gentleman."

As soon as the boat was gone she swam over; went up to big Smith with some wedges.

"Hammer them in while I go and break off more," she said. "We've about two hours. . . . Bob, I'll hammer them off like mad."

He arranged the S very carefully, with stones under to keep it in position for the blow; struck furiously. She heard him as she climbed down to the place where she found the best stones for breaking into wedges. . . . About half an hour before dusk the S came off.

He laughed funnily.

She sat down and clung to him.

"I mustn't faint," she kept saying. "I mustn't faint. There isn't time!"

They arranged that he was to crouch between two big boulders near the place where the boat landed on his side. When the guards went up to his cave to fetch him he was to slip out, into the boat, and row over to her side, where she was to be waiting behind a big rock, with the provisions which they had just brought her. Then they would go away.

"Of course," he said, "if they have pistols they'll fire; but it will be darkish, luckily. You get down in the bottom of the boat. I'll row. It will take them a good while to communicate with the people ashore. In the dark we might get away. Courage, girlie! . . . By Jove! It's a bit absurd, my preaching courage to you!"

"I'm not brave really," said the girl who was afraid of a mouse. "It's only . . . Of course I'm not so afraid of things hurting me as I'm afraid of things hurting you. You see what I mean."

"I see," he said. "I see! . . . I've been a lot of bad things, Mab, and I expect I'll be a lot more; but I—I'm not afraid I'll ever be bad to you."

I really don't think he ever will be. I trust the beggar so far as that, though, as I said, he's nothing much.

IT was quite dusk when the boat came. Basto was in it; and it went to the girl's side first. He left the men—there were three—in the boat, which was a small gig, and commenced to climb up to Mabel's cave. The boat was not left untended, as they had expected! Plans always go wrong like that!

Big Smith slipped into the water and swam across quietly. The current swishing through the channel made enough noise to cover what little sound he made, and they did not notice him in the dusk. He found swimming rather hard work, with the heavy anklet weighing down one leg, especially as he had to bear up against the current. He expected to be knocked on the head as he tried to get into the dinghey, but, of course, he had to try.

No doubt he would have been overpowered, but as he put his hand on the side the girl who was afraid of a mouse screeched and jumped out from her rock to draw the attention of the boatmen from him. The men in the boat jumped up and stared at her. He got in by clutching at one; threw him and another into the water. The third stumbled and fell over the swaying gunwale—with the assistance of a kick. Basto yelled from the empty cave about just then. Big Smith held out his hand to the girl.

"Steady!" he said. "Don't spill the water!"

He took the water bottle from her and pushed the cork well in. (That, she told him afterwards, was real courage; man's courage! She, she said, had "quite lost her head!") He made her lie down in the stern of the boat; drove back the swimmers with the oars; wasn't very gentle over it; believes that he killed one, but doesn't tell her so. He pushed off before Basto was half way down the rock.

"Good-by, gentleman," he called, and rowed off into the night. Basto fired a little later; five shots; but none came near them. They were nearly out of the channel before he got down to the edge of the water, and the boulders were between them till then. The girl clung to big Smith's knees as he rowed.

"If he had hit you, dear!" she sobbed. "If he had hit you! . . . You'll have to be brave for both of us now. I'm so frightened."

"We ought to be all right now," he thought. "It will be a long time before they tumble to it ashore. They're not likely to find us in the night; and perhaps we'll see a ship in the morning. You go to sleep, girlie. Poor old girlie! . . . Put your blanket round you."

"Where's your blanket?" she demanded, wiping her eyes and sitting up. It always roused her when she saw need to look after him.

"Left behind; couldn't swim with it, could I, old goose? I shan't want it. Rowing will keep me warm."

"And you can wrap yourself in my blanket and sleep while I take my turn," said the girl who was afraid of a mouse. "I'm going to!"

As a matter of fact, neither slept much; but they rested in turn. He rowed for long spells all night, and she for short ones. They simply rowed on and on in the same direction. One way was as good as another, he remarked, as they didn't know where they were, and, besides, boats would probably be sent after them in all directions. Their best chance was that of seeing some vessel in the morning.

In the morning they saw no ship; only a large sailing boat, almost in the eye of the sun when it rose. It headed for them. It contained Basto and five sturdy niggers, all armed.

"Could you kill me, with the old knife, Bob?" asked the girl who was afraid of a mouse. "And then yourself?"

He looked at the knife. The blade was like a saw, from its work upon his fetters. He gave a sound like a sob.

"Mab," he said. "Don't make me do it—with this! He may be a 'gentleman' to you; and I—I've nothing to fight with. The more harm I did to them the more likely they'd be to have a down on you afterward. It's no use, dear. . . You'll always remember that we've had each other this little time."

"He won't have me long, Bob," she said. "Not long."

So he and she surrendered quietly. There was very little said. They put big Smith in the bow of the sailing boat, with two great niggers keeping guard over him, cutlasses in hand. They put the girl in the stern on one side of the tiller. Basto sat holding it upon the other. They secured the little row boat astern, and sailed for his cursed island.

THEY had sailed for about a quarter of an hour. The girl seemed to have gone to sleep. One of the men called Basto's attention to the set of the sail, pointing upward. He looked upward; and suddenly the girl had the revolver from his belt. She always says that she 'was going to fire it; but it went off of its own accord when he clutched at it.' Anyhow he sank back in the corner of the seat, dragging the tiller with him for a moment, which brought the boat right into the wind, and caused the sails to come across with a violent gybe.

The heavy boom at the foot of the mainsail caught two of the men as it came across and half stunned them. Big Smith sprang upon his two guards as they turned round at the report. He almost broke the neck of one, and seized the second by the throat.

"Cover the others with the revolver, Mab!" he called.

She pointed the weapon at them, rather shakily. Big Smith made his way down to her; took the revolver from her hand, and covered the crew. His hand was very steady, and his eyes.

"Now," he said. "Off you go into the dinghey; all of you! Here. Take those beggars with you." He pointed to the two whom he had handled, who were unable to rise. "And that!" He pointed to Basto.

"That!" cried the girl. "Bob?" I haven't—haven't——?"

"No," he lied, pretending to feel Basto's heart with one hand. He kept the other ready with the revolver. "You haven't. Shall I finish him?"

"No . . . Bob! . . . No!"

"Very well," he said. "Take him, you chaps."

"He——" one of the niggers began; stopped at a look in big Smith's eye and lifted the dead man into the dinghey.

Big Smith saw them put him overboard afterwards; but the girl didn't. She wouldn't look that way; said that the very sight of them made her feel frightened. She had an attack of something like brain fever after they were picked up by a steamer later in the morning. Which was a lesson to big Smith to look after her, and not give occasion for her to need courage in future on his account! She's plenty for that . . . God bless her.

Of course you won't let out that she killed the scoundrel. I—you see, I went by the name of Smith in those times—I worked up a fine account (her people helped) about his recovering to be hanged, while she was ill. The little missus is frightened about some things. Do you know, she's really afraid of a mouse——!

She isn't afraid of me, though. Shan't I catch it for stopping here all this time!

"The man who's afraid of the girl who's afraid of mice," I laughed.

"Well," he owned. "In a way; only in a way. . . . It's the sort of girl that a decent man is afraid of!"

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

The Tables Turned.

"I'M a bit disposed to distrust versatility, myself," Mr. Rex alleged—"a deplorably bourgeois trait, I'm led to believe. And then, of course, it's none of my business. But don't you think, Miss Dracup—if you don't mind my asking—you're possibly a bit hard on that young person?"

"It's a genius," Miss Dracup made laconic reply, watching Mr. Pusey flit forward to the saloon companionway and disappear.

"And your prescription for genius is: Treat it rough?"

"For its own sake, Mr. Rex, genius needs to be kept in its place."

"Interesting to know how you find that theory works out with Mrs. Paramor."

Deliberately Miss Dracup brought unimpassioned eyes to bear upon the speaker. "Mrs. Paramor," she stated, "found her own place long before she found one for me, and sticks to it as I stick to mine. I seldom have to speak to her above an ordinary conversational tone."

"After that," Perley reflected in all meekness, "nothing but a little every day social toleration will do. Wonder would you find it disagreeable, Mrs. Paramor, if I were to sit at your feet and mumble a bit about Granny?"

"Not at all," Mrs. Paramor smiled—"please do."

There were only two chairs in that angle, and Perley was casting about for a third to appropriate when—"Take mine, Mr. Rex," the Englishwoman offered, turning back a cuff to consult her wrist watch. "I'm going below. Mrs. Paramor has been at work all morning, so there's some copying for me to do; and if I get at it before luncheon I'll have all afternoon to myself."

"Sure I'm not driving you away?"

Miss Dracup appeared to be genuinely amazed by the suggestion, then had a tolerably dry laugh, "O, no!" By this and by that Mr. Rex may with some reason have suspected that this young woman hadn't proved an instantaneous prey to his fascinations. And by the same token Miss Dracup may reasonably have walked off with the notion that she wouldn't, by Mr. Rex at least, be missed. "Plain spoken young woman," this last summed up first impressions in response to a glimmering look from Mrs. Paramor. "She may not pretend to know much about art, but she certainly knows what she doesn't like. If the key to her good graces may be indicated without any violation of confidence, I'd think it a favor."

"Yes?" said Mrs. Paramor with a note of languid amusement, "and are you truly so susceptible?"

"I don't like to tell you," he coyly demurred, "at all events, not yet." Neither was his attention visibly concerned with the retreat of the secretary. "Sensitive, I must admit, and if the shameful truth must out, calculating."

"You're surely going to tell me how?"

"Women can be swayed by passions stronger than love."

"It would upset me like fun to think I had an unfriend at court."

"Ah!" Mrs. Paramor notwithstanding seemed to be interested in the eccentric behavior of the horizon more than in the emotional life of Mr. Rex. Which the latter, to judge him in turn by his expression, held on the whole an encouraging symptom. Men who like to think themselves amateurs of women are not often enchanted by the promise of an easy conquest; and Perley no doubt found it reassuring to remark the address with which Mrs. Paramor had reasserted the equilibrium so mysteriously convulsed at the moment of their meeting. Those elusive betrayals of feeling she had been instant to control, and all with the deftest ease. Now only deepened shadows in the corners of her mouth that bespoke a mind pleasingly diverted, and drooping lashes that veiled a livelier candescence in her eyes, remained to witness the late disturbance of poise. Though a shrewd auditor might have esteemed the laziness of her tongue a trifle overstressed. . . . "Then I'm afraid I can't help you out. A court before everything must be disinterested."

"Think you could be, with me?"

Temporarily Mrs. Paramor lost interest in the antic horizon and turned a calm gaze upon the extraordinary creature at her side. "Really, Mr. Rex!" In that exclamation, for all its hint of mirth excited by such presumptuousness, an acute ear, again, might have detected an undernote of uneasiness, as though the speaker were questioning whether Mr. Rex entertained thoughts less trifling than the surface of his words and manner had been designed to convey. His ear, however, seemed not so keen; his response came with a readiness that should have proved grateful.

"In my status, I mean, of a good friend to Granny—as I take it you are, too."

"Indeed, I'm very fond of him." The nod that went with this was emphatic. "The most loyal of men . . ."

"I can tell you I was no end cut up when he didn't come aboard—haven't seen the old boy for longer than I like—two years and upwards, in fact."

"He's been living abroad about that long, I believe—resident representative of his banking house, in Paris."

"Why didn't I know it?" Perley lamented. "I could have had a day or two with him when we came through from Italy."

"Don't be so downhearted; Granny's to land in New York not long after we do; he's booked by the Mauretania——"

"But she's sailing today!" Perley indignantly remembered. "Then why in heaven's name couldn't he have arranged to cross with us?"

"He meant to, up to the last minute, when some stupid business or other detained him. But being Granny, he wouldn't disappoint Dracup and me entirely—motored us down to Cherbourg, just as he'd promised, and came out on the tender to see us off."

"That is like him," Perley affirmed. "I wonder. . . ."

But he wondered all to himself till Mrs. Paramor chose to prompt him, "You were saying——"

"Merely wondering how long you've known him."

"Granny?" Her look was limpid—in uncomfortable contrast, Perley must have felt it, to his own disingenuous stare. "O—years!"

"The old fox!"

That note of envious admiration was excuse enough for the moderately intrigued response, "Why an 'old fox'?"

"Well! you know . . ." Doubt dictated a pause. "Or perhaps you don't . . . At any rate, you do know Granny well enough, I gather, for me to talk about him behind his back, as I would to any friend. O! don't misunderstand me—it's nothing to his discredit, just a notion I've always had—that is, ever since he blew out of New York without any warning ten years or so ago—a notion that Granny's the sad, proud, silent victim of a hopeless love affair."

"Really?" Mrs. Paramor wasn't in any way reticent about the interest that this confidence awakened. She even shifted in her chair a little to face Perley more squarely, showing him a countenance whose candor was positively pellucid. "What makes you think that?"

"Stands to reason," Perley contended, "everything points that way. Men like Granny don't live long unmarried—not as a rule—unless they're lucky enough to carry life insurance in the form of a blighted romance."

"You think a broken heart assures men against feminine wiles?"

"It's the only salvation for a born sentimentalist like Granny."

"Who was the woman? Or didn't you know?"

"Never been sure," Perley admitted—"used to suspect it was the wife of a chap we both knew—it wouldn't be fair to mention her name."

"Of course not. But what woman could be womanly and let it rest at that? What was she like?"

"To tell you the truth, I don't know—never met the lady, and only saw her once, for a mere moment, in a poor light, and——Well! something was going on at the time I was more interested in; I didn't pay much attention to her—wouldn't know her again if I met her face to face."

"I'm sorry."

PERLEY couldn't have been blamed if he had been sensitive to an impression that Mrs. Paramor's tone didn't quite chime with this sentiment; on the other hand, what he said soon after might have been taken as shadowing a disposition to charge her seeming contentment to a definite cause.

"It would be interesting to know more about the sort of woman that Granny could fall in love with," she idly pursued, again shifting her position so that her full face was no longer open to examination. "Say what you will, he never was one to wear his heart on his sleeve."

"Well! I don't know"—Perley ventured a mild impertinence—"since meeting you, I'm not so sure. Now please don't be cross——"

"But why should I? It's a beautiful compliment." Mrs. Paramor was once more intently observing the sea; but now her eyes were grave if her lips still faintly smiled. "I should be glad and proud if I thought Granny was in love with me."

"But you don't?"

"O, most decidedly not! My dear Mr. Rex"—the mirth that brimmed a glance aside to him was well calculated to persuade the man of her sincerity—"whatever put such a nonsensical idea into your head?"

"You admit you've known him a long time," Perley reasoned in a mulish turn. "And Granny never let on to a soul that he knew you!"

"But you see, till quite lately I haven't been anybody in particular to know."

"Can't let you get away with that. Beauty doesn't have to develop a brain for men to find it worth knowing."

"That's very true," Mrs. Paramor assented, her composure proof against even that flattery. "But so is the converse: brains, I mean women's, generally fail to win appreciation unless they grow wise enough to develop physical beauty."

Briefly Mr. Rex pondered this utterarnce with a puckered brow. "Must mean something, or you wouldn't say it," he concluded. "But it sounds like a riddle to me."

At this the woman gave out, in that voice of quiet laughter she so frequently found occasion to use: "It is!"

The closest scrutiny of her profile failed of all profit. "Never was much of a dab at riddles. Won't you be nice and give a poor body a clew?"

"Some day, perhaps . . . I don't know . . ." Mrs. Paramor appeared quite seriously to turn the question over. "I think,

Now I offer you a new delight --an olive oil shampoo

By V. K. CASSADY, B. S., M. S., Chief Chemist

My wife told me she wished someone would invent a shampoo that would not leave hair dry and brittle. She said all women wanted it. And asked me to try my hand—I am chief chemist at Palmolive.

Now I have one—Olive Oil as advised by world authorities on hair beauty.

I should esteem it a favor for you to test it. And then to give me your opinion.

A more gentle way

I found that most shampoos were too harsh; that while they cleaned they took the life and lustre from the hair. Scores of women told me this. And, too, famous specialists of the scalp. So I set out to perfect a thorough cleanser, yet one mild and gentle, which would leave that dainty sheen which adds so to one's charm.

A scientific creation

Thousands of women, many famous beauties, have written me already. They say results are a revelation.

Your hair clean.

The scalp tingling—dandruff-free and healthy.

Yet—gleamingly, gloriously alive, immediately after a shampoo!

I think you will thank me after one trial for offering this to you.

however, I'd prefer to let you puzzle it out for yourself."

"Really think I can?"

"I'm sure you can, sure you'll read the answer like a shot . . . some day."

"'Some day!'" Perley plainly owned that the assurance in her manner perplexed him beyond measure. "That's a happy prospect . . ."

"Yes?" A tremor of amusement more deep than ever touched her voice. "How?"

"I think a chap would have to learn to read you first."

"I fancy he would."

"And that would take time."

"I'm sure I hope so."

"More than a few brief days at sea."

She covered him with a smile mischievous and provocative: "Does that frighten you?"

"Rather not!" Instincts never quite dormant, even the stronger, it may be, because of their two years of rest in desuetude, were now all too evidently at work. "If it means I'm to see more of you in New York," he eagerly said—"I'm resigned to wait a long time to learn the answer to your riddle."

"But since we both know Granny," Mrs. Paramor naïvely speculated, "it's more than likely—isn't it?—we share many other friends. It's hardly conceivable that we will escape running into one another now and then, ashore . . . you and Mrs. Rex and I."

THE sixth noon out from Southampton found the Illyria still battling ill winds and wild seas; but the posting of the day's run enabled ready reckoners to corroborate a rumor already current to the effect that the steamer would anchor for the night off Quarantine and proceed to her dock early the next morning: one of the most tempestuous North Atlantic passages within the memory of her commander had held the Illyria back less than day. A gratulatory spirit forthwith warmed her company, the bleakest countenances took on hints of human coloration, the most lackluster eye lost some measure of its lack; while preparations were presently afoot to encore a farewell dance that had prematurely been held the previous night.

Contrary to the common way with such affairs, the copy proved considerably more popular than its pattern: for this positively final performance, abetted by moderating weather as the vessel drew in under the lee of Long Island, tempted forth from their berths all but the most conscientious bolsters of the sick list. Only the closing of the bar, when the Illyria paused to take on the pilot, acted as a dry blanket to the good spirits of the evening.

It was high time, however, little short of midnight when that calamity was accomplished; and not long after Mr. Perley Rex, morosely ambling forward from leading a forlorn hope to the smoking-room, found what he could hardly have failed to rate round compensation in the discovery that Mrs. Paramor was standing at the rail and, astonishingly, alone.

The sight was one to halt any gallant in his tracks, it was so well worth seeing; for the magic of an unregenerate moon had transmuted metal cloth and white tulle into an enchanted cloak of mist and quicksilver, and the blue vague of the deep, sown with eccentric lights like goggling eyes of goblins, served as a witching background to that bright shape, lending it every semblance of beauty's wraith found fugitively at rest. But Perley had not for many moments been transfixed by that vision of unearthly charm, as if fearful lest word or stir of his frighten it into untimely flight, when the woman, growing conscious of alien attention, looked round, marked its source, and in a contented voice called him to her.

"I don't know why," she said—"I'll never understand why one bit of earth more than another should have the power to catch at one's heart-strings—but it is good to feel that this is home—isn't it? Those lights off there—like confetti from the stars—to think that they belong to ships of my own country makes me want to throw kisses to them."

"Better not," Perley counseled: "your emotions would most likely be misconstrued. Those are the riding-lights of the bootlegging fleet, anchored just outside the three-mile limit."

"O!" she cried in gay chagrin—"I don't think it's fair for one's native land to let one down like this."

"Grousing about being deceived gets you no sympathy in this self-centered world," the man acidly remarked. "If it did I'd be inclined to let out a bitter yowl or two of my own."

She drooped toward him in mocking sympathy. "Poor Mr. Rex! has somebody been taking advantage of your too trustful nature?"

"I was led to believe," he tasked her more in sorrow than in anger—"at least, hearsay had it so before we met—you were the most retiring of women, a sort of human hermit-crab that never left the unsocial shell except to treat some publisher like a dog. Whereas the way you've been mixing with all and sundry on board this water-wagon is a scandal. I had to fight through a mob three-deep tonight to claim my dance, the one stingy waltz I was able to worry out of you."

"Ungrateful . . ." Her feather fan fell across the knuckles of a hand resting on the rail. "I'd assumed of course you'd want to devote most of the evening to your wife."

"But when I told you Jill didn't feel up to showing herself yet——"

"I was so disappointed," the woman smoothly put in. "And I'm not yet quite reconciled to the realization that this voyage has slipped away without my meeting Mrs. Rex—I'd really counted on doing so tonight. But perhaps I shall have better luck in the morning; and at worst it can be deferred only a few days, since you know the Annisons and I'm to stop with them in town. . . . But that aside"—she suavely overrode an offer to interrupt—"you weren't deceived about me, really, gossip for once told the truth. Authoring is a dull trade at best, an author's life is like a mole's—we're hardly to be blamed if we lose our heads when a holiday happens."

"It isn't you who've lost your head this voyage."

As if against his will Perley permitted a trace of true feeling to color the impertinence. Mrs. Paramor nevertheless aired no displeasure, continued to all appearances unimpressed and utterly frivolous of temper.

"Can you be sure?"

Consciousness of having committed a solecism is apt to play hob with one's judgment, inclines one to confirm the crassness of the first error by persistence in it. Perley developed a regard of sulky distrust for the head in question, now teasingly tilted. "I believe in signs," he grumbled, "when they're plain as print. If you'd had a thought for the way I felt—shut out completely as I have been this evening—you'd have given me at least a hint that you might be found up here on deck, alone——"

"Ah! but I'm not alone; I mean, I wasn't—only for a minute. I'd just sent Mr. Pusey to find Dracup and fetch me a wrap—and then you came along."

"Pusey!"

"Don't groan like that—heavens!"

"But," his most tragic tones expostulated, "what can you expect when you openly prefer the society of a mannish milliner to my perfectly normal case of devotion!"

"We had business to discuss," with amazing patience the woman explained. "I'm ordering three gowns from him. Really, you underrate his talent—he's quite wonderful in his way."

"Daresay. Jealousy, just the same, the cheapest and meanest of mortal emotions, will prevent my taking any stock in Pusey Preferred."

"Ah, well!" Mrs. Paramor pensively commented as if disappointed in him, "if you can find it in your heart to be jealous of Mr. Pusey!"

"Well?" Perley struck a note of nervous hope—arms folded on the rail, shoulder almost touching hers, lively eyes exploring that sweetly shadowed face of mystery. "Well? I'm jealous of Pusey right enough—you know jolly well I'm jealous of every soul that gets a minute of your time you might have given me. What then?"

"Why, then"—she discovered to him an exasperating smile, not an unkind one, but a little dim with weariness—"then, I'm afraid, you're not the man you pretend to be at all, but just a little boy playing with edged tools."

"You witch!" he muttered with a thick tongue. And suddenly unfolding his arms, without stirring otherwise, he imprisoned the hand that was idly dangling her fan over the rail. "I'll tell you the kind of man I am, if you care to know—without pretending!"

"O, spare yourself!" her maddening voice of laughter counseled. "As if I didn't know!" She resigned the hand to him as one who held his daring with it something negligible, only a quizzical glance dropped to it as she pursued: "Prenez garde, mon ami! Edged tools sometimes leave dangerous wounds."

"When they do, as a rule they cut both ways," Perley had the confident smile of one to whom all this was a tale twice told. "And if I'm not afraid——?"

"At least," she softly insisted, "remember, I warned you fairly."

"O, adorable!" That cry could never have been wrung from him with a ring of sincerity more persuasive. "O, incredible woman!" And lifting her hand, Perley put ardent lips to it, while Mrs. Paramor, unresisting, gazed down upon his bended head with a smile that was less than half a smile but wholly enigmatic.

Behind them Miss Dracup pronounced the "ahem!" of convention in a fatigued fashion that was equivalent to spelling it letter by letter.

THE bravest efforts of the band availed not to countenet the discouragement bred of the knowledge that the Illyria was now traversing bone dry waters, and when it had not too subtly rubbed it in by rendering a few dismal bars of "There's no place like home," it packed itself off to bed. So, shortly, did Mrs. Paramor, letting herself into the modest suite she shared with Miss Dracup to find this last, already in a state of appropriate dishabille, on her knees in front of her employer's trunk.

"Why, Evelyn!" Mrs. Paramor cheerfully expostulated as the girl turned up face faintly flushed but singularly expressionless otherwise, "what are you doing?"

Miss Dracup made the explanation required in accents as dispassionate as her look: "The stewardess told me just now our trunks will be taken out while we're at breakfast. That's for seven o'clock. So there'll be no time in the morning; and I thought you'd be too tired to do any packing after your busy evening."

"You're a dear," Mrs. Paramor assured her. But the girl, bending again to her task, made no response, and after a moment wasted in watching her, with a whimsically apprehensive gathering of eyebrows, Mrs. Paramor sighed the luxurious sigh of one who for her part has no quarrel with the world, tossed her wrap over the foot of the bed, and began to worry the fastenings of her gown. "You didn't stay up for the last dance, then?" she absently inquired.

Miss Dracup addressed the briefest of negatives to the interior of a shoe box.

"You missed something, a quite delirious waltz. Our nice little Pusey is a wonderful dancer. But so is Perley Rex; you should have insisted on his dancing it with you."

Miss Dracup gave an unmistakable grunt of disdain.

"I'm afraid, Evelyn, you don't like Mr. Rex."

"I do not," Evelyn distinctly pronounced. And immediately, "There," she added, sitting back on her heels, "that's everything, I believe."

"Thank you so much, dear. Is your own packing all finished?"

"Quite." The secretary got up and turned straightway toward the door that opened into her own sleeping quarters. "Good night, Mrs. Paramor."

"O! but wait a minute, Evelyn, please."

Obediently Miss Dracup halted on the threshold. "Yes, Mrs. Paramor?" The tone was civil, no more, no trace of human feeling modified the blank set of her features; Miss Dracup, whether she knew it or not, was giving a good impersonation of a wage slave making herself supple to a tyrant's will while still her soul belonged to God. A feat in histrionism which an indulgent chuckle ill requited. It must have been a bit of an ordeal, too, imperturbably to suffer the gently smiling silence in which Mrs. Paramor held her while stepping out of her gown and shrugging into a robe-de-chambre.

"Evelyn," her employer thoughtfully asked in the end, "am I mistaken, or are you really all out of temper with me?"

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Paramor." The secretary's mouth was firm, her gaze unbending. "It isn't often I forget I'm simply a secretary, not a sister under my skin."

Mrs. Paramor's smile brightened, and quickly crossing to the girl she caught those stubborn shoulders and gave them a slight shake of affectionate impatience. "Don't be stupid, Evelyn. If I've done anything to hurt your feelings, you have no right not to tell me."

The shoulders remained rigid. "I haven't any right to set up as a censor of your conduct, either."

"Very true." Mrs. Paramor resented the obduracy of the shoulders with a small squeeze. "All the same, you do—and without giving me a chance to speak in my own defense. Do you consider that a fair return for friendship, Evelyn? Now, do tell me what's the matter."

"Please, Mrs. Paramor!" By signs that couldn't have escaped the other's eyes, that iron resistance was giving; Mrs. Paramor abruptly turned away and sat down at her dressing table. "I wish you wouldn't ask me——"

"Please, Evelyn! I wish you would answer me."

"O! I don't know . . ." The breakdown was now almost complete. Miss Dracup with subdued passion addressed herself to the eyes reflected by the mirror: "Somehow I couldn't help resenting it when I saw you let that self-complacent waster kiss your hand."

"It mattered to you?" Mrs. Paramor seemed not immoderately intrigued, more concerned with the rite of taking down her hair.

"Only because it was you. We've been so closely associated and so long, and I've learned so to look up to you——"

"O! I hope not."

"You hope not!"

"I'd much rather be loved than revered, my dear. Being looked up to is such a clammy sensation."

Miss Dracup didn't pretend to relish this levity; her face was hardening again. "I mean, I thought you were above that sort of thing."

"You ought to know—I'm sure you do—under certain circumstances no woman alive is 'above that sort of thing.'"

MISS DRACUP gave a sharp start, weakly subsided into the nearest chair, and with a look of pained incredulity probed the face in the mirror. "You can't, you surely don't mean," she demanded, "you're in love with that smirking philanderer?"

"If I were," Mrs. Paramor coolly reflected, "I should probably resent your calling him so many hard names."

"O! I know his sort—with a wife on board, too, and a baby!"

"And if nobody else dared to put such an impertinent question to me I should be very angry. As it is, I'm more inquisitive. What put it into your head to imagine I could have fallen in love with Perley Rex?"

"You let him kiss your hand."

"And this from a young person with a Continental upbringing!"

"At all events," the girl resentfully persisted, "it's more than you ever let Peter Granville do. At least, to my knowledge."

"Ah!" Mrs. Paramor curiously exclaimed —"it's Granny you're considering!"

"Why not?" Miss Dracup retorted with a degree of heat which she was apparently quick to repent; for it was in a more chastened, almost a defensive manner that she proceeded, as one might whom nameless misgivings troubled: "Don't you think he deserves some little consideration?—a man as desperately in love with you as he is! and as honorably! More than you can claim for this Mr. Perley Rex."

"I wonder! . . ." Mrs. Paramor soberly consulted her mirrored counterfeit, as it might have been an oracle from which trustworthy pronouncements were confidently to be expected. "Sometimes, Evelyn, I wonder if ever, when two people fall in love, the question as to whether or not their love is 'honorable' matters much to anybody but the innocent bystanders."

The girl moodily essayed to digest this. "I can't think what you mean by that," she presently announced, "unless it's that the fact that Peter Granville has every right in honor to make love to you doesn't influence you in his favor."

"It doesn't," Mrs. Paramor spiritedly declared—"not a bit! Good heavens! what an idea. I'm much too fond of Granny to care a hang whether any other woman has a claim on him or not."

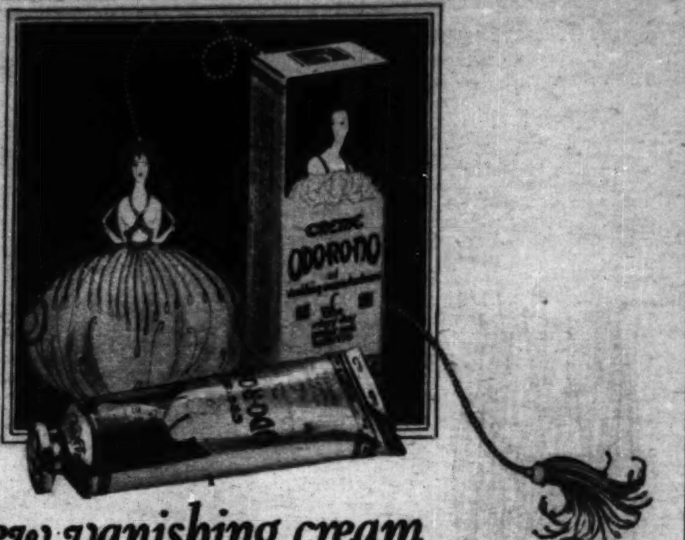
"If you care for him like that"—Miss Dracup pursued her fumbling analysis with a darkening solemnity that began to resemble depression—"you surely must mean to marry him."

"O, no!" the elder woman protested——"never! I'm not dreaming of marrying any man, least of all Granny."

The girl got upon her feet in one hasty movement. "O!" she cried in a voice of a sudden heavy and vibrant—"how can you be so cruel to him?"

Mrs. Paramor had finished undressing her hair. She swung round now with a half smile that was both deprecatory and kind. Miss Dracup's aspect was stormy, with eyes ominously alight, a hot spot on each cheek and a mouth at once stern and tremulous.

"What kind of a woman are you, any



A new vanishing cream deodorant—scientifically correct!

There are two types of perspiration troubles. In one, excessive moisture is the great difficulty. In the other, moisture may be very slight and yet there is the usual unpleasant odor against which everyone must be on guard. Soap and water cannot prevent it.

Especially for this latter class the makers of Odorono have perfected Creme Odorono. This fragrant cream deodorant is correctly compounded on a new scientific principle and is entirely different from any other deodorant.

For perspiration odor Creme Odorono is the perfect every day underarm toilette. Used every morning, it is immediately effective and gives complete all-day protection.

And it vanishes at once from the skin and is non-greasy! You may use it without fear of staining or spotting your clothing. Then, too, it is so soft and smooth; will never harden or dry up.

A wonderful convenience to use every day or for quick special use, as when dressing for an affair where one's personal daintiness must be above reproach; or in traveling. Men like its convenience. And it is economical, too; a tube lasts a month or six weeks with daily use. Try Creme Odorono; you can obtain it at any toilet counter, large tube, 25c.

way? to let Granny eat out his heart while you deliberately encourage a man who isn't fit to wipe his boots——!"

"But, Evelyn!" the other in a broken laugh remonstrated—"what makes you think Perley Rex needed any encouragement from me?"

"I don't know what to think—except that you've gone out of your mind and fallen heels over head in love with him."

"Then what you think isn't true, my dear." Mrs. Paramor rose; in effect, in the gesture that she gave the girl, throwing herself upon Miss Dracup's mercy. "Are you still so young, Evelyn, you don't know we women can be swayed by passions stronger than love and—more dangerous?"

"What do you mean by that?"

The question rang with contemptuous challenge. And for a moment Mrs. Paramor seemed to hesitate, to contend with a temptation; then slowly she shook her head. "I don't believe I shall ever tell you. Or anybody else. Perhaps I don't know myself, but only think I do . . . And indeed, my dear, I don't see what more I can do than beg you to suspend judgment on me for a little; time, I'm sure, will prove to you I know what I'm doing and . . . and that I'm not being cruel to Granny, only kind."

She clipped the girl's face between her hands, lightly kissed her cheeks. "Good night, Evelyn. And please let things rest with that. For really, my dear"—the smile wanly flashed whose charm was so unfailing—"what you call my 'busy evening' has been a bit trying."

THE light in the west was fading fast, the space of cloudless sky that the wide, recessed window of the study framed had worked through one of those symphonic color sequences that lend peculiar and somehow wistful beauty to late autumnal twilights, from tawny orange and pale amber shading swiftly into translucent turquoise green. Now lines of type blurred under poring eyes. Mrs. Paramor absently put a hand to the chain of the lamp on her desk, golden radiance flooded the surface of dark polished wood and the sage-green blotting pad her manuscript littered. As if this had been an awaited signal, the muted clatter of a typewriter suspended while Miss Dracup switched on a standing lamp that hung its emerald shade above her work. The two women exchanged a smile in silence before resuming each her task.

A manservant entered, stationed himself where Mrs. Paramor should have seen him, waited for recognition like a stony image till it seemed tardily to dawn on him that he must either assert himself or be resigned to wait on indefinitely, then made an important noise in his throat, not without a certain condescension adding: "Beg pardon, Mrs. Paramor."

The typewriter gossiped on without a break; but the woman at the writing desk lifted head and pen and, after a brief interval during which it must have been some comfort to observe intelligence rekindle in her eyes, said: "Well, Andrews, what is it?"

"A box just come for you, madam." The box itself rested across his arms, long, narrow, covered with shiny white paper, elaborately bound with violet ribbon. "Would you wish me to leave it here or take it up to your room?"

"Box?" . . . A crinkled forehead owned inability to account for any such phenomenon in the general scheme of things.

"From the florist's, ma'm."

"O!" . . . The brow smoothed itself out, curiosity in the eyes beneath it failed. "Just leave it, thank, you, Andrews."

The box was put down tenderly on the extreme end of the desk, and the man proceeded to the windows. The western sky, now a molten lake of mauve, was shut out by heavy draperies that quite inclosed the wide, deep window seat. Two lesser windows in the southern wall in turn were darkened. Andrews poked up a wood fire that was languishing behind a massive club fender, switched on electric wall sconces, and padded from the room.

The gaze with which the author of "Years of Discretion" covered her secretary was cloudy with surmise. But Miss Dracup for the time being was existing simply and beautifully as a business woman in whose young life a box of flowers for another meant nothing whatsoever. And as Mrs. Paramor bent anew to the typescript which her pen had been intricately cutting up and interlining, Beth Annison came in.

"I suppose you two could murder me for interrupting like this," she amiably volunteered—"your first day's work since you came here to roost—but it's time somebody did. Unless, of course, you're too blessed busy to care about tea."

"The only consideration that won Evelyn's consent to come over with me," Mrs. Paramor seriously reported, "was my promise that nothing—no matter what happened—nothing should be permitted to come between her and her daily dole of tea."

That word of power had already served the typewriter with its quietus. Rising, the secretary set about putting her job to bed. "There's one thing about being a perfect amanuensis," she modestly reflected out loud, "it does get one one's tea."

Desk shears with metallic sibilance made short work of violet ribbons. Beth Annison clasped ecstatic hands over two dozen Hadley roses burning superbly on their bed of fern green lace. "What it is to be an author!"

"Being just a woman good to look at isn't such a sad thing, either."

"Please, Evelyn!" Mrs. Paramor murmured, with a careless air investigating the small envelope that had come with the flowers—"you confuse me." In view of the undissembled interest of her companions it is possible that the timely appearance of Hal Annison was more gratifying to her than she permitted to be evident, enabling her as it did to restore the donor's card to its covering and toss it aside, as something of no consequence.

November winds had nipped Annison's globular cheeks to an innocent pink glow. He came in at a smart pace, which didn't suit his short legs, rubbing his hands together and snapping out a cheery "Hah!" at sight of the reinvigorated fire.

"Good evening, Nell. Evening, Miss Dracup. Well! old dear." He clutched his wife's arm, strained on tiptoe to print a prim salute upon her cheek, then perched himself on the club fender, palms to the blaze. "Raw day," he asserted. "Got chilled to my marrow waiting on that pier for the Mauretania to dock."

"But did you find Granny?" his wife demanded.

"Rather. I was clinging to his coat tails before the old boy was fairly off the gangplank. Gave nobody else a chance to get a word with him before I extracted his promise to show up tonight."

"Did he struggle like a man against yielding to the temptation?" Miss Dracup inquired with a noncommittal countenance.

Annison's look enveloped Mrs. Paramor in a twinkle. "You little know," he cryptically uttered. "Hello! Roses, eh, Nell? Deep red blooded, one hundred per cent he-man roses! My word! but you must have been busy on the voyage over."

Mrs. Paramor's smile was secretive. "Perhaps . . ."

"Why be a fraud, Nell?" Beth Annison teased. "You know perfectly well it was Peter Granville sent them——"

"Hasn't had time to," Annison objected. "Brought him uptown myself and dropped him at the Ancestral not ten minutes ago."

"Anybody can order flowers by wireless nowadays."

"O! if he thought of that, I grant you——"

"In certain states of mind men have been known to be thoughtful."

"Well!" Annison doggedly proposed—"I'll go you a box for any play you say that Granny didn't send those roses. Eh, Nell?"

But Mrs. Paramor, inscrutably smiling, only shook her head. "That would be telling."

"Don't be exasperating," Beth remonstrated. "I want to win that box. It can't hurt you to tell who sent them. Granny? or some new victim en voyage, which?"

Mrs. Paramor may have been about to yield, but changed her mind when Andrews let himself into the study and formally announced: "Mr. Rex."

With great promptitude Annison insisted: "Don't believe it!" Mrs. Paramor smiled more mysteriously than ever. Miss Dracup stolidly busied herself with sheets of copy. Beth Annison looked aghast, exclaiming: "O! but Nelly won't want——"

"Why not?" Mrs. Paramor coolly countered. "We got to be quite good friends on the way over."

Without waiting to be asked Perley Rex strolled in.

"Nice way you keep an old pal kicking his heels in that draughty hall of yours, Beth."

SUMMER VISITORS TO THE CITY

By W. E. HILL

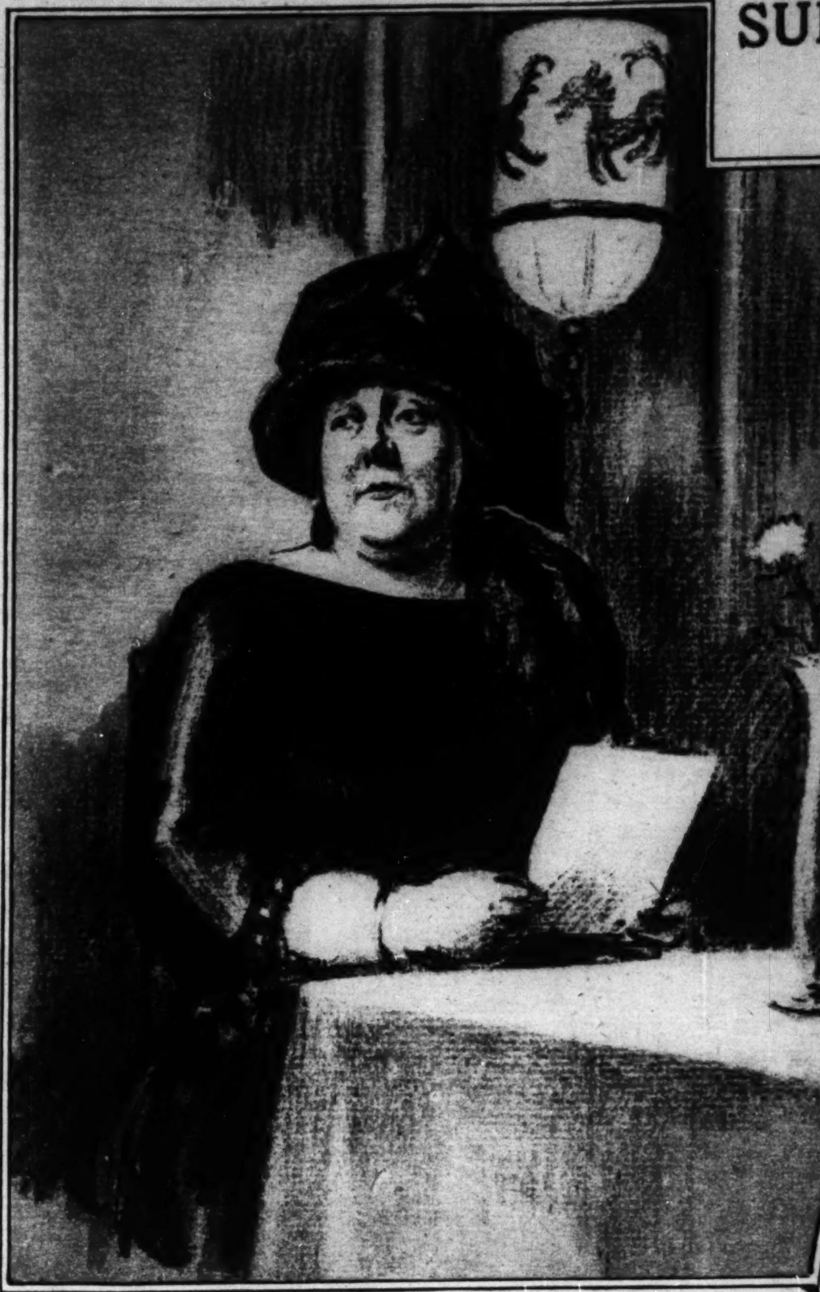
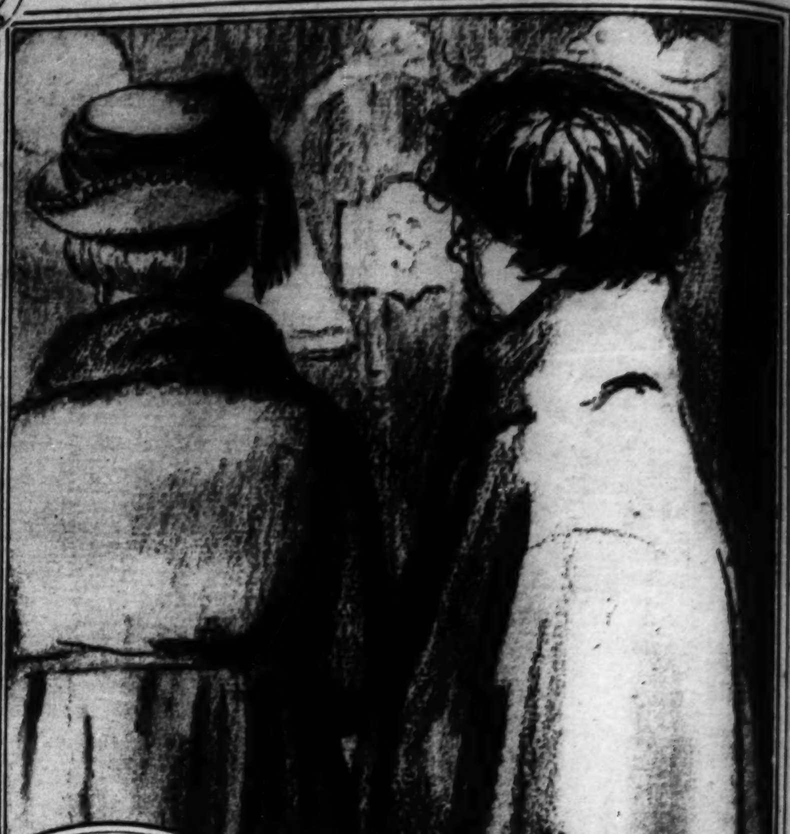
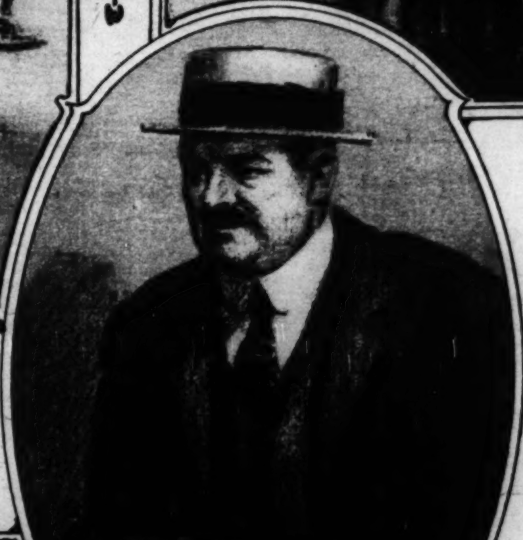
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune]



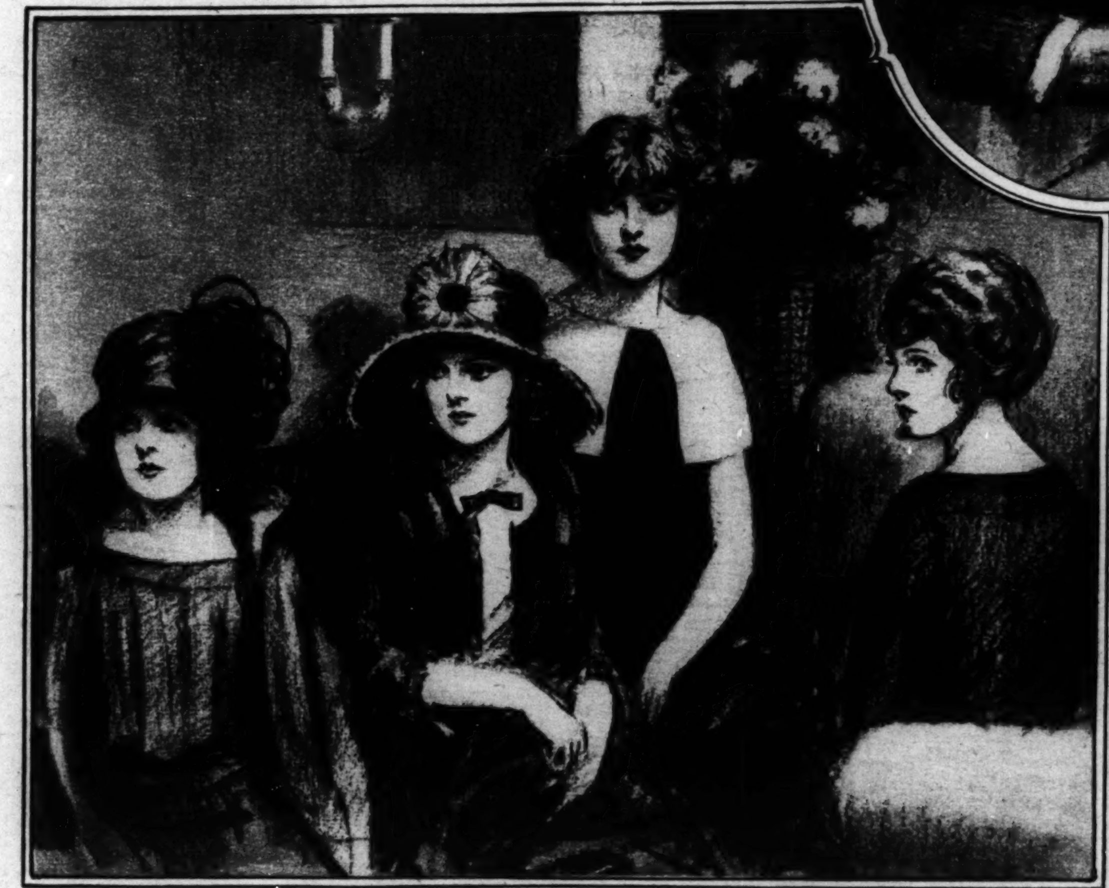
Getting ideas. Mrs. Orville Flood is doing over her house in East Gaget, and is open to suggestion. Here she is in the Dragon Room of the Hotel Wallop, and you'd be surprised the number of cute ideas Mrs. F. is storing away for her breakfast room and bathroom. The Dragon Room is done in old rose, burnt orange, and kitten gray, so you can see what an attractive color scheme Mrs. F. is planning.



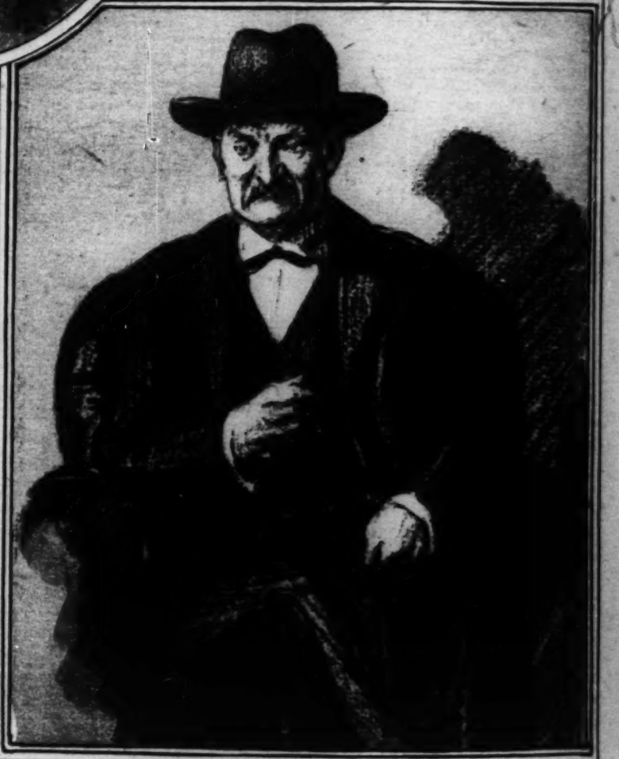
The window shoppers from the provinces. "Now, I ask you, Lottie," Mrs. Morose is saying, "is there a single thing in this window you'd take home with you?" "Not a single thing," answers Mrs. Doctor Corbett, "not if I were PAID to!"



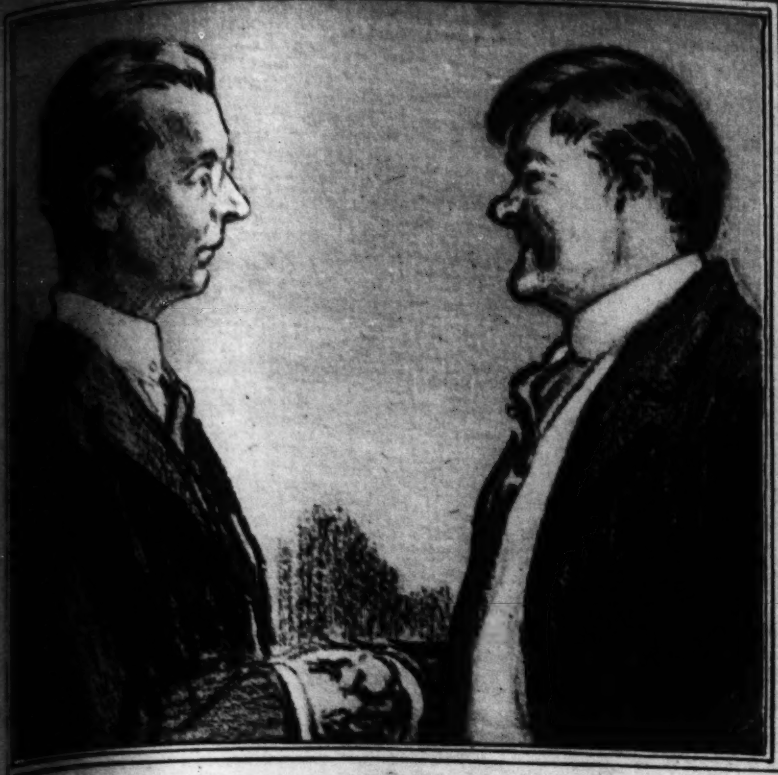
For no good reason at all except that Mr. Welkin is in the big city, where nobody cares, away from the family circle, he feels like being wickedly adventurous. He is taking it out on the girl behind the cigaret counter, who sees at a glance that Mr. Welkin is harmless.



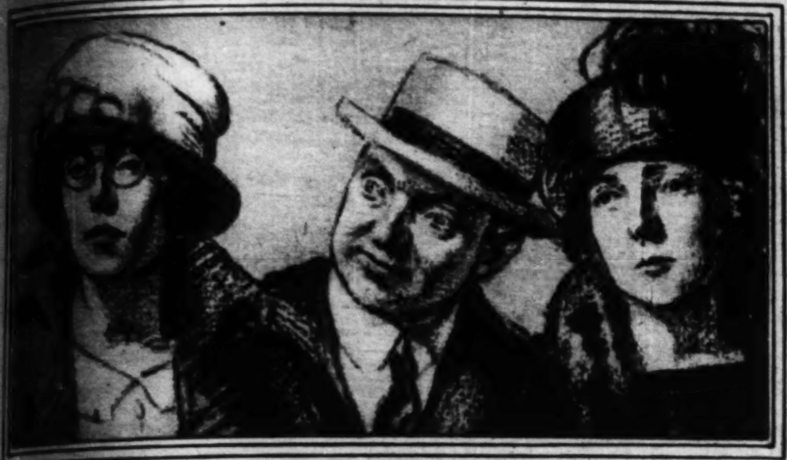
The prize beauties from the small towns. Four out of six prize winners in a newspaper beauty contest are waiting anxiously in the hotel lobby to be interviewed and maybe photographed. A trip to the city was the award for just being beautiful.



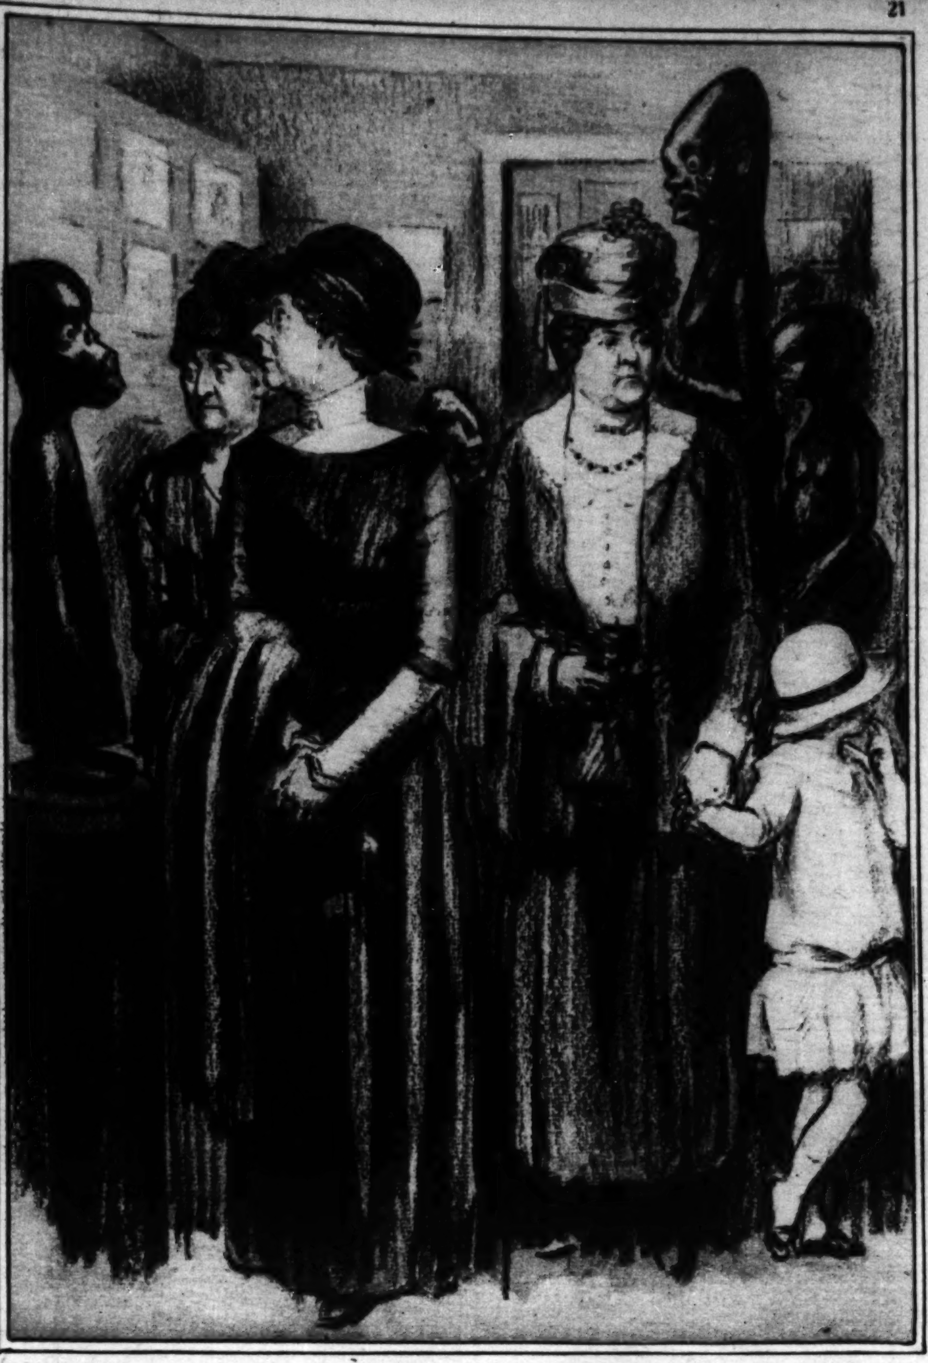
The Colonel from the provinces. Colonel Doublemint has a lot to say about the city as it is and as it was when Grant was president. Those were the days! Nothing like it now.



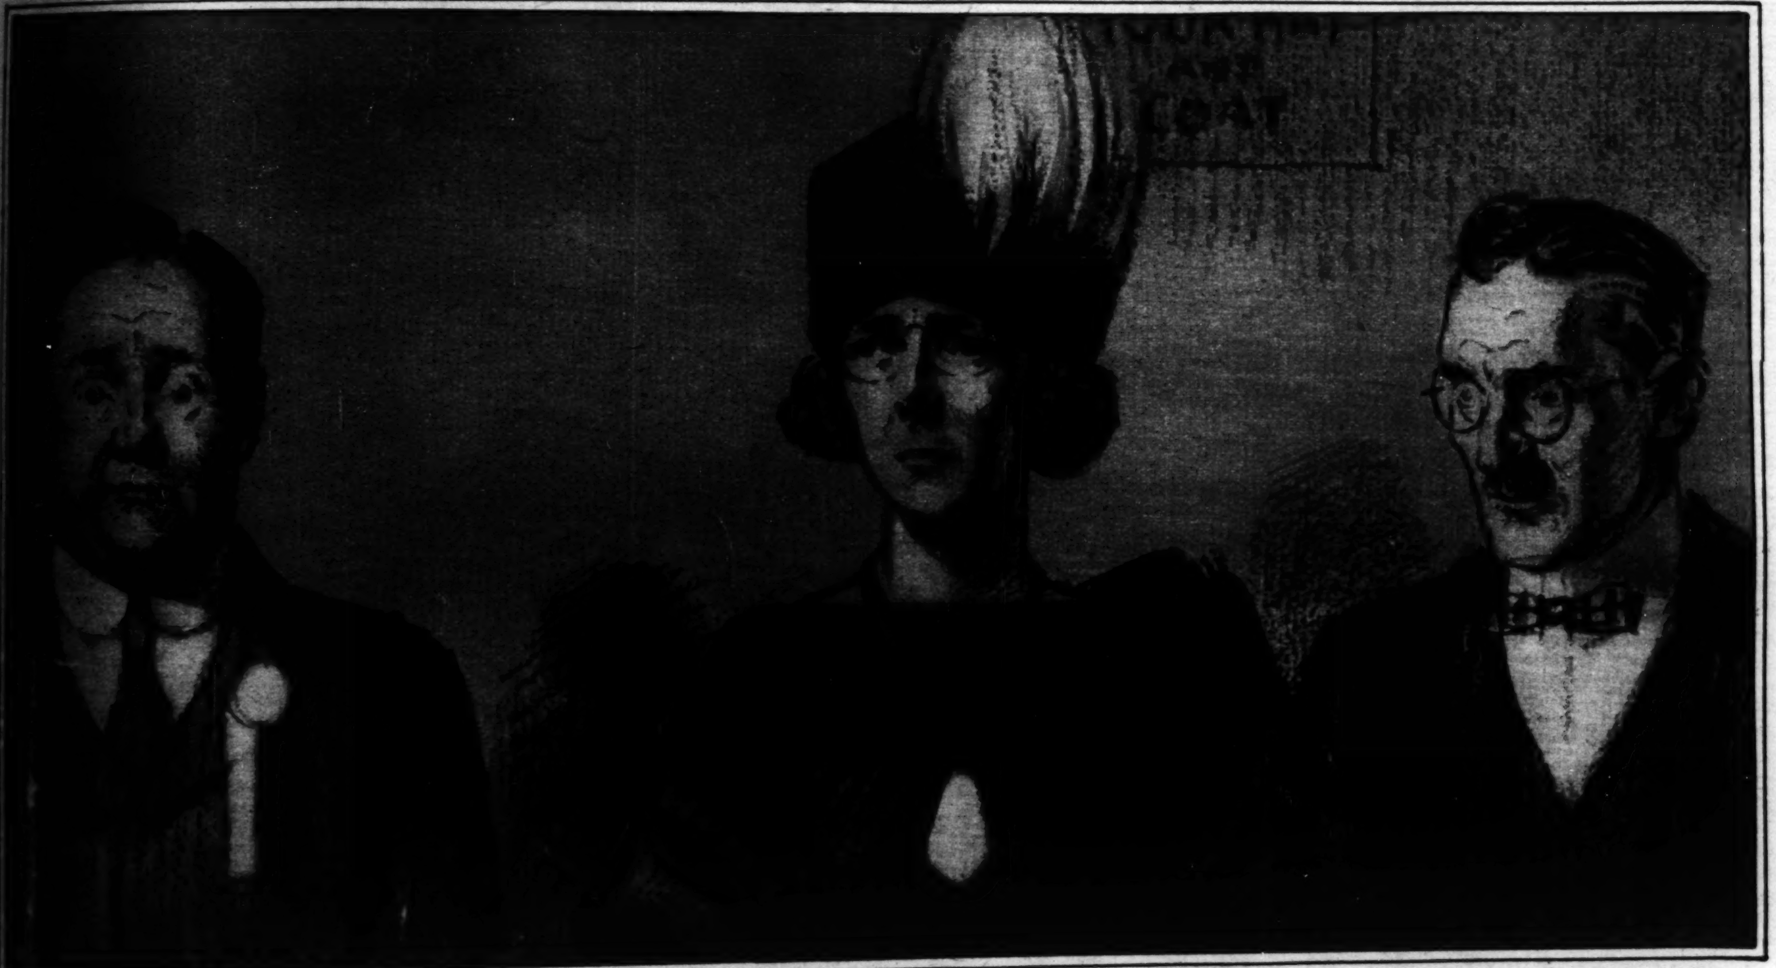
The visiting politician. "I used to be a newspaperman myself" says Senator Wighlie, hurling his personality plus at a defenseless newspaper reporter in the hotel lounge.



Sightseers on a sightseeing bus. The man with the megaphone is explaining that the bas relief of Gen. Clarence Wishbone, erected by his loyal fellow members of something or other, is one of the art masterpieces of the city depicting, as it does, commerce, agriculture and chastity, bearing aloft a wreath of bay, while Orpheus, kneeling, offers a broken lyre to the recumbent general.



Sightseeing the Museum, Little Clara, mamma, Aunt Josie, and grandma have wandered into the African collection. The general verdict is that with so much to see one would have to spend weeks to do the Museum properly. One and all, they have decided to give it up and go shopping.



Beating the hotel prices. Here we have a gentleman on a convention, and a bride and groom—no less. Evenings they are awfully swell, dining with the glass of fashion at the Hotel Palmetto-Ritz, in the diamond room, but 8 a. m. finds them at breakfast around the corner at the quick lunch, keeping down the overhead expense.

When Mirro Quality Shines

Never does Mirro quality shine more brightly than during preserving time. Then aluminum is ideal and Mirro is the ideal aluminum.

Heating with even intensity all over, Mirro speeds evaporation and prevents loss of flavor from too-long cooking. Unaffected by acids, it insures bright jellies and vegetables free from discoloration.

The versatile Mirro Roaster does the cold-pack canning in the most approved manner. The big kettle which has made the soups and tendered the pot roasts proves that Mirro designers knew preserving when they named it a preserving kettle. The Mirro accessories—measuring cup, ladle, funnel—do their work with equal expertness.

Every day in the year Mirro quality is ready to serve you just as well. Mirro has the unmatched durability of pure, thick aluminum, toughened and hardened by rolling under eight tons' pressure. Mirro utensils hold shape, resist scratching and denting, and retain a hard, smooth polish that means easy cleaning.

You will not think beautiful Mirro expensive when you price it and you will know it is economical before you have used it long.

Makers of Everything in Aluminum

Canner and Roaster in One

These features make the Mirro Roaster ideal for the various uses to which roasters are being put by up-to-date housewives.

1 Easily holds six one-quart jars. Ample depth for any roast.
2 Cover fits snugly, retaining steam pressure as demanded in cold-pack canning. This saves fuel, too.
3 Depressed cover condenses steam at center so drippings fall directly on roast.
4 Perforated tray has cut-out corner for gravy basting with spoon.
5 Extra side handle, convenient when roaster is placed in oven sideways.
6 Air vents in side and front.
7 Rounded corners and tightly rolled edges make cleaning easy.

Note: The Mirro cold-pack canning rack fits the Mirro roaster (see main illustration). It is sold separately, not being a regular part of the roaster.

The corn or callous that is touched with two or three drops of "Gets-It" instantly becomes numb and insensible to all pain or soreness. Soon it is a loose bit of dead, dry skin that can be peeled off, root and all, with the fingers. It never fails.

Like your arm—
your intestines grow weak without exercise
—then disease begins

YOU know how the muscles of your arms and legs get soft and flabby without exercise.

Hidden in your body is another set of muscles —more vital to your health, than almost any others—which suffer in exactly the same way.

They are the muscles of the colon or large intestine—nature's provision for removing the body's waste.

Like a set of powerful clamps, these muscles contract in rapid succession and so force the contents of the colon along and out of your system.

It is no exaggeration to say that the weakening of these muscles is the greatest single cause of disease and sickness today.

How modern life weakens them

The reason is simple: we inherited our bodies from ancestors who ate an abundance of the raw foods of the forest. Such foods exercised the intestinal muscles, and gave them real work to do. But modern civilization demands a more delicate, concentrated diet—and as a result, the intestinal muscles grow weak and flabby. That is the basic cause, doctors say, of half the ills which afflict us today. And so the first thing that doctors want to know—no matter what you consult them for—is: Are your intestinal muscles acting regularly to free you of these poisons?

The simple food that is restoring health to thousands

The only way to relieve constipation permanently is by exercising these muscles as nature intended.

Everywhere physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today—not as a medicine, but as a fresh corrective food which gives the intestinal muscles regular, natural exercise.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants, which mix with the waste products in the colon, softening them and increasing the bulk of the waste. This greater bulk gently encourages the muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

Your own physician will heartily endorse this principle of regularly exercising the intestinal muscles as the only way to relieve constipation and all its evils.

Fleischmann's Yeast is in no sense a purgative and does not produce immediate violent action. It must be eaten regularly to secure lasting results.

Eat at least 2 or 3 cakes a day—plain or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal, or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep in a cool, dry place for several days. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.

There is constant danger in an oily skin

If your skin has the habit of continually getting oily and shiny, you cannot begin too soon to correct this condition.

A certain amount of oil in your skin is necessary to keep it smooth, velvety, supple.

But too much oil actually tends to promote an unhealthy condition of your skin.

A skin that is too oily is constantly liable to infection from dust and dirt, and thus encourages the formation of blackheads, and other skin troubles that come from outside infection.

How to correct an oily skin

You can correct an oily skin by using each night the following simple treatment:

FIRST cleanse your skin by washing in your usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and luke-warm water. Wipe off the surplus moisture, but leave the skin slightly damp. Now, with warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

The first time you use this treatment it will leave your skin with a slightly drawn, tight feeling. Do not regard this as a disadvantage—it means that your skin is responding in the right way to a more thorough and stimulating form of cleansing.

After you have used Woodbury's once or twice this drawn feeling will disappear. Within a week or ten days you will notice a marked improvement in the condition of your skin.

Are you using the right treatment for your special type of skin?

The treatment for an oily skin is only one of the famous skin treatments given in the booklet which is wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. Special treatments for each different type of skin are given in this booklet.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today—begin tonight the treatment your skin needs.

No matter what faults there are in your complexion—by the right treatment you can overcome them. Each day your skin is changing—old skin dies and new forms in its place. This new skin you can make what you will!

A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's lasts a month or six weeks for regular toilet use, including any of the special Woodbury treatments. The same qualities that give Woodbury's its beneficial effect on the skin make it ideal for regular use. Woodbury's also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes.

Send 25 cents for these special Woodbury skin preparations

For 25 cents we will send you a complete miniature set of the Woodbury skin preparations, containing:

A trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap
A sample tube of the new Woodbury's Facial Cream
A sample tube of Woodbury's Cold Cream
A sample box of Woodbury's Facial Powder
